& frēde is turned to an enemye? O moſt wicked preſumpcyon: Frō whence art thou ſprōge
vp, to couer the earth wyth falſhede & diſceat?
*Eccle. vi. b. * There is ſome companyon which in Aſke no coūcell at him, that ſuſpecteth the B

for an enemye, and hyde thy councell frō ſoch

ẏ thynges that ſhe longeth for: ner
at a fearfull and faynt herted body, in matters of warre: or at a marchaūt, howe deare
he will cheape thy wares towarde hys: or at a byer, of ſellynge: Or at an enuious man, of thanckeſgeuinge: Or at the vnmercyfull, of louynge kyndnes: (or at an vnhoneſt man, of honeſtye.) Or at the ſlouthfull, of worckynge:
Or at an hyrelynge whych hath no

Take no ſoch folckes to councell, but
be diligēt to ſeke councell at a verteous man
that feareth God, ſoch one as thou knoweſt
to be a keper of the cōmaundementes, which hath a mynde after thyne awne mynde, and is ſory for the when thou ſtombleſt.

And holde thy coūcell faſt in thyne herte: C
for there is no man more faythfull to kepe it:
then thou thy ſelf. For a mās mynde is ſomtyme
more diſpoſed to tell oute, then ſeuen
watchmen that ſyt aboue in an hye place lokynge
about thē. And aboue all thys, praye
the Hyeſt, ẏ he wyll lede thy waye in faythfulnes
and trueth. Before all thy worckes aſke councell fyrſt: and or euer thou doeſt eny thinge, be wel aduiſed. There be foure thynges that declare a chaunged herte, wherout
there ſpryngeth euell and good, death & lyfe,
and a maſterfull tonge that bableth moche.
Some mā is apte and well inſtructe in many thinges, and yet very vnprofytable vnto
him ſelfe. Some man there is, that can geue wyſe and prudent councell, and yet is he hated,
and continueth a begger: for that grace
is not geuē him of God to be accepted. Another is robbed of all wyſdome, yet is he wyſe
vnto hym ſelfe, and the frute of vnderſtandynge
is commendable in hys mouth.

A wyſe man maketh his people wyſe, & ẏ D
frutes of his wyſdome fayle not. A wyſe mā ſhall be plenteouſly bleſſed of God: & all they ẏ ſe hym, ſhall ſpeake good of hym. The lyfe
of man ſtandeth in the nombre of the dayes,
but the dayes of Iſraell are innumerable.

A wyſe man ſhall opteyne faythfulnes and credence amonge hys people, and hys name ſhalbe perpetual. My ſonne, proue thy ſoule in thy lyfe: & yf thou ſe any euel thyng, geue *i.Cor.vi.c. and.x.c. it not vnto her. * For all thynges are not profitable for all mē, nether hath euery ſoule pleaſure in euery thynge. Be not gredy in euery eatyng, and be not to haſtye vpon all *Eccl.,xxx.b meates. * For exceſſe of meates bryngeth ſycknes, & glotony commeth at the laſt to an vnmeaſurable heate. ¶ The.xxxviii. Chapter.

¶ A phyſycyon in ſyckenes ought we to pray, and to fynde a Phyſycyon which healeth by prayer. The bewepynge of the deed. Sadnes, wiſdome. Artificers or crafteſmen.

A HOnour ẏ Phyſiciō: honour him becauſe of neceſſite. God hath created hī (for of ẏ Hieſt cōmeth medycine) & he ſhal receaue giftes of ẏ kyng. The wyſdome of ẏ Phyſiciō bryngeth him to great worſhyp, & in ẏ ſight of the great men of this worlde, he ſhalbe honorably taken. The Lorde hath created medicyne of the earth, and he that is *Exod.xv.d. iii.Reg.iiij.c. wyſe, wyll not abhorre it. * Was not ẏ bytter water made ſwete with a tre? that men myght learne to know ẏ vertue therof. The Lord hath geuen men wyſdome, and vnderſtandynge, ẏ he myghte be honoured in hys wonderous workes. With ſoch doth he heale men, and taketh awaye theyr paynes: Of ſoch doth the Apotecary make a confeccion yet can no man perfourme all hys workes. For of ẏ Lord commeth proſperous wealth ouer all the earth.

B My ſonne, deſpyſe not thys in thy ſyckenes, ‡ii.Pa.xvi.d. Eſa.xxxviii.a but ‡ praye vnto the Lord, and he ſhall make the whole. Leaue of from ſynne, and ordre thy handes a ryght, clenſe thyne herte from all wickednes. Geue a ſwete ſauoured offrynge, and ẏ fyne floure for a token of remembraunce: make the offrynge fat, as one that geueth ẏ fyrſt frutes, and geue rowme to the Phyſycion. For the Lord hath created hym, let him not go from the, for thou haſte nede of hym. The houre maye come, that the ſycke maye be helped thorowe them, when they praye vnto the Lord, that he maye recouer, and get health to lyue longer. He that ſynneth before hys maker, ſhall fall into the handes of the Phyſycion.

C My ſonne, ‡Eccl.xxij.e. ‡ bryng forth thy teares ouer the deed: and begynne to mourne, as yf thou haddeſt ſuffred greate harme thy ſelfe: and then couer his body after a conueniēt maner and deſpyſe not his buryall. Enforce thy ſelf to wepe, and prouoke thy ſelfe to mourne, *i.Teſſ.iiii. * and make lamentacyon expediētly, & that a daye or two, leſte thou be euell ſpoken of: and then conforte thy ſelfe becauſe of ẏ heuynes. * For of heuynes cōmeth death, *Pro.xv.d. and.xvii.d. Eccl.xxx.d the heuynes of the hert breaketh ſtrengthe. Heuynes and pouerte greueth the herte in tentacyon and offence. Take no heuynes to herte, dryue it awaye, and remēbre the laſte thynges. Forget it not, for there is no turnynge agayne. Thou ſhalt do hym no good, but hurte thy ſelfe. Remēbre his iudgemēt, thyne alſo ſhalbe likewyſe: vnto me yeſter daye vnto the to daye. * Let the remembraunce *ij.Re.xii.e. of ẏ deed ceaſſe in his reſte, & cōforte thy ſelfe agayne ouer hym, ſeynge his ſprete is departed from hym. The wyſdome of the ſcribe is at conuenient tyme of reſt: and he ẏ ceaſſeth from exerciſe and laboure, ſhalbe wyſe. He that holdeth the ploughe, and hath pleaſure D in proddyng, & dryuyng the oxen, and goeth aboute with ſoche workes, he can ſpeake of oxen: He ſetteth hys herte to make forowes, & is diligent to geue the kyne fodder. So is euery carpenter alſo & workmaſter, ẏ laboureth ſtyll nyght & daye: he carueth, graueth, cutteth oute, & hys deſyre is in ſondrye connynge thinges, hys hert ymagineth, how he maye conyngly caſt an ymage, hys diligēce alſo & watchinge perfourmeth the worke. The yronſmyth in lyke maner, bydeth by hys ſtithye, & doth hys diligence to laboure the yron. The vapoure of the fyre brenneth his fleſh, & he muſt fyght with the heate of ẏ fornace. The noyſe of the Hammer ſoundeth euer in hys eares, & hys eyes loke ſtyll vpon the thynge that he maketh. He hath ſet hys mynde there vpon, that he wyll make oute hys worke, and therfore he watcheth, howe he maye ſet it out, and bryng it to an ende.

So doth the potter ſyt by hys worke, he E turneth the whele about with his fete, he is diligent and carefull in all doynges, and his laboure and worke is without nombre. He faſhioneth the claye with hys arme, & with hys fete he tempereth it. Hys herte ymagineth howe he maye make it pleaſaunt, & hys diligence is to clenſe the ouen. All theſe hope in their handes, and euery one thynketh to be connynge in hys worke. Without theſe maye not the cytyes be maynteyned, inhabyted nor occupied: & they come not hye in the congregacyon, nether ſyt they vpon the iudgemēt ſeates: they vnderſtande not ẏ couenaunt of the lawe: they cā not declare equyte and iudgemēt: they can not fynde out the darke ſentences, but thorowe them ſhall the creature of the worlde be mayntayned: their prayer concerneth onely the worke and laboure of connynge.

¶ The.xxxix. Chapter.

¶ A wyſe man. The workes of God. Unto the good thynges do profet: but vnto the euell euen good thynges are euell.

A He that applieth his mynde to vnderſtāde the lawe of God, doth dilygently ſeke out the wyſdome of them of the olde tyme, and exercyſeth hym ſelfe in the Prophetes. He kepeth the ſayinges of famous men, & preaſſeth to the vnderſtandyng of dark ſentēces of wyſdome. He ſeketh oute the myſterye of ſecrete ſayinges, & exercyſeth hym ſelfe therin continually. He doth ſeruice amonge great men, & appeareth before yͤ prince. He goeth into a ſtraūge coūtre, & trauayleth thorow it: loke what good or euell is amonge men, he proueth it & ſeketh it out. He purpoſeth in hys herte, to reſorte early vnto the Lord yͭ made hym, and to praye before the Hyeſt God. He openeth hys mouth in prayer, & prayeth for hys ſynnes. When the greate Lorde wyl, he ſhalbe fylled with yͤ ſprete of vnderſtādyng, that he maye then poure out wyſe ſentences & geue thankes vnto the Lord in his prayer.

B He ſhal ordre his deuice, and lede hys knowledge a ryght, and geue hym vnderſtandyng of ſecrete thynges. He ſhall ſhewe forthe the ſcyence of hys lernynge, and reioyce in the couenaunt of the lawe of the Lorde. The whole congregacyon ſhall commende hys wyſdome, and it ſhall neuer be put out. The remembraunce of hym ſhall neuer be forgotten, & hys name ſhall continue from one generacyō to another. * Hys wyſdome ſhalbe ſpoken of, amōge the people, and the whole congregacion ſhall opēly declare his prayſe. Whyle he lyueth, he hath a greater name thē a thouſande beſyde: and after hys death, the ſame name remayneth vnto hym. Yet wyll I ſpeake of mo men of vnderſtandynge, for I am full as the Moone. *Ec.xliiii.b.

C Herken vnto me (ye holy verteous chyldren) bryng forth frute, as the roſe yͭ is planted by the brokes of the felde, and geue ye a ſwete ſmell as Libanus. Floriſh as the roſe garden, ſynge a ſonge of prayſe. O geue thankes vnto God ouer all hys workes. Geue glory and honoure vnto the Lorde, ſhew his prayſe with youre lyppes. Yee, euē with the ſonge of your lyppes, with harpes and playinge, and in geuynge thankes vnto hym, ſaye after thys maner. * All the workes of the Lorde are exceadynge good, and all hys cōmaundementes are mete and conuenient in due ſeaſon. *Gene.i.d.

D A man nede not to ſaye: what is yͭ? what is that? for at tyme conuenient they ſhall all be ſought. At hys cōmaundement the water was as a wall, & at the worde of hys mouth the water ſtode ſtyll. * In hys commaundement is euery thynge acceptable and reconcyled, and hys health can not be mynyſhed. The workes of all fleſh are before hym, and there is nothynge hyd frō hys eyes. He ſeyth from euerlaſtynge to euerlaſtynge, & there is nothynge ſo wonderfull or hye vnto hym. A man nede not to ſaye then, what is thys, or that? For he hath made all thynges to do good vnto man. Hys bleſſynge ſhall renne ouer as the ſtreame, and moyſture the earth lyke a floude of water. Lyke as he maketh the water for drouth, ſo ſhall hys wrath fall vpon the Heathen. *Gene.viii.b.

E ‡ His wayes are playne & ryght vnto the iuſt, but the vngodly ſtomble at them. For the good, are good thinges created from the begynnyng, & euell thynges for yͤ vngodly. * All thynges neceſſary for the lyfe of man are created from yͤ begynnynge: water, fyre yron, & ſalt, meel, wheate, and hony, mylke, & wyne, oyle & clothynge. * All theſe thynges are created for the beſte to the faythfull: But to the vngodly ſhall all theſe thynges be turned to the hurte and harme. There be ſpretes that are created for vengeaunce, & in their rygorouſnes haue they faſtened their tormentes. ‡ In the tyme of the ende they ſhall poure out theyr ſtrength, and pacifye the wrath of hym that made them. * Fyre, hayle, honger & death: all theſe thynges are created for vengeaunce.

F The teeth of wylde noyſome beaſtes, the ſcorpions, ſerpentes, and yͤ ſwerde are created alſo for vengeaunce, to the deſtruccyon of the vngodly. They ſhall be glad to do his commaundementes: and when nede is, they ſhall be ready vpō earth: & when theyr houre is come, they ſhal not ouerpaſſe the commaūdement of the Lorde.

Therfore haue I takē a good corage vnto me from yͤ begynnynge, and thoughte to put theſe thynges in wrytynge, and to leaue them behynde me, * All yͤ workes of yͤ Lord are good, and he geueth euery one in due ſeaſon, & whan nede is, ſo that a man nede not to ſaye: thys is worſe then that. ¶ The .xl. Chapter.

¶ Many myſeries lyght in a mannes lyfe. All thynges paſſe awaye, but a fyrme and ſtable fayth remayneth. Of the bleſſinge of the righteous, and prerogatyue of the feare of God.

A A Great trauayle is created for al men, and an heuy yock vpō all men chyldren, frō the daye that they go oute of theyr mothers wōbe, tyll they be buryed in (yͤ earth) yͤ mother of all thynges: namely, their thoughtes & ymaginacions, feare of yͤ hert, councell, meditacions, longynge and deſyre, the daye of death: from the hyeſt that ſytteth vpon the gloryous ſeate, vnto the loweſt and moſte ſymple vpon the earth: from hym that is gorgyouſly arayed and weareth a crowne, vnto hym that is, but homely &

ſymply clothed. There is nothynge but wrath, zele, fearfulnes, vnquietnes, & feare of death, rygorous, anger and ſtryfe. And in the nyghte when one ſhulde reſte and ſlepe vpon his bed, the ſlepe chaūgeth hys vnderſtandynge and knowledge. A lytle or nothynge is hys reſt, in the ſlepe as well as in the daye of laboure.

He feareth & is dyſqupeted in the vyſyon of hys hert, as one that renneth out of a batayll: and in the tyme of health he awaketh & marueleth that the feare was nothynge. Soche thynges happen vnto all fleſh, both man and beſt: but ſeuen folde to yͤ vngodly. Moreouer, death, bloudſhedding, ſtryfe and ſwerde, oppreſſyon, honger, deſtruccion and punyſhment: *theſe thynges are all created agaynſt yͤ vngodly, & for theyr ſakes came the floude alſo. *All yͭ is of yͤ earth, ſhal turne to earth agayne: & all waters ebbe agayn in to the ſee. All brybes & vnryghteouſnes ſhalbe put awaye, but faythfulnes & trueth ſhal endure for euer The ſubſtaūce & goodes of the vngodly ſhalbe dryed vp and ſyncke awaye as a water floude, & they ſhall make a ſounde lyke a great thonder in the rayne.

Lyke as the ryghteous reioyſeth when he openeth hys hande, ſo ſhall the tranſgreſſours be faynte, when theyr goodes vanyſh and conſume awaye. * The chyldren of the vngodly ſhall not obtayne many braunches and the vncleane rotes vpon the hye rockes ſhalbe roted out before the graſſe by the water ſyde & vpon the ryuer banckes.

Frendlynes and liberalite in the increaſe & bleſſynge of God, is lyke a Paradyſe and garden of pleaſure: ſoch mercy alſo & kyndnes endureth for euer. * To labour & to be content wͭ that a man hath, is a ſwete pleaſaunt lyfe: and that is to fynde a treaſure aboue all treaſures. To beget chyldren and to repayre yͤ cytye, maketh a perpetuall name: but an honeſt woman is more worth thē they both. Wyne and mynſtrelſye reioyſe yͤ herte, but the loue of wyſdome is aboue them both.

D

Pyppynge & harpynge make a ſwete noyſe but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Thyne eye deſyreth fauoure and bewtye, but a grene ſede tyme, rather then they both. A frende and companyon come together at oportunyte, but aboue them both is a wyfe yͭ agreeth with her huſbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes ſhall delyuer more then they both. Golde and ſyluer faſten the fete, but a good councell is more pleaſaunt then they both. Temporall ſubſtaunce and ſtrength lyft vp the mynde: but the feare of the Lord more then they both. The feare of the Lord wanteth nothynge, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of the Lorde is a pleaſaunt garden of bleſſynge, & nothynge ſo bewtyful as it is. My ſonne, lede not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begge. Who ſo loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his awne lyuinge how to vpholde hys lyfe, for he fedeth hym ſelfe wͭ other mens meat. But a wyſe and well nurtoured man wyll beware therof. Beggynge is ſwete in the mouth of the vnſhamefaſt, but in hys bely there burneth a fyre.

O Death, how bytter is the remembraunce of yͤ, to a man that ſeketh reſt and comforte in hys ſubſtaūce and ryches, vnto yͤ man that hath nothyng to vexe him, and that hath proſperyte in all thynges, yee, vnto hym that yet is able to receaue meate? O death, howe acceptable and good is thy iudgemēt vnto the nedefull, and vnto hym whoſe ſtrength fayleth, and that is nowe in hys laſt age, & that in all thynges is full of care and fearfulnes: vnto hym alſo that is in diſpayre, and hath no hope nor pacience? The.xlij.Chapter:

Secretes maye not be opened. The lawe of God muſt be taught. A daughter. A womā, God knoweth all thynges, yee, euen the ſecretes of the herte.

The

*Gene.i.b. *Exo.xii.a.

* The Moone alſo is in all, and at cõuenient ſeaſon it ſheweth ỹ tymes & is a tokẽ of the tyme. * The token of the ſolempne feaſt is taken of ỹ Moone, a lyghte that mynyſheth & increaſeth agayne. The Moneth is called after the Moone, it groweth wonderouſly in her chaungynge.

B The armye of heauen alſo is in ỹ Heygth in the firmamẽt of heauen: it geueth a cleare & gloryous ſhyne. Thys is the clearnes of ỹ ſtarres, the bewtyfull apparel of heauẽ, the apparell that the Lorde lyghteneth in the Heygth. In hys holy worke they contynue in theyr ordre, & not one of them fayleth in hys watch. *Gene.ix.d. * Loke vpon the raynebowe, and prayſe hym that made it: very bewtyfull is it in hys ſhyne. He compaſeth the heauen about wyth hys clearnes and glory, the handes of the Hieſt haue bended it. Thorow hys commaundement he maketh the ſnowe to fall, and the thonder of hys iudgement to ſmyte haſtly. Thorow hys commaundemẽt the treaſures are opened, and the cloudes fle as the foules. In hys power hath he ſtrengthened the cloudes, and broken the hayle ſtones.

C The mountaynes melt at ỹ ſyght of hym the wynde bloweth accordyng to hys wyll. The ſounde of hys thonder beateth ỹ earth, and ſo doth ỹ ſtorme of the north: the whyrle wynde alſo lyghteth downe as a fethered foule, caſteth oute and ſpredeth the ſnowe abrode: and as ỹ greſhoppers that deſtroye all, ſo falleth it downe. The eye marueleth at the bewtye of the whyteneſſe therof, and the herte is afrayed at the rayne of it. He poureth out the froſt vpon earth, lyke ſalt, and when it is froſen, it is as ſharpe as the pryck of a thyſtle.

When the colde Northwynde bloweth, harde Chryſtall commeth of the water. He lyghteth downe vpon all the gatherynges together of water, & putteth on the waters as a breſt plate. He deuoureth ỹ mountaynes, and burneth the wyldernesses: and loke what is grene, he putteth it out lyke fyre. The medycyne of all theſe is, when a cloude commeth haſtely: and when a dewe cõmeth vpon the heate, it ſhalbe refreſhed agayne.

In hys worde he ſtylleth the wynde: In hys councell he ſetteth the depe, & (the Lord) Jeſus planted it. They that ſayle ouer the ſee, tell of the parels and harmes therof, and when we heare it wyth oure eares, we maruell thera[illegible] For there be ſtraũge wonderous workes, dyuerſe maner of nyce beaſtes and whalfyſhes. Thorowe hym are all thynges ſet in good ordre and perfourmed, and in hys worde all thynges endure.

D I ſpeake moch, but I can not ſufficiently attayne vnto it, for he hym ſelfe onely is the perfeccyon of all wordes. We ſhulde prayſe the Lord after all our power, for he is great in all hys workes. The Lord is to be feared, yee, very greate is he, * and maruelous is hys power. *Pſa.cxvi.a. Prayſe the Lorde, and magnyfye hym as moch as ye maye, yet doth he farre exceade all prayſe. * O magnyfye hym *Pſal.cvi.a. with all your power, and labour earneſtly, yet are ye in no wyſe able ſufficiẽtly to prayſe hym. Who hath ſene hym, that he myghte tell vs? * Who can magnyfye hym ſo greatly as he is? *Deut.v.c. Joha.i.b. For there are hyd yet greater thynges then theſe be: as for vs, we haue ſene but fewe of hys workes. For the Lorde hath made all thinges, and geuen wyſdome to ſoch as feare God.

The.xliiij. Chapter.

The prayſe of certen holy men, Henoch, Noe, Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob.

LEt vs cõmende the noble famous A men, and the generacyon of oure fore elders and fathers. Many more gloryous actes hath the Lorde done, and ſhewed his great power euer ſens the begynnynge. The noble famous men raygned in theyr kyngdomes, and bare excellent rule. In theyr wyſdome & vnderſtandyng, they folowed ỹ councell ſhewed in the prophetes. * They led the folke thorowe the *Exo.xviii.c councell and wyſdome of ỹ Scrybes of the people. Wyſe ſentences are founde in theyr inſtruccyon. They ſought the ſwetenes and melody of muſycke, and broughte forth the pleaſaunt ſonges in ſcripture. They were ryche alſo, and coulde comforte and pacifye thoſe that dwelt with them. All theſe were very noble and honorable men in theyr generacyons, and were well reported of in theyr tymes. Theſe haue lefte a name behynde them, ſo that theyr prayſe ſhall alwaye be ſpokẽ of. Afterward, there were ſome, whoſe remembraunce is gone. * They came to *Gen.vii.d. naught & peryſhed, as thoughe they had neuer bene: & became as though they had neuer bene borne, yee, and theyr chyldrẽ alſo with them.

B Neuertheles, theſe are louyng men, whoſe ryghteouſneſſe ſhall neuer be forgotten, but contynue by theyr poſteryte. Theyr chyldren are an holy good heritage: Theyr ſede endured faſt in the couenaunt. For theyr ſakes ſhall theyr chyldren & ſede contynue for euer, & theyr prayſe ſhal neuer be put down. Theyr bodyes are buried in peace, but theyr name lyueth for euermore. The people can ſpeake of theyr wyſdome, & the congregacyon can talke of theyr prayſe. * Enoch *Eccle.xli.c. Gene.v.c. walked ryght & acceptably before ỹ Lorde: therfore was he tranſlated for an example of amendement to the generacions. * Noe *Gene.vi.a. and.vii.viij. was a ſtedfaſt & ryghteous man, and in the tyme of wrath he became a reconcylynge.

A Manlye and ſtronge in battayll
*Joſ.xii.c. Nu.xxvii.d. Deu.xxxiiii.b Joſue.i.a. *was Jeſus the ſonne of Naue, which in ſtede of Moſes the

B *Nu.xiiii.a. * In the tyme of Moſes alſo, he & Caleb

The prayſe of Nathan, Dauid, and Salomon.

Afterwarde in ẏ tyme of kyng Dauid, A *ii.Re.xii.a.

brought he hym to worſhyppe aboue all princes,
and made hym to haue a good reporte
in the prayſe of the Lorde, that he ſhuld were

iiii.

Symon * the ſonne of Onias the hye preſte, whyche in hys lyfe ſette vp the houſe agayne, and in hys dayes made faſte yͤ temple. The heygth of the temple alſo was founded of hym, the double buyldynge, and the hye walles of the temple. In hys dayes the welles of water flowed out, and were exceadynge full as the ſee. He toke care for hys people, and delyuered them from deſtruccion He kept hys cytie and made it ſtronge, that it ſhulde not be beſeged. He dwelt in honour and worſhyppe amonge hys people, and enlarged the entraũce of the houſe, and yͤ court. He gaue lyght as the mornynge ſtarre in the myddeſt of the cloudes, & as the moone whã it is ful. He ſhyned as the ſunne in the temple of God. He is as bryght as the rayne bowe in the fayre cloudes, and floryſheth as yͤ floures and roſes in the ſprynge of the yeare, and as lylies by the ryuers of water: Lyke as the braunches vpon the mounte Libanus in the tyme of Sommer: as a fyre and incenſe that is kyndled. Lyke as an whole ornamẽt of pure golde, ſet wyth all maner of precious ſtones, & as an Oliue tree that is frutefull, & as a Cypres tree which groweth vp an hye.

When he put on a garment of honoure, and was clothed wyth all bewtye: when he wente to the holy aulter, to garnyſh the coueryng of the Sanctuary: whan he toke yͤ porcions out of the Preſtes hande, he hym ſelfe ſtode by the herth of the aulter, and hys brethren rounde about in ordre. As the braunches of Cedre tree vpon the moũt Lybanus, ſo ſtode they rounde aboute hym. And as the braunches of the Olyue tree, ſo ſtode all the ſonnes of Aaron in the glorye, and the oblacions of the Lorde in theyr handes before all the congregacion of Iſraell. And that he myght ſufficiently perfourme hys ſeruyce vpon the aulter, and garnyſh the offrynge of the hyeſt God, he ſtretched out hys hande, & toke of the drynkeofferynge, and powred in of the wyne: ſo he powred vpon the botome of yͤ aulter a good ſmel vnto the hyeſt prince.

Than beganne the ſonnes of Aaron to ſynge, and to blowe wyth trompettes, & to make a great noyſe, for a remembraũce and prayſe vnto the Lorde. Thẽ were al the people afrayed, and fel downe to the earth vpon theyr faces to worſhip the Lorde theyr God, and to geue thankes to the almyghty God. They ſonge goodly alſo with theyr voyces, ſo yͭ there was a pleaſaũt noyſe in the greate houſe of the Lorde. And the people in theyr prayer beſought the Lorde the hyeſt, that he wolde be mercyful, tyl yͤ honoure of yͤ Lorde

were perfourmed, thus ended they theyr myniſtracion and ſeruice. Then went he downe and ſtretched out his handes ouer the whole multitude of the people of Iſraell, that they ſhulde geue prayſe and thankes out of theyr lyppes vnto the Lorde, and to reioyſe in his name. He began yet once alſo to praye, that he myght openly ſhewe the thankeſgeuyng before ỹ hyeſt, namely thus: O geue prayſe and thākes (ye all) unto the Lord our God, which hath euer done noble and great thynges: whych hath increaſed oure dayes from our mothers wombe, and dealt wyth us accordynge to his mercy: that he wyll geue us the ioyfulnes of hert, and peace for oure tyme in Iſraell. Which faythfully kepeth his mercy for us euermore, and alwaye delyuereth us in due ſeaſon.

D There be two maner of people that I abhorre fro my hert: as for the thirde, whom I hate, it is no people. They that ſyt upon the mountayne of Samaria, the Phylyſtynes, and the foolyſh people that dwell in Sichimis.

I Jeſus the ſonne of Syrach Eleazarus of Jeruſalem, haue tokened up theſe informacyons and documentes of wyſdome and underſtādyng in thys boke, and poured out the wyſdome of my herte. Bleſſed is he that excercyſeth hym ſelfe therin: and who ſo taketh ſoch to hert, ſhalbe wyſe for euer. Yf he do theſe thynges, he ſhalbe ſtrōge in all. For the lyght of the Lorde ledeth hym.

¶ The .li. Chapter.

¶ The prayer of Jeſus the ſonne of Syrach.

A I Wyll thanke the, O Lorde ād kyng, and prayſe the, O God my ſauyoure. I wyll yelde prayſe unto thy name: for thou art my defender ād helper, ād haſt preſerued my body from deſtruccyō, from ỹ ſnare of traytorous tōges, and frō the lyppes that are occupyed wyth lyes. Thou haſt ben my helper, frō ſuch as ſtode up agaynſt me, and haſt delyuered me after the multytude of thy mercye, and for thy holy names ſake. Thou haſt delyuered me from the roarynge of them that prepared them ſelues to deuoure me, oute of the handes of ſuche as ſought after my lyfe: from the multitude of them that troubled me, and wente aboute to ſet fyre upon me on euery ſyde, ſo that I am not brent in the myddes of the fyre: From the depe of hel, from an uncleane tonge, from lyenge wordes, from the wycked kynge, & frō an unrighteous tonge. My ſoule ſhal praiſe the Lorde unto death, for my lyfe drewe nye unto hell downewarde.

B They cōpaſſed me rounde aboute on euery ſyde, and there was no man to helpe me. I loked about me, yf there were any mā that wolde ſocoure me: but there was none. Then thought I upon thy mercye, O Lorde, and upon thy actes that thou haſte done euer of olde: namely, that thou deliuereſt ſuch as put theyr truſt in the, and ryddeſt thē out of the handes of the Heathen. Thus lyfte I up my prayer from the earth, and prayed for delyuerāūce frō death. I called upon the Lorde ỹ father of my Lord ỹ he wold not leue me wͭout helpe, in the day of my trouble & in the tyme of the proude: I wyll prayſe thy name continually, yeldynge honoure and thankes unto it: and ſo my prayer was herde. Thou ſauedeſt me from deſtruccion, and delyueredeſt me from the unryghteous tyme. Therfore, wyll I aknowlege and prayſe the, and magnifye the name of the Lorde.

C Whan I was yet but yonge, or euer I wente aſtraye, I deſyred wyſdome openly in my prayer. I came therfore before the tēple, and ſought her unto the laſt. Then floryſhed ſhe unto me, as a grape that is ſoone rype. My herte reioyſed in her, then went my fote the ryght waye, yee, frō youth up, ſoughte I after her. I bowed downe myne eare and receaued her. I founde me much wyſdome: and proſpered greatly in her. Therfore wyll I aſcribe the glory unto hym, that geueth me wyſedome: for I am aduyſed to do therafter. I wyll be gelous to cleaue unto the thynge ỹ is good, ſo ſhall I not be confounded. My ſoule hath wreſtled wyth her, & I haue bene diligēt to be occupied in her. I lyfte up myne handes an hye, then was my ſoule lyghtened thorow wyſdome, that I knowleged my folyſhnes. I ordred my ſoule after her, ſhe and I were one harte from the begynnynge and I founde her in clenneſſe. And therfore ſhall I not be forſaken.

D My harte longed after her, and I gat a good treaſure. Thorowe her the Lorde hath geuen me a newe tonge, wherwyth I wyll prayſe hym. * O come unto me ye unlerned, and dwell in the houſe of wyſedome: wythdraw not your ſelues from her, but talke and comen of theſe thynges, for youre ſoules are very thyrſty. I opened my mouth, and ſpake O come and bye wyſdome wythout money, bowe downe your neck under her yoke, and youre ſoule ſhall receaue wyſedome. She is harde at hande and is content to be founde. Behold, with your eyes, * how that I haue had but lytle laboure, and yet haue founde muche reaſt. O receaue wyſedome, & ye ſhall haue plēteouſnes of ſyluer and golde in poſſeſſion. Let youre mynde reioyſe in hys mercy, and be not aſhamed of hys prayſe. Worke hys worke by tymes, and he ſhall geue you your rewarde in due ſeaſon.

¶ The ende of the booke of Jeſus the

¶ The fyrſt Chapter.

¶ Baruch wrote a boke, durynge the captiuitie of Babilon whych he red before Jeconiah and all the people. The Jewes ſent the booke with money, vnto Jeruſalē. to theyr other brethren: to thintent that they ſhuld pray for them.

A And theſe are the wordes of the boke, whyche were wrytten by Baruch the ſonne of Nerias, the ſonne of Maaſias, the ſonne of Sedechias, the ſonne of Sedeias, the ſonne of Helchias, at Babilon in the fyfth yeare, and in the ſeuenth daye of the moneth, what tyme as the Caldees toke Jeruſalem, and brent it vp wyth fyre:

And Baruch dyd read the wordes of this booke, that Jechoniah the ſonne of Joachin kynge of Juda myghte heare: and in the preſence of all yͤ people, that were come to heare the boke: yee, and before all the noble kynges ſonnes, before the lordes of the councell and elders: and before the whole people, frõ the loweſt vnto yͤ hyeſt: before all them that dwelt at Babilon, by the water of Sody. Whyche whan they herde it, wept, faſted, and prayed before the Lorde.

B They made a colleccion alſo of money, accordynge to euery mans power, and ſent it to Jeruſalē vnto Joachin the ſonne of Helchia, the ſonne of Salon preſte, wyth yͤ other preſtes: and to all the people whych were wͭ him at Jeruſalem, what tyme as they had gotten the ornamentes of the temple of the Lorde (that were taken awaye out of yͤ temple) that they myght brynge them agayne in to the lãde of Juda, the tenth day of the moneth Siban: namely, ſyluer veſſels (whyche Sedechiah yͤ ſonne of Joſiah kynge of Juda had made) after yͤ Nabuchodonoſor kynge of Babylon had taken Jechoniah, wyth all hys princes, lordes, and al the people, and led them captiue from Jeruſalem vnto Babilõ.

C And they ſayd: Behold, we haue ſent you mony, *to bye you burntoffringes and incẽs withall: make you vnleuened bread, and offre for ſynne vpon the aulter of the Lord our God. †And praye for the proſperite of Nabuchodonoſor kynge of Babylon, and for yͤ welfare of Balthaſar his ſonne: that their dayes maye be vpon earthe, as the dayes of heauen: that God alſo may gyue vs ſtrength and lighten our eyes, that we may lyue vnder the defence of Nabuchodonoſor kynge of Babylon, and vnder the protection of Balthaſar his ſonne: that we may longe do them ſeruice, and fynde fauour in their ſyght.

Praye for vs alſo vnto the Lorde our God, for we haue ſynned againſt the Lorde oure God, and vnto this daye is not his wrathe turned yet away frõ vs. And ſe that ye read this boke (whiche we haue ſent vnto you to be reherſed in the temple of the Lorde) vpon the hye dayes, and at tyme conuenient.

D Thus ſhal ye ſaye: ‡The Lorde our God is ryghteous, but we are worthy of confuſion and ſhame: lyke as it is come to paſſe thys daye, vnto all Juda, and to euery one yͭ dwelleth at Jeruſalē; to our kynges, preſtes, prophetes and our fathers. The.v.Chapter.

Jeruſalem is moued vnto gladnes for the retourne of her people, and vnder the fygure therof, the church.

O Jeruſalē, loke aboute the toward the Eaſt, and behold the ioye that cōmeth vnto the from God. For lo, thy ſonnes (whō thou haſt forſakē, & that were ſcatred abrode) come gathered together, from the eaſt & weſt reioyſynge in the worde of the holy one, vnto the honoure of God. A

Put of thy mournynge clothes (O Jeruſalem) and thy ſorowe, and decke the wyth the worſhyppe and honoure, that commeth vnto the from God, wyth euerlaſtynge glory. God ſhall put the garment of ryghteouſneſſe vpon the, and ſette a crowne of euerlaſtynge worſhyp vpon thyne heade: for vpon the wyll God declare hys bryghtneſſe, that is vnder the heauen. Yee, an euerlaſtynge name ſhall be gyuen the of God, wyth peace of ryghteouſneſſe, and the honoure of Goddes feare.

B Aryſe, O Jeruſalem, ſtande vp on hye: loke about the towarde the eaſt, and beholde thy chyldren gathered from the Eaſt, vnto the weſte, whyche reioyce in the holy worde, hauynge God in remembraunce. They departed from the on fote, and were led awaye of theyr enemyes: but nowe ſhall the Lorde brynge them caryed wyth honoure, as chyldren of the kyngdome. For God is purpoſed to brynge downe all ſtoute moūtaynes, yee, and all hye rockes, to fyll the valleys, and ſo to make them euen wyth the grounde: that Iſrael maye be diligent to lyue vnto the honoure of God. The woddes and all pleaſaunt trees ſhall ouerſhadowe Iſrael, at the commaundement of God. For hyther ſhall God brynge Iſrael with ioyfull myrth, and in the lyghte of hys maieſtye: wyth the mercy and ryghteouſnes, that commeth of hym ſelfe.

¶ The. vj. Chapter.

¶ A coppye of the [illegible]iſtle that Ieremye ſent vnto the Iewes, whych were led awaye preſonners by the kynge of Babylon: wherin he certifyeth them of the thynge, that was commaunded hym of God.

A *Ie. xxv. a, b BEcauſe of the ſynnes that ye haue done agaynſt God, ye ſhall be * led awaye captiue vnto Babilon, euen of Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon. So whan ye be come into Babylon, ye ſhall remayne there many yeares, & for a longe ſeaſon: namely ſeuen generaciōs: and after that wyll I brynge you away peaceably from thence. Nowe ſhall ye ſe in Babylon, goddes of golde, of ſyluer, of wod and of ſtone, borne vpon mens ſhoulders, to caſt out a fearfulneſſe before the Heathen. But loke that ye do not as the other: be not ye afrayed, and let not the feare of them ouercome you.

B Therfore, whan ye ſe the multitude of people worſhippynge them behynde and before, ſaye ye in your hertes: O Lorde, * it is thou that oughteſt only to be worſhipped. *Deu. vi. c Myne Aungell alſo ſhalbe wyth you, and I my ſelfe wyl care for your ſoules. As for the tymber of thoſe goddes, the carpenter hath polyſhed them: yee, gylted be they, and layed ouer wyth ſyluer, yet are they but vayne thynges, & can not ſpeake. Lyke as a wench that loueth peramours is trymly decte, euen ſo are theſe made and hanged wyth golde. Crownes of gold verely haue theyr goddes vpon theyr heades: ſo the preſtes them ſelues take golde and ſyluer from them: and put it to theyr owne vſes: yee, they gyue of yͤ ſame vnto harlottes, and trymme theyr whores wythall: agayne, they take it from the whores, and decke theyr goddes therwyth. * Yet can not theſe goddes delyuer thē ſelues from ruſt and mothes. *Iere. x. a. When they haue couered them wyth clothynge of purple, they wype theyr faces for the duſt of the temple, wherof there is much amonge them. One hath a ſcepter in hys hande, as though he were iudge of the countre: yet can he not ſlaye ſuche as offende hym. Another hath a ſwearde or an axe in hys hande, for all that is he neyther able to defende hym ſelfe from batayl, nor frō murtherers.

By thys ye maye vnderſtande, that they C be no goddes: therfore ſe that ye nether worſhyppe them, nor feare them. For lyke as a veſſell that a man vſeth, is nothynge worth whan it is broken, euen ſo is it wyth theyr goddes. Whan they be ſet vp in the temple, theyr eyes be full of duſt, thorowe the fete of thoſe that come in. And lyke as the dores are ſhut in roūde aboute vpon hym that hath offended the kynge. Or as it were a dead body kept beſyde the graue. Euen ſo the preſtes kepe the dores wyth barres and lockes, leſt theyr goddes be ſpoyled with robbers. They ſet vp candels before them (yee, verely & that many) wherof they can not ſe one but euē as blockes, ſo ſtande they in the temple. It is ſayd, that the ſerpentes and wormes, whych come of the earth, gnawe out theyr hartes, eatynge them and theyr clothes alſo, and yet they fele it not. Theyr faces are blacke thorow the ſmoke yͭ is in the temple. The oules, ſwalowes, and byrdes fle vpon them, yee, & the cattes runne ouer theyr heades.

By this ye may be ſure, that they are not D goddes, therfore feare them not. The golde that they haue, is to make them bewtyfull: for all that, except ſome body dyght of theyr ruſt, they wyl gyue no ſhyne: and whan they were caſt into a fourme, they felte it not. They are bought for money & haue no breth of lyfe wythin them. * They muſt be borne *Sap. xiij. c vpon mens ſhoulders, as thoſe that haue no fete: whereby they declare vnto men, that they be nothynge worth. * Confounded be *pſa. cxiiii. a they then that worſhip them, for yf they fall to the grounde, they can not ryſe vp agayne of them ſelues. Yee, though one helpe them vp and ſet them ryght, yet are they not able to ſtāde alone: but muſt haue proppes ſet vnder them lyke deade men. As for the thynge that is offred vnto them, theyr preſtes ſel it, and abuſe it: yee, the preſtes wyues take therof, but vnto the ſycke and poore they gyue nothynge of it, the wemen wyth chylde and the menſtruous laye handes of theyr offrynges: By thys ye maye be ſure, that they are no goddes, therfore be not ye afrayd of them From whence commeth it then, that they be called goddes? The wemen ſyt before the goddes of ſyluer, golde and wodde, and the preſtes ſyt in theyr temples, hauynge open clothes, whoſe heades and beerdes are ſhauē and haue nothynge vpon theyr heades: roarynge and cryeng vpon theyr goddes, as mē do at the feaſt whan one is deed.

The preſtes alſo take awaye the garmentes of the ymages, and decke theyr wyues & E chyldren wythal. Whether it be good or euell that any mā do vnto them, they are not able to recompenſe it: they can neyther ſette vp a kynge nor put hym downe. In lyke maner they may nether gyue ryches, nor rewarde euel. * Though a mā make a vow vnto thē *Eccle. v. a. and kepe it not, they wyll not requyre it. They can ſaue no man from death, neyther delyuer the weake from the myghtye. They can not reſtore a blynde mā to hys ſyght, nor helpe any man at hys nede. They can ſhewe no mercy to yͤ wyddowe, nor do good to the fatherleſſe. Theyr goddes of wodde, ſtone, golde, and ſyluer, are but euen as other ſtones, that be hewen of the mountayne. They

that worſhip them, ſhalbe confounded:
Howe ſhulde they than be takẽ for goddes?
Yee, howe dare men call them goddes? And thoughe the Caldees worſhipped them not,
hearynge that they were but dõme & coulde
not ſpeake. Yet they them ſelues offre vnto Bell, and wolde fayne haue hym to ſpeake:
as who ſaye, they coulde fele, that maye not moue. But when theſe men come to vnderſtanding, they ſhall forſake thẽ, for their
F goddes haue no felynge. A greate ſorte of wemen gyrde with coardes, ſytte in the ſtretes,
and burne olyue beryes. Now yf one of them be conueyed away, and lye with any ſoch as
come by: ſhe caſteth her neghbours in yͤ teth, becauſe ſhe was not ſo worthelye reputed,
nor her coarde broken. Whatſoeuer is done for them, it is but in vayne and loſte. Howe maye it then be thought or ſayde, that they are goddes? Carpenters and goldeſmythes make them, nether be they any other thinge
but euen what the workemen wyll make of them. Yee, the goldſmythes them ſelues that make them, are of no longe continuaunce.
Howe ſhulde then the thinges that are made of them, be goddes? Vayne therfore are the thinges (yee, very ſhame is it) that they leaue behynde them for theyr proſperitie. For as ſoone as there commeth any warre or plage vpon them, then the preſtes ymagine, where they may hyde them ſelues with them. How can men thynke then, that they be goddes, which nether may defende them ſelues from
warre, nor delyuer them from myſfortune?
For ſeynge they be but of wood, of ſtone, of ſyluer and of golde: all people and Kynges
ſhall knowe herafter that they be but vayne thinges: yee, it ſhalbe openlye declared, that they be no goddes: but euen the very workes
of mens handes, and that God hath nothing to do with them. (It is manifeſte then that they are no goddes, but the workes of mens handes, and no worke of God in thẽ.) They can ſet no Kinge in the lande, nor geue rayne vnto men. They can geue no ſentence of a matter, nether defende the lande frõ wrong.
For they are not able to do ſo moche as a crowe, that flyeth betwixte heauen & earth.

G Whan there happeneth a fyre into the houſe of thoſe goddes of wodde, and ſyluer,
and of golde, the preſtes wyll eſcape and ſaue them ſelues, but the goddes burne as the balkes therin. They can not withſtand any kyng or battell: how may it then be thought or graunted, yͭ they be goddes? Moreouer, theſe goddes of wodde, of ſtone, of golde and ſyluer maye nether defende them ſelues from theues nor robbers: yee, the very wicked are ſtronger then they. Theſe ſtripe them out of theyr apparell, that they be clothed withall,
theſe take theyr golde and ſyluer from them,
and ſo get them away: yet can they not helpe them ſelues. Therfore it is moch better for a man, to be a kynge, & ſo to ſhewe his power:
or els a profitable veſſell in a houſe, wherin
he that oweth it, might haue pleaſure: yee, or to be a dore in a houſe, to kepe ſoche thinges
ſafe as be therin, thẽ to be ſoch a vayne god.
The Sunne, the Moone, and all the ſtarres, ſeynge they geue theyr ſhyne and lyghte, are obediẽt, and do men good. Whan the lyghtenynge glyſtrethe, all is cleare. The wynde bloweth in euery countre: and whan God cõmaundeth
the cloudes to go rounde aboute
the whole worlde, they do as they are biddẽ, whan the fyre is ſent downe from aboue and
cõmaunded, it burneth vp hilles & woddes.
But as for thoſe goddes, they are not lyke
one of theſe thinges, nether in bewty, nether ſtrength. Wherfore, men ſhulde not thynke nor ſaye that they be goddes, ſeynge they can nether geue ſentence in iudgemẽt, nor do mẽ good. For ſo moche nowe as ye are ſure, that they be no goddes, then feare them not. For H
they can nether ſpeake euell nor good for kinges.
They can ſhewe no tokẽs in heauens for the Heythẽ, nether ſhyne as the Sunne, nor geue lyghte as the Moone: yee, the vnreaſonable beaſtes are better then they, for they can get them vnder the rofe, and do themſelues
good. So can ye be certifyed by no maner of meanes, that they be goddes: therfore feare them not. For lyke as a ſcarcrowe in a garden of herbes kepeth nothynge, euen ſo
are theyr goddes of wod, of ſyluer and gold:
and lyke as a whyte thorne in an orcharde,
that euery byrde ſytteth vpon: yee, lyke as a deade body that is caſt in the darke. Euen ſo is it with thoſe goddes of wodde, ſyluer and golde. By the purple and ſcarlet whiche they haue vpon them, and ſoone faydeth awaye,
ye maye vnderſtande, that they be no goddes:
yee, they them ſelues ſhall be conſumed
at the laſt, whiche ſhall be a great confuſion
of the lande. Bleſſed is the godly man, that hath no ymages and worſhippeth
none, for he ſhalbe farre
from reprofe.

The ſtory of Suſanna, whych is the. xiij. Chapter of Danyel after the Latyn.

A There dwelt a man in Babylõ, called Ioachim, ẏ toke a wife, whoſe name was Suſanna, the daugh- of Helchia, a very fayre woman & ſoche one as feared God. Her father and her mother alſo were godly people & taught theyr daughter accordynge to the lawe of Moſes: Nowe Ioachim (her husbãde) was a greate ryche man, & had a fayre orcharde ioynynge vnto hys houſe. And to hym reſorted the Iewes comẽly, becauſe he was a mã of reputacyon amõge them. The ſame yeare were there made two iudges, ſoch as the Lorde ſpeaketh of: All the wyckedneſſe of Babylõ, cõmeth from the elders (ẏ is) frõ the iudges, whych ſeme to rule the people. Theſe came oft to Ioachims houſe, and all ſoche as had eny thynge to do in the lawe came thyther vnto them.

B Nowe when the people came agayne at after noone. Suſanna went into her husbãdes orcharde, to walke. The elders ſeynge thys, that ſhe went in daylye, and walked: they burned for luſt to her, yee, they were almoſt out of theyr wyttes, and caſte downe theyr eyes, that they ſhuld not ſe heauen, ner remembre, that God is a ryghtuous iudge. For they were bothe woũded with the loue of her, nether durſt one ſhewe another his grefe, And for ſhame, they durſt not tell her theyr inordinate luſt, that they wolde fayne haue had to do wᵗ her, Yet they layed wayte for her earneſtly from daye to daye, that they myght (at the leeſt) haue a ſyght of her And the one ſayde to the other: Up, lett vs goo home, for it is dyner time. So they wẽt theyr waye from her.

When they returned agayne, they came together, enquiryng out ẏ matter betwixte them ſelues: yee, the one tolde ẏ other of hys wicked luſt: Then appoynted they a tyme, when they myght take Suſanna alone,

It happened alſo ẏ they ſpyed oute a con- C uenient tyme, when ſhe went forth to walke (as her maner was) & no body wyth her,
but two maydens, & thought * to waſh her *Exo.ii.a.
ſelfe in the gardẽ, for it was an hote ſeaſon: ii.Reg.xi.a.
And there was not one perſon there, excepte the two elders, that had hyd them ſelues to beholde her. So ſhe ſayde to her maydẽs: go fet me oyle and ſope, and ſhut the orcharde dore, that I maye waſh me. And they dyd as ſhe bad them, and ſhut the orcharde dore, ãd went out them ſelues at a backe dore, to fet the thynge that ſhe had cõmaunded: but Suſanna knewe not, that the elders laye there hyd within. Nowe when the maydens were were gone forth, the two elders gat thē vp:

and ranne vpō her, ſaying: nowe the orchard
dores are ſhut, that no man can ſe vs: we haue
a luſt vnto the, therfore conſent vnto vs:
and lye wyth vs.

If thou wylt not, we ſhall brynge a teſti-
D moniall agaynſt the: that there was a yonge
felowe wyth the, and that thou haſt ſent away
thy maydēs frō the for the ſame cauſe.
Suſanna ſyghed, and ſayde: Alas. I am in trouble on euery ſyde. Though I folowe youre mynde, it wyll be my death, & yf I cōſent
not vnto you, I cā not eſcape youre hādes.
Well, it is better for me, to fal into your hāde wythout the dede doynge, then to ſynne
in the ſyght of the Lorde: and wyth that,
ſhe cryed out wyth a loude voyce: the elders
alſo cryed out agaynſt her.

Then ranne there one to the orcharde
dore, & ſmote it open. Nowe whē the ſeruaūtes of the houſe herde the crye in the orchard,
they ruſſhed in at the backe dore, to ſe what E the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the ſeruaūtes were greatly aſhamed,
for why? there was neuer ſoche a reporte made of Suſanna. On the morowe after came the people to Ioachim her huſbande, and the two elders came alſo, ful of myſcheuous
ymaginacyon agaynſt Suſanna, to brynge
her vnto death, & ſpake thus before the people:
Sende for Suſanna the daughter of Helchias, Ioachims wyfe. And imediatly they ſent for her. So ſhe came wyth her father & mother, her children & all her kynred. Nowe Suſanna was a tender perſon, and meruelous fayre of face. Therfore the wycked mē commaunded to take of the clothes from her face (for ſhe was couered) that at the leeſt,
they myght ſo be ſatiſfied in her beutie. Thē
her frēdes, yee, and all they that knewe her,
beganne to wepe.

These two elders ſtode vp in the myddeſt
of the people, * & layed theyr handes vpon
*Leu.xxiiii.c the heade of Suſanna, which wepte, and loked vp towarde heauen, for her herte had a ſure truſt in the Lorde. And the elders ſayd:
As we were walkynge in the orcharde alone,
thys womā came in wyth her two maydens:
whom ſhe ſent awaye from her, & ſparred
ẏ orcharde dores: with ẏ a yonge felowe (which there was hyd) came vnto her, and laye with her. As for vs, we ſtode in a corner of the orcharde. And when we ſawe this F wyckednes, we ranne to her: and perceaued,
ẏ they had medled together. But we coulde not holde hym: for he was ſtronger then we:
thus he opened the dore & gat hym awaye.

Nowe when we had taken thys womā,
we aſked her, what yōge felowe thys was:
but ſhe wolde not tell vs. Thys is the matter,
& we be wytneſſes of the ſame. The comen ſorte beleued thē, as thoſe that were the elders and iudges of the people, and ſo they condemned her to death. Suſanna cryed out wyth a loude voyce, and ſayde: O euerla-ſtynge God, * thou ſercher of ſecretes, thou *Hebr.iiii.c.
that knoweſt all thynges afore they come to paſſe: thou woteſt, ẏ they haue borne falſe
wytnes agaynſt me: & beholde, I muſt dye,
where as I neuer dyd eny ſoche thynges, as theſe men haue malycioully inuēted againſt
me. And the Lord herde her voyce. For whē ſhe was led forth to death, the Lorde rayſed
vp the ſprete of a yonge chylde, whoſe name
was Daniel, whych cryed wt a loude voyce: G
* I am cleane from thys bloude. Then all *ii.Reg.iii.c Actes.xx.d.
the people turned them towarde hym, and ſayde: What meane theſe wordes, that thou haſt ſpoken? Daniel ſtode in the myddeſt of thē, and ſayd: Are ye ſoch fooles, O ye chyldren
of Iſrael, ẏ ye can not diſcerne ner knowe
the trueth? Ye haue here condēned a daughter of Iſrael vnto death, and knowe not the trueth wherfore: Goo ſyt on iudgement
agayne, for they haue ſpoken falſe wytneſſe agaynſt her.

Wherfore the people turned agayne in all the haſte. And the elders (that is, the principall heades) ſayd vnto him: come ſyt downe
here amonge vs, and ſhewe vs this matter,
ſeyng God hath geuē the as greate honoure
as an elder. And Daniel ſayd vnto thē * Put *iii.Reg.iii.d
theſe two aſyde one from another, and then ſhall I heare thē. When they were put aſunder
one from another, he called one of them and ſayde vnto hym: O thou olde canckerde
carle, that haſt vſed thy wickedneſſe ſo lōg:
thyne vngracyous dedes whych thou haſt
done afore, are nowe come to lyght. For ẏ haſt geuen falſe iudgementes, thou haſt oppreſſed
the innocent, & letten the gyltye go fre where as yet the Lord ſayeth: * The innocent *Exo.xxiii.b Prou.xvii.c.
& ryghteous ſe thou ſlaye not. Well thā, yf thou haſt ſene her tell me vnder what tre
ſaweſt thou them talkyng together? He anſwered:
vnder a Molbery tree. And Daniel ſayde: very well, nowe thou lyeſt euen vpō thyne head. Lo, the meſſaunger of the Lorde hath receaued the ſentence of hym, to cut the in two. Then put he hym aſyde, & called for the other, and ſayd vnto him: O thou ſede of Canaan, but not of Iuda: Fayreneſſe hath diſceaued the, and luſt hath ſubuerted thyne herte. Thus dealte ye afore with the daughters of Iſrael, and they (for feare) conſented
vnto you: but the daughter of Iuda wolde not abyde youre wyckedneſſe. Nowe tell me
thā vnder what tree dydeſt ẏ take thē, ſpeakynge together? He anſwered: Under a Pomgranate tree. Then ſayd Daniel vnto hym:
very well, nowe thou lyeſt alſo euē vpō thyne
head. The meſſaunger of the Lorde ſtandeth waytynge wyth the ſwerde, to cut the
in two and to ſlaye you both.

Wyth that, all the whole multitude gaue
*Psal.xvij.a a greate ſhoute, ⁊ prayſed God, * whych al-waye delyuered them that put theyr truſt in
hym. And they came vpon the two elders (whom Daniel had conuycte wyth theyr awne mouth: that they had geuē falſe wytneſſe) ⁊ dealte wyth them, euen lyke wyſe as they wolde haue done with their neyghboures: yee, they dyd * accordyng to the lawe of *Deu.xix.d. Prouer.xix.a Moſes, and put thē to death. Thus the inno cent bloude was ſaued the ſame daye.

Then Helchiah ⁊ his wyfe prayſed God,
for theyr daughter Suſanna, with Ioachim
her huſbande and all the kynred: ȳ there was no diſhoneſtye fōude in her. From that daye forth was Daniel had in greate reputacyon
in the ſyght of the people. (And kinge Aſtia-ges was layed wyth hys fathers, and Cyrus of Perſya reygned in hys ſteade.)

¶ The ende of the ſtory of Suſanna.

The ſtory of Bell / ⁊

of the Dragon, whych is the .xiiij. Chapter of Daniel after the Latyn.

A DAniel dyd eate at the kinges
table, ⁊ was had in reuerēce aboue all hys frēdes. There was at Babylō an ymage, called Bel: ⁊ there were ſpēt
vpō hym euery daye .xij. cakes .xl. ſhepe, ⁊ ſyxe greate pottes of wyne. Hym dyd the kyng worſhip hym ſelfe, ⁊ wēte daylye to honour him: but Daniel worſhypped his awne God. And the kynge ſayde vnto hym: why doſt not ȳ wor-*Deu.iiij.c. and.v.a. ſhyppe Bel? He anſwered ⁊ ſayd: * Becauſe Exo.xx.a. I maye not worſhyp thynges that be made Deute.vi.d. wyth handes, * but the lyuynge God, which Mal.iij.a. made heauen ⁊ earth, ⁊ hath power vpon all fleſhe. The kynge ſayd vnto hym: thynckeſt
ȳ not that Bell is a lyuynge God? Or ſeyſt thou not howe moche he eateth ⁊ dryncketh euery daye? Daniel ſmyled, ⁊ ſayd: O kyng, diſceaue not thy ſelfe: for thys is but made of *Eccle.xxx.c claye wythin, and of metall wythout, * nether eateth he euer any thynge.

Then the kynge was wroth, ⁊ called for his preſtes, and ſayde vnto them: If ye tell B me not who is thys, that eateth vp theſe expenſes, ye ſhall dye: but yf ye can certifye me
that Bell eateth thē, then Daniel ſhall dye,
for he hath ſpokē blaſphemy agaynſt Bell:
And Daniel ſayde vnto the kinge: let it ſo be accordynge as thou haſt ſayde: The preſtes
of Bel were .lxx. beſyde theyr wyues ⁊ chyldren. And the kynge wente wyth Daniel in to the temple of Bel. So Bels preſtes ſayd:
Lo, we wyll go out, and ſet thou the meate
there (O kynge) and poure in the wyne: thē
ſhutt the dore faſt, and ſeale it wyth thyne
awne ſygnet: and to morowe when thou cōmeſt in, yf thou fyndeſt not that Bel hath eaten vp all, we wyll ſuffre death: or els Daniel, that hath lyed vpon vs. The preſtes C thought them ſelues ſure ynough, for vnder
the altare they had made a preuy intraunce,
and there wente they in euer, ⁊ dyd eate vp
what there was.

So when they were gone forth, the kynge
ſet meates before Bel. Now Daniel had cō-maunded hys ſeruauntes to brynge aſſhes, ⁊ theſe he ſyfted thorowe out all the temple,
that the kynge myght ſe. Then wente they out, ⁊ ſparred the dore, ſealynge it wyth the kynges ſygnet, ⁊ ſo departed. In the nyght came the preſtes wyth theyr wyues ⁊ chyldren (as they were wonte to do) ⁊ dyd eate ⁊ dryncke vp all. In the mornynge by tymes
at the breake of the daye, the kynge aroſe, ⁊ Daniel wyth him. And the kynge ſayd: Daniel, are the ſeales whole yet? He anſwered:
Yee (O kinge) they be whole. Now as ſoone
as he had opened the dore, the kyng loked vn
to the aultare, ⁊ cryed wyth a loude voyce:
Greate art thou O Bel, and wyth the is no
diſceate. Thē laughed Daniel, and helde the kynge that he ſhulde not go in, and ſayd: Be holde the pauement, marcke well, whoſe fo-teſteppes are theſe? The kynge ſayd: I ſe the foteſteppes of men, wemen and chyldren.

Therfore the kynge was angrye, and D
toke the preſtes, wyth theyr wyues and chyl
dren, and they ſhewed hym the preuy dores,
where they came in, ⁊ dyd eate vp ſoch thyn ges as were vpō the aultare. For the which cauſe the kynge ſlewe thē, * ⁊ delyuered Bel *Iere.li.g.
into Daniels power, whych deſtroyed hym Eſa.xlvi.a.
and hys temple.

And in that ſame place there was a great Dragon, which they of Babylon worſhyp-
ped. And the kyng ſayd vnto Daniel, ſayeſt thou that thys is but a God of metall alſo?
lo, he lyueth, he eateth and dryncketh: ſo that thou canſt not ſaye, ȳ he is no lyuynge God, therfore worſhyp hym. Daniel ſayde vnto
the kynge: I wyll worſhyppe the Lorde my God, * he is the true lyuing God: as for this *Danil.vi.c
he is not the God of lyfe. But geue me leaue (O kyng) and I ſhall deſtroye thys Dragon wythout ſwearde or ſtaffe. The kynge ſayd. I geue ȳ leaue. Thē Daniel toke pitch fatte and hearrye woll, ⁊ dyd ſethe them together, and made lompes therof: thys he put in the Dragons mouth, and ſo the Dragon
burſt in ſonder: and Daniel ſayde: lo, there is he whom ye worſhypped, when they of Ba bylon herde ȳ, they toke greate indignacyon and gathered them together agaynſt the kynge, ſayinge: The kynge is become a Ie-
we and he hath deſtroyed Bel, he hath ſlayne

the Dragon, & put the preſtes to death: So they came to the kinge, and ſayd: let vs haue Daniel, or els we wyll deſtroye the and thyne houſe.

Nowe whē the kynge ſawe, that they ruſſhed in ſo ſore vpon hym, and that neceſſyte cōſtrayned hym, *he delyuered Daniel vnto thē: which caſt hym into the lyons denne, where he was ſyxe dayes. In the dēne there were ſeuen lyons, and they had geuen them euery daye two bodyes & two ſhepe: whych then were not geuen them, to the intent that they myght deuoure Daniel. *Danie.vi.c

F There was in Iewry a Prophete called Abacuc, whych had made potage, & broken bred in a depe platter, and was goynge into the felde, for to brynge it to the reapers. But the Angell of the Lorde ſayde vnto Abacuc go cary the meate that thou haſt into Babylon, vnto Daniel, which is in the lyons dēne And Abacuc ſayde: Lorde, I neuer ſawe Babylon: and as for the denne, I knowe it not. *Then the Angell of the Lord toke him by the toppe, and bare hym by the hearre of the head, & (thorowe a myghtye wynde) ſet hym in Babylon vpon the denne. And Abacuc cryed, ſayinge: O Daniel *yͤ ſeruaunt of God, haue, take the breake faſt, yͭ God hath ſent the. And Daniel ſayde: O God, haſt yͧ thought vpon me: well, thou neuer fayleſt them that loue the. So Daniel aroſe, & dyd eate: and the Angell of the Lorde ſet Abacuc in hys awne place agayne immediatly. *Eze.viij.a. *ib.xx,xvij.a

G Vpon the ſeuenth daye, the kynge wente to bewepe Daniel: and when he came to the denne, he loked in: and beholde, Daniel ſat in the myddeſt of the Lyons. Then cryed the kynge wyth a loude voyce, ſayinge: Greate art thou, O Lorde God of Daniel: *and he drewe hym oute of the lyons dēne. ‡As for thoſe yͭ were the cauſe of hys deſtruccyon, he dyd caſt them into the denne, and they were deuoured in a moment before hys face. *Iere.xxxvij b ‡Heſt. vii.b. Dani.vi.c.

After thys, wrote the kynge vnto all people, kynredes and tunges, that dwelt in all countrees, ſayinge: peace be multiplied with you. My commaundement is, in all the dominiō of my realme: that men feare & ſtande in awe of Daniels God, *for he is yͤ lyuing God, whych endureth euer: hys kyngdome abydeth vncorrupte, and hys power is euerlaſtynge. It is he that can delyuer and ſaue: he doth wonders and maruelous worckes in heauen and in earth, for he hath ſaued Daniel from the power of the Lyons. * Dani.vi.c. Luke.i.c. Eſa.xliii.b. Oſee.xiii.a Dani.iii.f.

The prayer of Manaſſes kynge of Iuda, when he was holden captyue in Babylon.

O Lorde Almyghtye, God of our fathers, Abrahā, Iſaac and Iacob, and of the ryghteous ſeade of them: whych haſt made heauē and earth, with all the ornament therof, whych haſte ordened the ſee by the worde of thy cōmaūdemēt: whych haſt ſhutte vp the depe, and haſt ſealed it for thy fearfull and laudable name, whych all men feare, and tremble before the face of thy vertue, & for the anger of thy threatenynge, the which is importable to ſynners. But the mercy of thy promes is greate and vnſearcheable: for thou arte the Lorde God moſt hyghe, aboue all the earth, longſuffrynge, & exceadynge mercyfull, & repentaunt for the malyce of men. Thou Lorde after thy goodnes haſt promiſed repētaunce of the remyſſiō of ſynnes: and thou that arte the God of the ryghtwes, haſt not put repentaunce of the ryghtwes Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, vnto them that haue ſynned agaynſt the: But becauſe I haue ſynned aboue the nombre of the ſandes of the ſee, and that myne iniquities are multiplied, I am humbled with many bandes of yron, and ther is in me no breathynge. I haue prouoked thyne anger, and haue done euel before the, in commyttynge abhomynacyon and multiplyinge offences. And nowe I bowe the knees of my hert, requyrynge goodnes of the O Lorde I haue ſynned, Lorde I haue ſynned, & knowe myne iniquitie. I deſyre the by prayer, O Lord forgeue me: forgeue me and deſtroye me not wyth myne iniquyties, nether do thou alwayes remembre myne euelles to punyſhe them, but ſaue me (whych am vnworthy) after thy great mercy: and I will prayſe the euerlaſtyngly, all the dayes of my lyfe: for all the vertue of heuen prayſeth the, and vnto the belongeth glorye, worlde wyth oute ende.
Amen.

The fyrſt booke of the Machabees.

The fyrſt Chapter.

After the deeth of Alexander the kynge of Macedonia, Antiochus taketh the kyngdome, Many of the chyldren of Iſrael make couenaunt wych the Gentyles. Antiochus ſubdueth Egypte and Ieruſalem vnto hys domynion. Ieruſalem beynge burnt maketh lawes of her awne, and forbyddeth to kepe Goddes lawes. Antiochus ſetteth vp an Idole ouer the aulter of God.

A After that Alexāder the ſonne of Phylyppe, kynge of of Macedonia
wēte forth of the lāde
of Cethim, and ſlewe Darius
kynge of the Perſiās and Medes:
It happened, that he toke greate warres in hande, wanne very many ſtrōge cyties, & ſlew many kinges of ȳ earth:
goynge thorowe to the endes of the worlde, & gettyng many ſpoyles of the people: In ſo moche, ȳ the worlde ſtode in greate awe of *Judit.i.b. him, *& therfore was he proude in his herte.
Nowe, whan he had gathered a myghtye
ſtrōge hooſt, & ſubdued the lādes & people wͭ
theyr princes, ſo ȳ they became tributaryes
vnto hym: he fel ſyck. And whē he perceaued
ȳ he muſt nedes dye, he called for hys noble
eſtates (whych had bene brought vp wyth *Dani.vij.a and.viij.b. hym of chyldren) *& parted hys kyngdome amonge them, whyle he was yet alyue. So Alexāder raygned .xij. yeare, and then dyed.

After hys death fell the kyngdome vnto
hys princes, and they optayned it euery one in hys rowme, and cauſed them ſelues to be crowned as kynges: and ſo dyd theyr chyldrē
after them many yeares, and moch wyckedneſſe increaſed in ȳ world. Out of theſe came the vngracyous rote, noble Antiochus
i. Mac.viij.a the ſonne of Antiochus the kynge (*whych had bene a pledge at Rome) and he raygned
in the C.xxxvij. yeare of the empyre of the Grekes.

B In thoſe dayes wente there out of Iſrael
wycked men, whych moued moch people wͭ
*Deut.vij.a Iudic.ij.a. theyr coūcell, ſayenge: *Let vs go & make a couenaunt wyth the Heathen, ȳ are rounde
*Ier.xliiij.c aboute vs: *for ſence we departed frō them,
we haue had moch ſorowe. So thys deuyce pleaſed them well, and certayne of the people toke vpō thē for to go vnto the kinge, which gaue thē lycence to do after the ordinaūce of i.Mac.iiij.b. the Heathen. *Then ſet they vp an opē ſcole
(at Ieruſalem) of the lawes of the Heathen & were nomore cyrcumcyſed: but forſoke the holy Teſtamēte, & ioyned them ſelues to the iij.Re.xxi.b Heathē, & were cleane ſolde to do myſchefe
So when Antiochus beganne to be myghtie
in hys kyngdome, he wēte aboute to optayne
the lande of Egypte alſo ȳ he myght
*i.Mac.v.a. haue the domynion of two realmes. *Upon this entred he into Egypte wͭ a ſtrōge hooſt, wyth charrettes, Elephātes, horſmen and a greate nōbre of ſhyppes, & begāne to warre agaynſt Ptolomy the kyng of Egypte. But Ptolomy was afrayed of hym, & fled: & many of hys people were wounded to death.
Thus Antiochus wāne many ſtrōge cities,
and toke awaye greate good out of the lāde
of Egypte.

*And after that Antiochus had ſmytten C
Egipt, he turned agayne in the C.xliij. yere, *ii.Mac.v.a & wente towarde Iſrael, & came vp to Ieruſalē
with a myghtye people: & entred proudly
into the Sāctuary, and toke awaye the golden
altare, the candelſtycke and all the ornamentes therof, the table of the ſhewbred, the pourynge veſſel, the chargers, the goldē ſpones,
the vayle, the crownes, & goldē apparell
of the tēple, & brake downe all. He toke alſo
the ſyluer & golde, the precyous Iewels, & ȳ ſecrete treaſures that he fōude. And whē he had takē awaye al together, cauſed a greate
murthur of men, and ſo fulfylled hys malycious
pryde, he departed into his awne lāde.

Thus there aroſe greate heuyneſſe and D
myſery in al the lāde of Iſrael. *The prīces *ii.Mac.v.c
& the elders of the people mourned, the yōge men and the maydens were defyled, and the fayre beutye of women was chaunged: the brydegrome and the bryde toke thē to mournynge:
the lāde and thoſe that dwelt therin,
was moued: for all the houſe of Iacob was brought to confuſyon.

*After two yeares the kyng ſent his chefe *ii.Mac.v.a
treaſurer vnto the cyties of Iuda, whych came to Ieruſalem wyth a great multitude of people, ſpeakynge peaceable wordes vnto them but all was diſceate: for whā they had geuē him credēce, he fel ſodenly vpon the cytie, & ſmote it ſore, & deſtroyed moche people of Iſrael. *And when he had ſpoyled the cytie, *i.Mac.viij.b
he ſet fyre on it, caſtynge downe houſes & walles on euery ſyde. The wemen & theyr chyldrē toke they captiue, & led awaye theyr catel. Then buylded they the cytie of Dauid wyth a great & thycke wall, & with myghtye towres, and made it a ſtronge holde for them. Beſyde all thys, they ſet wycked people and vngodly men to kepe it, ſtoared it wͭ
weapens & vytayles: gathered the goodes
of Ieruſalem, and layed them vp there: thus became it a theuyſh caſtell.

And thys was done to laye wayte for the people that went into the Sanctuary, and for the cruell deſtruccyon of Iſrael. Thus they ſhed innocēt bloude on euery ſyde of the Sanctuary, and defyled it: In ſo moch that the cytezyns were fayne to departe, and the cytie became an habitacyon of ſtraungers,
beyng deſolate of her awne ſede, for her awne natyues were fayne to leaue her. *Her ſāctuary *Tob.ii.a. Amos.viii.b.
was clene waſted, her holy dayes were

were turned into mournynge, her Sabbathes were had in deriſyon, and her honoure brought to naught. Loke how great her glory was afore, ſo greate was her confuſyō, & her ioye turned in to ſorowe.

E *ij.mac.vi.a *Antiochus alſo the kynge ſent out a cōmiſſyon vnto all hys kyngdome, that al the people ſhulde be one. Thē they left euery mā hys lawe, and all the Heathen agreed to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus: Yee, many of the Iſraelites cōſented there vnto, offerynge vnto Idols, & defylynge the Sabbath. So the kynge Antiochus ſent his meſſaungers wyth hys commiſſyon vnto Jeruſalem, & to all the cyties of Juda: that they ſhulde folowe the lawes of the Heathen, and forbad ether burntofferynge, meatofferynge or peaceofferynge to be made in the tēple of God, and that there ſhulde no Sabbath ner hye feaſt daye be kepte: but commaunded, ẏ the Sanctuary and the holy people of Iſrael ſhulde be defyled.

He commaunded alſo that there ſhulde be ſet vp other altares, temples, & Idols: to offre vp ſwynes fleſh & other vnclene beaſtes: that men ſhulde leaue theyr chyldren vncyrcumciſed, to defyle theyr ſoules with all maner of vnclēneſſe and abhominacyōs: ẏ they myght ſo forget the lawe, & chaunge all the holy ordinaunces of God: & that whoſoeuer wolde not do accordynge to the commaūdement of kyng Antiochus, ſhulde ſuffre death. In lyke maner commaunded he thorow out all hys realme, ād ſet rulers ouer the people, for to compell them to do theſe thynges commaundynge the cyties of Juda to do ſacryfyce vnto Idols.

Then wente the people vnto the heathen by heapes, forſoke the lawe of the Lord, and cōmytted moch euell in the lande: yee, & chaced out the ſecrete Iſraelites, which had hyd thē ſelues in corners and preuy places. The F xv. daye of the moneth Caſleu, in the Cxlv. yeare, ſet kynge Antiochus an abhominable Idol of deſolacyon vpon the altare of God, & they buylded altares thorowe out all the cyties of Juda on euery ſyde, before the dores of the houſes, and in the ſtretes: where they brent incenſe, and dyd ſacrifyce. *And *Jer.xxxvi.c as for the bookes of the lawe of God, they brent them in the fyre, and rent them in peces. Whatſoeuer he was that had a boke of ẏ Teſtament of the Lorde founde by him, yee whoſoeuer endeuoured himſelfe to kepe the lawe of the Lorde, the kynges commaundement was, ẏ they ſhulde put hym to death. And thorowe hys auctoryte they executed theſe thynges euery moneth, vpō the people of Iſrael that were founde in the cyties.

G *ij.mac.vi.b *The fyue and twentye daye of the moneth what tyme as they dyd ſacrifyce vpon the altare (whych ſtode in ẏ ſteade of the altare of the Lorde) accordynge to the cōmaūdemēt of kynge Antiochus, they put certayne wemen to death, whych had cauſed theyr chyldrē to be circumciſed: Not only that, but they hanged vp the chyldren by the neckes thorowe out all theyr houſes, and ſlewe the circumciſers of them.

Yet were there many of the people of Iſrael, whych determyned in them ſelues, that they wolde not eate vncleane thynges: but choſe rather to ſuffre death, then to be defyled wt vncleane meates: So becauſe they wolde not breake ẏ bleſſed lawe of God, they were cruelly ſlayne. And thys great tyranny increaſed very ſore vpon the people of Iſrael.

¶ The mournynge of Mathathias and hys ſonnes for the deſtruccyon of the holy cytie. They refuſe to do ſacrifyce vnto Idoles. The zele of Mathathias for the lawe of God. They are ſlayne and wyll not fyght agayne becauſe of the Sabboth daye. Mathathias dyinge commaundeth hys ſonnes to ſtycke by the worde of God after the example of the fathers.

A IN those dayes there dyd ſtande vp one Mathathias the ſonne of John, ẏ ſonne of Symeon the preſt (out of ẏ kynred of Joaris) from Jeruſalem, an dwelt vpon the mount of Modin, & had v. ſonnes: Jhon called Goddis, Simeon, called Thaſi: Judas, otherwiſe called Machabeus: Eleazer, otherwyſe called Abaron: & Jonathas, whoſe ſyrname was Appus. Theſe ſawe ẏ euel, that was done amōge the people of Juda & Jeruſalem. And Mathathias ſayd: wo is me, alas that euer I was borne, to ſe thys myſery of my people, & the pyteous deſtruccyon of the holy cyte: and thus to ſyt ſo ſtyl, it beyng delyuered into the handes of the enemyes. *Her Sāctuary is come into the power of ſtraungers: *i.Mac.i.d. her temple is, as it were a mā that hath loſt hys good name: Her precyous ornamentes are caryed awaye captyue. Her olde mē are ſlayne in the ſtretes, and her yōge mē are fallen thorowe the ſwearde of the enemyes.

What people is it, that hath not ſome poſſeſſyon in her kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten ſome of her ſpoyles? All her glory is taken awaye. She was a fre womā, & now ſhe is become an handmayde. Beholde oure Sanctuary, oure bewtye & honoure is waſted awaye, & defyled by the Gentiles. What helpeth it vs then to lyue? And Mathathias rente hys clothes, he & his ſonnes, & put ſackcloth vpon them, and mourned very ſory.

Then came the men thyther whych were ſent of kynge Antiochus, to compell ſoch as B were fled into the cytie of Modyn, for to do ſacrifyce and to burne incenſe vnto Idols, & to forſake the lawe of God. So, many of the people of Iſrael conſented and enclyned vnto them, but Mathatias and hys ſonnes remayned ſtedfaſt. Then ſpake the commyſſyoners of kynge Antiochus, and ſayde vnto Mathathias: Thou art a noble man, of hye reputacyon and greate in thys cytie, hauynge fayre chyldren and brethren. Come thou therfore fyrſt, and fulfyll ẏ kynges cõmaundement, lyke as all the Heathen haue done, yee, and the men of Juda, and ſoch as remayne at Jeruſalem: ſo ſhalt thou and thy chyldrẽ be in the kynges fauoure & enryched wyth golde, ſyluer & greate rewardes.

Mathathias anſwered, and ſpake wyth a lowde voyce. Though all nacyons obeye ẏ kyng Antiochus, and fal awaye euery man from kepynge the lawe of theyr fathers: though they conſente to his cõmaundementes, yet wil J and my ſonnes & my brethren, not fall from the lawe of oure fathers. God forbyd we ſhulde, that were not good for vs * that we ſhulde forſake the lawe and ordi- * Actes.v.b. naunces of God, and to agre vnto the commaundemẽt of kynge Antiochus. Therfore we wyl do no ſoch ſacrifice, nether breake ẏ * Prou.iiij.c ſtatutes of oure lawe, *to go another waie. And when he had ſpoken theſe wordes, there came one of the Jewes, whych openly in the ſyght of al, dyd ſacrifice vnto the Jdols vpõ the aulter in the cytie of Modyn, accordyng to the kynges commaundement.

C When Mathathias ſawe thys, it greued hym at the herte, ſo that hys raynes ſhoke wythall, & hys wrath kyndled for very zele of the lawe. Wyth that, he ſtart vp, & kylled the Jewe beſyde the aulter: Yee, & ſlewe the kynges commyſſyoner, that compelled hym to do ſacrifyce, and deſtroyed the aulter at the ſame tyme: ſoch a zele had he vnto the *Num.xxv.b. lawe of God * lyke as Phinehes dyd vnto zãbri ẏ ſonne of Salomi, And Mathathias cryed wyth a loude voyce thorow the cytie, ſayenge: Whoſo is feruent in the lawe, & wil kepe the couenaũt, let him folowe me. * So *ij Mac.v.c he and his ſonnes fled into the mountaynes, & left all that euer they had in the cytie. Many other godly mẽ alſo departed into ẏ wyldernesſe wyth theyr chyldrẽ, theyr wyues & theyr catel, and remayned there: for the tyrãny increaced ſore vpon them.

Nowe when the kynges ſeruauntes, and D the hooſt, whych was at Jeruſalem in the cytie of Dauid hearde, ẏ certayne men had broken the kynges commaundement, and were gone theyr waye to the wyldernesſe into ſecrete places,, & that there were many departed after them: they folowed vpon them, to fyght agaynſt them in the Sabbath daye, & ſayde: wyll ye yet rebell? Get you hence, and do the cõmaundement of kynge Antiochus *Joſue.i.c. & ye ſhall lyue. They anſwered: * We wyll not go forth, nether wyll we do the kynges cõmaũdement, to defyle the Sabboth daye. Then begamne they to fyght agaynſt them neuertheleſſe they gaue them none other anſwere, nether caſt they one ſtone at thẽ, ner made faſt theyr preuy places, but ſayde: we wyll dye all in oure innocency, heauẽ & earth ſhall teſtyfye wyth vs, ẏ ye put vs to death wrongeouſly. Thus they fought agaynſt them vpon the Sabboth, and ſlewe both mẽ & catell, theyr wyues and theyr chyldren, to the nombre of a thouſande people:

When Mathathias and his frẽdes herde thys, they mourned for them ryght ſore and ſayde one to another: Jf ſo be that we all do as oure brethren haue done, & fyght not for oure lyues & for our lawes agaynſt the Heathen, then ſhall they the ſoner rote vs out of the earth. So they cõcluded amonge thẽ ſelues at the ſame tyme, ſayenge: what ſoeuer he be that commeth to make battayll wyth vs vpon the Sabbath daye, we wyll fyght agaynſt hym, & not dye all, as oure brethren ẏ were murthured ſo haynouſly. Upon thys came the Synagoge of the Jewes vnto the ſtronge men of Jſrael, all ſoch as were feruent in the lawe. And all they that were fled for perſecucyon, came to helpe them, and to ſtande by them: Jn ſo moch that they gathered an hooſt of men, and ſlewe the wycked doers in theyr gelouſy, and the vngodly men in theyr wrath. Some of the wycked fled vnto the Heathen, and eſcaped. E

Thus Mathathias & hys frendes wente aboute, and deſtroyed the aulters, and circũcyſed the chyldren, that had not yet receaued circũciſyon: as many as they founde wythin the coſtes of Jſrael: and folowed myghtely vpon the chyldren of pryde, & thys acte proſpered in theyr handes: Jn ſo moch, that they kepte the lawe agaynſt the power of the Gẽtiles & the kynges: and gaue not ouer theyr domynion vnto wycked doers.

After this, when the tyme drewe on faſt, F that Mathathias ſhulde dye, he ſayde vnto hys ſonnes: Nowe is pryde and perſecucyon increaſed, nowe is the tyme of deſtruccyon & wrathfull diſpleaſure: wherfore (O my ſonnes) be ye feruent in the lawe, and ieoparde your lyues for the Teſtament of the fathers call to remẽbraunce what actes oure fathers dyd in theyr tyme, ſo ſhall ye receaue greate honoure and an euerlaſtynge name.

And thus ye maye conſydre thorowe out all ages ſence the worlde beganne, * yͭ whoſoeuer put their truſt in God, were not ouercome. * Feare not ye then the wordes of an vngodly man, ‡ For his glory is but donge and wormes: to daye is he ſet vp, and to morowe is he gone: for he is turned into earth, & hys memoryall is come to naught. Wherfore (O my ſonnes) take good hertes vnto you, and quyte youre ſelues lyke men in the lawe: for yf ye do the thynges that are commaunded you in the lawe of the Lorde youre God, ye ſhall optayne greate honoure therin.

And beholde, I knowe that youre brother Symō is a man of wyſdome: ſe that ye geue eare vnto him alwaye, he ſhalbe a father vnto you. As for Judas Machabeus, he hath euer bene myghtye and ſtronge frō his youth vp: let him be youre captayne, and ordre the battayll of the people: thus ſhall ye brynge vnto you all thoſe that fauoure the lawe, & ſe that ye auenge the wronge of youre people, and recompēce the heathen agayne, and applye youre ſelues whole to the commaundement of the lawe. So he gaue them hys bleſſynge, and was layed by his fathers: and dyed in the. C.&.xlvj. yeare at Modin, where hys ſonnes buryed hym in his fathers ſepulchre, and all Iſraell made greate lamentacyon for hym.

¶ The.iij. Chapter.

¶ Judas is made ruler ouer the Jewes. He kylleth Apollonius & Seron the prynce of Syria. The confydēce of Judas towarde God. Judas determyneth to fyght agaynſt Lyſias, whom Antiochus had made captayne ouer hys hooſt. The prayer of the abſteyners.

A Joſe.ca.viij. &.li.xij.anti.

Then ſtode vp Judas Machabeus in his fathers ſteade, & all his brethren helped hym: and ſo dyd all they that helde with hys father, & fought with chereful neſſe for Iſraell. So Judas gat hys people great honour: He put on a breſt plate as a gyannte, & arayed hym ſelfe wyth hys harneſſe and defended the hooſt wyth hys ſwearde. In hys actes he was lyke a Lyō, & as a lyōs whelpe roarynge at hys praye. * He was an enemye to the wycked, & hunted them out: * and brēt vp thoſe that vexed his people: So that hys enemyes fled for feare of him, & all the worckers of vngodlynes were put to trouble: ſoch lucke and proſperyte was in hys hande. This greued diuerſe kinges, but Jacob was greatly reioyſed thorowe hys actes, and he gatt him ſelfe a greate name for euer.

He wente thorowe the cyties of Juda, deſtroyēge the vngodly out of them, turnynge awaye the wrath from Iſraell, and receauynge ſoche as were oppreſſed: and the fame of him wente vnto the vttemoſt parte of the earth. Then Apollonius (a prynce of Syria) gathered a myghtye greate hooſt of the heathē & out of Samaria, to fyght agaynſt Iſraell. Which when Judas perceaued, he wēte forth to mete hym, fought wyth hym, ſlewe hym, and a great multitude wyth hym, the remnaunt fled, & he toke their ſubſtaūce. Judas alſo toke Appollonius awne ſwearde, and fought with it all hys lyfe longe.

Nowe whē Seron (another prince of Syria) herde ſaye, that Judas had gathered vnto him the cōgregacyon & church of the faythfull, he ſayde: I will get me a name & a prayſe thorowe out yͤ realme: for I wyll go fyght with Judas, and them that are with him, as many as haue deſpyſed the kynges cōmaundement. So he made hym ready, and there wente wyth hym a greate myghtye hooſt of the vngodly, to ſtande by him, and to be auēged of the chyldren of Iſrael. And when they came nye vnto Bethoron, Judas wēte forth agaynſt them wyth a ſmall company. And when hys people ſawe ſoch a great hooſt before them, they ſayde vnto Judas: Howe are we able (beinge ſo fewe) to fyght agaynſt ſo great a multitude and ſo ſtronge, ſeinge we be ſo weery, and haue faſted all thys daye?

*i.Re.xiiij.a *ij.Par.xx. b.

* But Judas ſayde: It is a ſmall matter for many to be ouercome with fewe: yee, there is no difference to the God of heauē, to delyuer by a greate multitude or by a ſmall cōpany: * for the victory of the battell ſtādeth not in the multitude of the Hooſt, but the ſtrength commeth from heauen. Beholde, they come agaynſt vs with a preſumptuous and proude multitude, to deſtroye vs, oure wyues and oure chyldren, and to robbe vs. But we will fyght for oure lyues, & for oure lawes, & the Lorde hym ſelfe ſhall deſtroye them before oure face: therfore be not ye afrayed of them.

As ſoone as he had ſpoken theſe wordes, he leapte ſodenly vpō them. Thus was Seron ſmytten, and his hooſt put to flyght, and Judas folowed vpō them beyonde Bethoron vnto the playne felde: where there were ſlayne eyght hundreth men of them, and the reſydue fled into the lande of the Philiſtines. Then all the heathen on euery ſyde were afrayed of Judas and hys brethren: ſo that the rumoure of hym came vnto the kynges eares, for all the Gentyles coulde tell of the warres of Judas.

So when kynge Antiochus hearde theſe tidynges, he was angry in his mynde: wherfore he ſente forth, and gathered an hooſt of his whole realme, very ſtronge armyes: and opened hys treaſury, and gaue hys hooſt a yeares wagyes in hande, commaundynge them to be ready at all tymes.

Neuertheleſſe, when he ſawe, that there was not moneye ynough in hys treaſuryes, and that thorowe the diſcorde and perſecucyon, which he made in yͤ lāde (to put downe the lawes that had bene of olde tymes) hys cuſtomes & trybutes of the lande were mynyſhed: he feared that he was not able for to beare the coſtes and charges any lenger, nor to haue ſoche gyftes, to geue ſo liberally as he dyd afore, more then the kynges that were before hym.

Wherfore, he was heuy in hys mynde, and thought *to go into Perſides, for to take trybutes of the lande, & ſo to gather moche moneye. So he left Lyſias (a noble man of the kynges bloude) to ouerſe the kynges buſyneſſes, from the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egypte: & to kepe well hys ſonne Antiochus, tyll he came agayne. *i. Mac.vi.a

E Moreouer, he gaue him halfe of his hooſt, and Elephantes, cōmytted vnto hym euery thynge of hys mynde, concernynge thoſe whych dwelt in Juda and Jeruſalem: that he ſhulde ſende out an armye agaynſt them, to deſtroye and to rote out the power of Iſrael and the remnaunt of Jeruſalem: to put out their memoryall from that place, to ſet ſtraungers for to inhabyt all their quarters, and to parte their lande amōge them: Thus the kynge toke the other parte of the hooſt, and departed from Antioch (a cyte of hys realme) ouer the water of Euphrates, in the hundreth and .xlvij. yeare, and went thorow the hye countrees. * Joſebh ca. x.lib.antiq.

*ii. Macha. viij.d. * And Lyſias choſe vnto hym Ptolomy the ſonne of Doriminus, Nicanor and Gorgias myghty men, and the kynges frendes. Theſe he ſent with .xl. thouſande fote men & .vij. thouſande horſmen, for to go into the lande of Juda & to deſtroye it, as the kynge commaunded. So they wente forth with all their power, and came to Emmaus into the playne felde. When the marchauntes hearde the rumoure of them, they & theyr ſeruaūtes toke very moche ſyluer and golde, for to bye the chyldren of Iſrael to be their bonde men: There came vnto them alſo yet moo men of warre on euery ſyde, out of Syria and from the Paleſtynes.

F Nowe when Judas & his brethren ſawe yͤ trouble increaſed, & that the hooſt drew nye vnto their borders cōſideringe yͤ kynges wordes which he commaunded vnto the people: namely, that they ſhulde vtterly waſte and deſtroye them: They ſayde one to another: Let vs redreſſe the decaye of oure people, let vs fyght for oure folke and for oure Sanctuary. Then the congregacyon were ſoone ready gathered to fyght, to praye & to make ſupplicacyon vnto God for mercy & grace.

*i. Mac.i.d. *As for Jeruſalem, it laye voyde, & was as it had bene a wylderneſſe. There wente no man in nor out at it, and the Sanctuary was troden downe. The aleauntes kepte the caſtell, there was the habitacyon of the Heathē. The myrth of Jacob was takē awaye, the pype and the harpe was gone from amōge them.

The Iſraelites gathered them together, and came to Maſpha before Jeruſalem: for in Maſpha was yͤ place *where they prayed afore tyme in Iſrael. So they faſted yͤ daye & put ſackclothes vpon thē, caſt aſſhes vpon their heades, rente their clothes, & layde forth the bokes of the lawe (wherout the heathen ſought the lykeneſſe of theyr ymages) and brought the Preſtes ornamētes, the fyrſtlinges & the tythes. They ſett there alſo yͤ * abſteyners (whych had fulfylled their dayes) before God, and cryed wyth a loude voyce towarde heauen, ſayinge: What ſhall we do with theſe? and whyther ſhall we cary them awaye? Re.vij.b. *Num.vi.b. G

They blewe out the trōpette alſo wyth a loude voyce. Then Judas ordened *captaynes ouer the people: ouer thouſandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fyftye, and ouer ten. But as for ſoch as buylded thē houſes, maryed wyues, plāted them vyneyardes, and thoſe that were fearfull: he commaunded them euery man to go home agayne, accordynge *to the lawe, So the hooſt remoued, and pytched vpon the ſouthſyde of Emmaus. *Ex.xxviij.d *Deu.xx.a. Judi.vii.a.

And Judas ſayde: Arme youre ſelues, be ſtronge (O my chyldren) make you ready agaynſt to morowe in the mornynge, that ye maye fyght wyth theſe people, whych are agreed together to deſtroye vs and oure ſanctuary. Better is it for vs to dye in battayll, than to ſe oure people and our ſanctuary in ſoche a myſerable caſe: * Neuertheleſſe, as thy wyll is in heauen, ſo be it. *Matt.vi.b. Lu.xi.a.

¶ The .iiij. Chapter.

¶ Judas goeth againſt Gorgias which lyeth in wayte. He putteth Gorgias and his hooſt to flyght. Lyſias inuadeth Jewry, but Judas dryueth hym oute. Judas purifyeth the temple and dedycateth the aultare.

Then toke Gorgyas fyue thouſand men of fote, and a thouſande of the beſt horſmē, & remoued by nyght, to come nye where the Jewes hoſt laye, & ſo to ſlaye them ſodenly. Nowe yͤ men that kepte the caſtell, were the conueyers of them. Then aroſe Judas to ſmyte the chefe & principall of the kynges Hoſt at Emmaus for the army was not yet come together. In the meane ſeaſon came Gorgias by nyght in A Joſeph lib. xij.cap.x.

to Judas tentes: & when he founde no man there, he ſought them in the moūtaynes, and thought they had bene fled awaye, becauſe of him. But when it was daye, Judas ſhewed him ſelfe in the felde with thre thouſande mē only, whych had nether harneſſe ner ſweardes to their myndes.

But on the other ſyde, they ſawe that the Heathen were myghtie and well harneſſed, and their horſmen aboute them, and all theſe well experte in fettes of warre. Then ſayde Judas to the men yͤ were wͭ hym: Feare not ye yͤ multitude of thē, be not afrayed of their violente runnynge: remēbre, howe oure fathers were delyuered *in yͤ reed ſee, whē Pharao folowed vpon them with a greate Hoſt. *Exo.xiiij.f.

Euen ſo lett vs alſo crye nowe towarde heauen: and the Lord ſhall haue mercy vpon vs, and remembre the couenaunt of oure fathers, yee, and deſtroye this Hoſt before oure face thys daye. And all the Heathen ſhall knowe, that it is God hym ſelfe, which delyuereth and ſaueth Jſraell.

B Then the heathen lyft vp their eyes: and when they ſawe that they were commynge agaynſt them, they went out of their tentes into the battayll: and they that were wyth Judas, blewe vp the trompettes. *So they buckled together, and the heathen were diſcōfyted and fled ouer the playne felde: but the hynmoſt of them were ſlayne. For they folowed vpon thē vnto Aſſaremoth, and in to yͤ feldes of Jdumea towarde Azot and Jāmia: ſo that there were ſlayne of them vpō a thre thouſande men. So Judas turned agayne with his Hoſte, and ſayde vnto yͤ people: Be not gredy of the ſpoyles, we haue yet a battayll to fyght, for Gorgias and his hoſt are here by vs in the mountaynes, but ſtande ye faſt agaynſt oure enemyes, & ouercome thē: then maye ye ſafely take the ſpoyles. *i.Macha. viij.d.

C As Judas was ſpeakynge theſe wordes, beholde there appeared one parte of thē vpō the mount. But whan Gorgias ſawe that they of hys partye were fled, and the tentes brent vp (for by the ſmoke they myght vnderſtāde what was done) they perceauynge thys, were very ſore afrayed: and when they ſawe alſo that Judas and hys hooſt were in the felde ready to ſtryke battayll, they fled euerychone into the lande of the heathen.

So Judas turned agayne to ſpoyle the tentes, where they gatt moch golde and ſyluer, precious ſtones, purple & great ryches. Thus they went home, and ſonge a Pſalme of thankeſgeuynge, and prayſed God in heauen: *for he is gracyous, & hys mercy endureth for euer: And ſo Jſrael had a greate victory in that daye. *Pſal.cvij.a Pſal.cxviij.a

Nowe all the Heathen that eſcaped, came and tolde Lyſias euery thynge as it happened. Wherfore Lyſias was ſore afrayed, and greued in hys mynde, becauſe Jſrael had not gotten ſoche myſfortune as he wolde they ſhulde, nether as the kynge cōmaunded. The nexte yeare folowyng, gathered Lyſias thre ſcore thouſande choſen men of fote, and fyue thouſande horſmen, to fyght agaynſt them.

D So they came into Jewry, and pytched their tētes at Bethoron, where Judas came agaynſt them with ten thouſande men. And when he ſawe ſo great & myghtye an hooſt, he made hys prayer and ſayde: Bleſſed be thou (O Sauyoure of Jſraell) *which dyddeſt deſtroye yͤ violent power of the gyaūte, in the hande of thy ſeruaunt Dauid, *and gaueſt the hooſt of the heathen into the hāde of Jonathas (the ſonne of Saul) and of hys weapen bearer. *i.Re.xvij.g *i.Re.xiiij.b

Put thys hooſt nowe into the hāde of thy people of Jſraell, and let them be confounded in their multitude and horſmen. Make them afrayed, & dyſcomforte the boldnes of their ſtrēgth, that they maye be moued thorowe their deſtruccyon. Caſt thē downe thorowe the ſwearde of thy louers, then ſhall all they that knowe thy name, prayſe the wyth thankeſgeuynge.

So they ſtroke the batell, and there were ſlayne of Lyſias hooſt, fyue thouſande men. Then Lyſias ſeynge the dyſcomfetynge of hys men, and the manlyneſſe of the Jewes, howe they were ready, ether to lyue or to dye lyke men: He wēte vnto Antioche, and choſe out men of warre: that whan they were gathered together, they myght come agayne into Jewry. Then ſayde Judas and his brethren: beholde, our enemyes are diſcomfyted: Let vs nowe go vp, to clenſe and to repayre the Sanctuary.

E *Upon this, all the hooſt gathered them together, and wente vp into mount Syon. Nowe whan they ſawe the Sāctuary layed waſte, yͤ aulter defyled, yͤ dores brent vp, the ſhrubbes growinge in the courtes, lyke as in a wod or vpon mountaynes, yee, & yͤ the preſtes Celles were broken downe: They rente their clothes, made great lamentacyon, caſt aſhes vpon their heades, fell downe flat to the grounde, made a greate noyſe wyth the trompettes, and cryed towarde heauen. *ii.Mac.x.a

Then Judas apoynted certayne men to fyght agaynſt thoſe whych were in yͤ caſtell tyll they had clenſed the Sanctuary. So he choſe preſtes yͤ were vndefyled, ſoche as had pleaſure in the lawe of God: and they clenſed the Sanctuary, and bare out the defyled ſtones into an vncleane place. And for ſo moch as the aulter of burnt offerynges was vnhalowed, he toke aduyſement, what he myght do wͭ all: ſo he thought it was beſt to deſtroye it (leſt it ſhulde happē to do thē eny ſhame) for the heathen had defyled it, & therfore they brake it downe. As for the ſtones, they layed them vp vpon the mountayne by the houſe in a conuenient place: tyll there came a prophet, to ſhewe, what ſhulde be done with them.

*Exo.xx.b. Deut.xxvii.a Joſue.viii.f

F *So they toke whole ſtones accordynge to the lawe, ⁊ buylded a newe aulter ſoche one as was before, ⁊ made vp the Sãctuary wythin ⁊ wythout, ⁊ halowed the houſe and the courtes. They made newe ornamẽtes, ⁊ brought the cãdelſtyck, the aulter of incenſe, ⁊ the table into the temple. The incẽſe layed they vpon the aulter, ⁊ lyghted the lampes which were vpon the candelſtycke, that they myght burne in the tẽple. They ſet the ſhewbred vpon the table, and hãged vp the vayle, and ſet vp yͤ temple, as it was afore. *And vpon the .xxv. daye of the .ix. moneth, which is called the moneth of Caſleu, in the .Cxlviii yeare: they roſe vp by tymes in yͤ mornynge for to do ſacrifyce (accordynge to the lawe) vpon the newe burnt offrynge aulter yͭ they had made: after the tyme and ſeaſon that the heathen had defyled it. The ſame daye was it ſet vp agayne, wyth ſonges, pypes, harpes and cymbales.

*2.Mac.x.a

G And all the people fell vpon theyr faces, worſhyppynge ⁊ thãckynge the God of heauen, which had geuẽ them the victory. *So they kepte the dedicacyon of the aulter .viii. dayes, offrynge burnt ſacrifyces ⁊ thankofferynges with gladneſſe. They deckte the tẽple alſo with crownes ⁊ ſhyldes of gold, and halowed the portes ⁊ celles ⁊ hanged dores vpon thẽ. Thus there was very great gladnes amonge the people, becauſe the blaſphemy of the heathen was put awaye. So Judas and hys brethren with the whole cõgregacyon of Iſrael, ordeyned, *that the tyme of the dedicacyõ of the aulter ſhulde be kepte in his ſeaſon frõ yeare to yeare, by the ſpace of .viii. dayes, from the .xxv. daye of the moneth Caſleu: with myrth and gladneſſe.

*2.par.vii.b *John.x.c.

And at the ſame tyme buylded they vp yͤ mount Syon wyth hye walles and ſtronge towres rounde about: leſt the Gẽtiles ſhulde come and treade it downe, as they dyd afore. Therfore Judas ſett men of warre in it, to kepe it: and made it ſtronge, for to defende *Bethſura: that the people myght haue a refuge agaynſt the Edomytes.

¶ The .v. Chapter.

¶ Judas vanquyſhed the heathen that go aboute to deſtroye Iſrael, and is holpen of hys brethren Symon ⁊ Jonathas. He ouerthrowed the cytie of Ephron, becauſe they denyed hym paſſage thorowe it.

*Joſeph.ca. xi.lib.xii.

I IT happened alſo that whan the heathen roũde about herde, howe that the aulter ⁊ the Sanctuary were ſett vp in their olde eſtate: it diſpleaſed them very ſore, wherfore they thought to deſtroye the generacyon of Jacob that was amõge them: In ſo moch that they beganne to ſlaye and to perſecute certayne of yͤ people. *Then Judas fought agaynſt the chyldrẽ of Eſau in Idumea, and agaynſt thoſe whych were at Arabathane (for they dwelt rounde aboute yͤ Iſraelites) where he ſlewe and ſpoyled a greate multitude of them. He thought alſo vpõ the malice and vnfaythfulnes of the chyldren of Bean, howe they were a ſnare and ſtoppe vnto the people, and howe they layed wayte for them in the hye waye: Wherfore he ſhut them vp in to towers, and came vnto them, deſtroyed thẽ vtterly, and brent vp their towres, with all that were in them.

*Gen.xxvi.a. and.xxxvi.c. ii.Mach.x.c.

Afterwarde, wente he agaynſt the chyldren of Ammon, wherof he founde a myghtye power ⁊ a greate multitude of people, with Timothy their captayne. So he ſtroke many battayls with them, whych were deſtroyed before hym. And when he had ſlayne them, he wanne Gazer the cytie, wyth the townes belongynge therto, and ſo turned agayne into Jewry. The heathen alſo in Galaad gathered them together agaynſt the Iſraelites that were in their quarters, to ſlaye them: but they fled to the caſtell of Datheman, and ſent letters vnto Judas ⁊ hys brethren ſayinge: H The heathen are gathered agaynſt vs on euery ſyde, to deſtroye vs, ⁊ nowe they make thẽ redy for to come, ⁊ laye ſege to the caſtell, wherunto we are fled, and Timothy is captayne of their hooſt: come therfore, and delyuer vs out of their handes, for there is a greate multitude of vs ſlayne all ready. Yee, and oure brethren that were at Tubin, are ſlayne ⁊ deſtroyed (well nye a thouſande men) and their wyues, their chyldren and their goodes haue the enemyes led awaye captyue.

Whyle theſe letters were yet a readynge, beholde, there came other meſſaungers from Galilee, with rente clothes: which tolde euen the ſame tydynges, and ſayde, that they of Ptolomays, of Tyrus and of Sydon were gathered agaynſt them, and that all Galilee was fylled with enemyes to deſtroye Iſrael *When Judas ⁊ the people herde thys, they came together (a greate cõgregacyon) to deuyſe, what they myght do for their brethrẽ, that were in trouble ⁊ beſeged of theyr enemyes. And Judas ſayde vnto Symõ his brother: choſe the out certayne men, and go delyuer thy brethren in Galilee: As for me ⁊ my brother Jonathas, we wyll go into Galaaditim. So he left Joſephus the ſonne of Zachary, and Azarias to be Captaynes of the people, and to kepe the remnaunt of the hooſt in Jewry, and commaunded them, ſayinge: Take the ouerſyght of thys people, and ſe yͭ ye make no warre agaynſt the heathen, vntyll the tyme that we come agayne. And vnto Symon he gaue thre thouſande men, for to go into Galilee, but Judas hym ſelfe had

eyght thouſande in Galaadithim.

C Then wente Symon into Galilee, and ſtroke diuerſe battelles wyth the Heathen: whom he diſcomfyted, and folowed vpõ thẽ vnto yͤ porte of Ptolomais. And there were ſlayne of the Heathen all moſt .iij. thouſande men. So he toke the ſpoyles of them, and caryed awaye the Iſraelytes, that were in Galilee and Arbatis, with theyr wyues, theyr chyldren and all that they had, and brought them into Iewry with greate gladneſſe. Iudas Machabeus alſo and his brother Ionathas wente ouer Iordane, and traueyled .iij. dayes iourney in the wyldernеſſe: Where the Nebuthees met them, and receaued them louingly, and tolde thẽ euery thynge that had happened vnto theyr brethren in Galaadithim, and howe that many of them were beſeged in Baraſa, Boſor, Alimis, Caſphor, Mageth and Carnaim (all theſe are ſtronge walled and myghtie greate cyties) and that they were kepte in other cyties of Galaad alſo: and to morowe they are apoynted to brynge theyr hoſt vnto theſe cyties, to take them, and to wynne them in one daye.

So Iudas and his hoſt turned in all the haſte in the wilderneſſe towarde Boſor, and wanne the cytie, ſlewe all the males with the ſwearde, toke all theyr goodes, and ſett fyre vpon the cytie. And in the nyght they toke theyr iourneye from thence, and came to the caſtell. And by tymes in the mornynge when they loked vp, beholde, there was an innumerable people bearynge laders and other inſtrumẽtes of warre, to take the caſtell and to ouercome them.

When Iudas ſawe that the battayll beganne, and that the noyſe therof wente vp & range in to the heauen, and that there was ſo greate a crye in yͤ cytie: He ſayde vnto hys hoſt: fyght thys daye for your brethren. And ſo came behynde theyr enemyes in thre companyes, and blewe vp the trompettes, and cryed in theyr prayer to God.

But as ſoone as Timothes hoſt perceaued yͭ Machabeus was there, they fled from hym, and the other ſlewe them downe ryght ſore: ſo yͭ there were kylled of them the ſame daye, almoſt eyght thouſande mẽ. Then departed Iudas vnto Maſpha, layed ſege vnto it, and wanne it, ſlewe all the males in it, ſpoyled it, and ſet fyre vpon it. From thence wẽte he and toke Caſbon, Mageth, Boſor, and the other cy[illegible]n Galaad.

D *After thys gathered Timothy another hoſte, which pitched their tentes before Raphon beyonde the water. Iudas alſo ſent to ſpye the hoſte, & they brought hym worde agayne, ſayinge: All the heathen that be rounde aboute vs, are gathered vnto hym, and the hooſt is very great: Yee, they haue hyred the Arabians to helpe them, & haue pytched their tentes beyonde the water, and are ready to come & fyght agaynſt the. So Iudas wente on to mete them.

And Timothy ſayde vnto the captaynes of hys hooſt: when Iudas & hys hooſt come nye the ryuer: yf he go ouer fyrſt, we ſhal not be able to withſtande him: for why? he wyll be to ſtrõge for vs. But yf he darre not come ouer, ſo yͭ he pytche his tente beyõde the water: thẽ will we go ouer, for we ſhalbe ſtrõge ynough agaynſt him. Nowe as ſoone as Iudas came to yͤ ryuer, he appoynted certayne ſcribes of the people, & commaunded them, ſayinge: ſe that ye leaue none behinde vpon thys ſyde of the ryuer, but let euery mã come to the battayll. So he wente fyrſt ouer vnto them, and his people after him.

And all the Heathem were diſcomfyted before him, and let their weapens fal, & rãne into the tẽple that was at Carnaim. Whych cytie Iudas wanne, and brent the temple with all that were in it: So was Carnaim ſubdued, and myght not withſtande Iudas. Then Iudas gathered all yͤ Iſraelites that were in Galaadithim, frõ the leaſt vnto the moſt, with theyr wyues and theyr chyldren (a very greate hooſt) for to come into the lande of Iſraell.

*So they came vnto Ephrõ, which was E a myghtie, greate and ſtronge cytie, and laye in their waye. For they coulde not go by it, nether of the ryght hande ner of the left, but muſt go thorow it. Neuertheleſſe, they that were in the cytie, wolde not let them go thorowe, but walled vp the portes with ſtones And Iudas ſent vnto them with peaceable wordes ſayinge: Let vs paſſe thorow youre lande, that we maye goo into oure awne countre: there ſhall no body do you harme, we wyll but only go thorowe on fote. But they wolde not let them in.

Wherfore Iudas commaunded a proclamacyon to be made thorowe oute the Hoſte, that euery man ſhulde kepe his ordre: and ſo they dyd their beſt lyke valeaunt men.

And Iudas beſeged yͤ cytie all that daye and all that nyght, and ſo wanne it, where they ſlewe as many as were males, and deſtroyed the cytie, and ſpoyled it, and wente thorowe all the cytie ouer thẽ yͭ were ſlayne. Then wẽt they ouer Iordane into yͤ playne felde before Bethſã. And Iudas helped thoſe forwarde yͭ cam behynde and gaue the people good exhortacyon all the waye thorowe, tyll they were come into the lande of Iuda. Thus they wente vp vnto the mõut Syon, where they offred with myrth * & thanckeſgeuynge: because there were none of them ſlayne, but came home agayne peaceably.

Nowe what tyme as Iudas & Ionathas were in the lande of Galaad, and Symon their brother in Gallilee before Ptolomays:

Then Joſephus the ſonne of zachari and Aſarias the captaynes, hearynge of the actes that were done and of the battels that were stryken, ſayde: Lett vs get vs a name alſo, and go fyght agaynſt the Heathen that are rounde aboute vs.

F So they gaue their hooſt a commaundement, and wente towarde Jamnia. Then came Gorgyas & hys men out of the cytie, to fyght agaynſt them: Joſephus alſo & Aſarias were chaſed vnto yͤ borders of Jewry, and there were ſlayne that daye of yͤ people of Iſrael .ij. M. men: ſo yͭ there was a great miſery amonge yͤ people, * & all becauſe they were not obedient vnto Judas and his brethren, but thought they ſhulde quyte thē ſelues manfully. Neuertheles they came not of the ſede of theſe men, by whom Iſraell was helped. But the men that were with Judas, were greatly commended in the ſyght of all Iſraell and all Heathen, whereſoeuer theyr name was herde vpon, and the people came vnto them, byddynge them welcome.

After thys wente Judas forth wyth hys brethren, and fought agaynſt the children of Eſau, in the lande yͭ lyeth towarde the ſouth where he wanne the cytie of Hebron and the townes yͭ lye beſyde it: and as for the walles and towres rounde aboute it, he brent them vp. Then remoued he to go into the lande of the Philiſtines, and wente thorowe Samaria. At the ſame tyme were there many preſtes ſlayne in the battayll, whych wylfully and without aduiſement wente out for to fyght to get them honoure. And wen Judas cam to Azot in the Philiſtines lande, * he brake downe their aultars, brent the ymages of their Idols, ſpoyled the cyties, & came agayne into the lande of Juda.

NOwe whē kynge Antiochus trauayled thorowe the hye coūtrees, he herde yͭ Elymas in Perſia was a noble & plenteous cytie in ſyluer & gold, & yͭ there was in it a very ryche tēple: where as were clothes, cote armoures & ſhyldes of golde, which Alexander the ſonne of Philippe kyng of Macedonia (yͭ raygned fyrſt in Greke londe) had lefte behynde him. Wherfore, he wēte about to take the cytie & to ſpoyle it, but he was not able: for the cyteſyns were warned of it, & fought with him. And ſo he fled & departed wͭ greate heuyneſſe, and came agayne into Babylon. Moreouer, there came one whych brought him tydynges in Perſide, * that his hooſtes which were in the lande of Juda, where dryuen awaye, and howe that Lyſias wēt forth fyrſt wyth a greate power, and was dryuen awaye of yͤ Jewes: howe yͭ they had wonne the victory, and gotten greate goodes out of the hooſtes yͭ peryſhed: howe they had brokē downe the abhominacyon, * which he ſet vp vpō the altare at Jeruſalem, and fenced the Sanctuary with hye walles, lyke as it was afore: yee, and Bethſura hys cyte alſo.

B So it chaunced, that when the kynge had herde theſe wordes, he was afrayed and greued very ſore. Wherfore, he layed hym downe vpon hys bed, and fell ſycke for very ſorowe: and all becauſe it had not happened as he had deuiſed. And there cōtynued he longe, for hys grefe was euer, more & more, ſo that he ſawe he muſt nedes dye. Therfore he ſent for hys frendes, & ſayde vnto thē: the ſlepe is gone fro myne eyes, for the very ſorowe and vexacyon of herte that I haue. For when I conſydre in my mynde the greate aduerſyte that I am come vnto, and the floudes of heuyneſſe whych I am come in, where as afore tyme I was ſo mery, and ſo greatly ſet by (by reaſon of my power.) Agayne, conſyderynge the euell that I haue done at Jeruſalem, frō whēce I toke all the ryches of golde and ſyluer that were in it, and ſent to fetche awaye yͤ inhabitours of Jewry without any reaſon why: I knowe, that theſe troubles are come vpō me for the ſame cauſe. And beholde, I muſt dye wyth greate ſorowe in a ſtraunge lande. Then called he for one Philip a frende of hys, whom he made ruler of all hys realme, & gaue hym the crowne, hys roabe & his rynge: yͭ he ſhulde take his ſonne Antiochus vnto him, & brynge hym vp, tyll he myght raygne hym ſelfe. * So the kynge Antiochus dyed there, in yͤ .cxlix. yeare. Whē Lyſias knewe that the kynge was deed, he ordened Antiochus his ſonne. (* whō he had brought vp) to raygne in his fathers ſteade, & called him Eupator. Elephantes well exercyſed to battaill. * Theſe came thorow Jdumea vnto Bethſura, & beſeged it a longe ſeaſon, and made diuerſe inſtrumentes of warre agaynſt it. But the Jewes came out and brent thē, and fought lyke men: Then departed Judas frō the caſtell at Jeruſalē, & remoued the hoſt towarde Bethzacaran ouer agaynſt the kynges armye:

So the kynge aroſe before the daye, and brought the power of hys Hoſt into ẏ waye to Bethzacaran, where the Hoſtes made thē ready to ẏ battayll, blowynge ẏ trōpettes. And to prouoke the Elephātes for to fyght, they ſhewed them the ſappe of reed grapes & molberies. And deuided ẏ Elephātes amōge the Hoſte: ſo that by euery Elephante there ſtode a. M. men well harneſſed, & helmettes of ſtele vpon theyr heades: Yee, vnto euery one of the Elephantes alſo, were ordened. v. C. horſmen of the beſt, whych wayted on the Elephāte, goynge whereſoeuer he wēte, and departed not from hym. Euery Elephant was couered wyth a ſtronge tower of wod, where vpon were. xxxij. valeaūte men wyth weapens to fyght, and within was a man of Jnde to rule the beeſt.

As for the remnaunt of the horſmen, he ſett them vpon both the ſydes in two partes with trompettes, to prouoke the Hoſte, and to ſtere vp ſoch as were ſlowe in the armye. And when the ſunne ſhone vpō their ſhyldes of golde and ſtele, the mountaynes glyſtered agayne at them, and were as bryght as the creſſettes of fyre. The kinges hooſt alſo was deuyded, one parte vpon the hye mountaynes, the other lowe beneth: ſo they went on, takynge good hede, and kepynge theyr ordre. And all they that dwelt in the lāde, were afrayed at the noyſe of their hooſt, when the multitude wente forth, & when the weapens ſmote together, for the hooſt was both great & myghty. Judas alſo & hys hooſt entred into the batayll, & ſlewe. vi. C. men of the kynges armye. Nowe when Eleaſar the ſonne of Saura dyd ſe one of the Elephantes deckte with the kynges badge, & was a more goodly beaſt then the other: he thought the kynge ſhulde be vpō hym, & ieoparded hym ſelfe to delyuer hys people, and to get hym a perpetuall name. Wherfore, he rāne with a corage vnto the Elephāte in the myddeſt of ẏ hooſt, ſmyttynge them downe of both the ſydes, & ſlewe many aboute him. So wente he to the Elephātes fete, & gat him vnder him, & ſlewe him: then fell the Elephant downe vpō him, & there he dyed. Judas alſo & his men ſeynge the power of the kynge & ẏ myghtye violēce of his hooſt, departed frō them. And the kynges armye wente vp agaynſt them towarde Jeruſalem, & pytched theyr tentes in Jewry beſyde mount Sion. Moreouer, ẏ kynge toke truſe with them that were in * Bethſura.

But when they came out of the cyte (becauſe they had no vitales within, & the lande laye vntylled) ẏ kyng toke Bethſura, & ſett men to kepe it, & turned his hooſt to the place of the Sanctuary, & layed ſiege to it a great whyle. Where he made all maner ordinaūce: handbowes, fyrie dartes, rackettes to caſt ſtones, ſcorpiōs to ſhote arowes, & ſlynges. The Jewes alſo made ordinaunce agaynſt theyrs, and fought a longe ſeaſon.

But in the cyte there were no vytayles, for it was the ſeuenth yeare of the warres, & thoſe Heathē that remayned in Jewry, had eaten vp all theyr ſtoare. And in the Sanctuary were fewe men lefte, for the hunger came ſo vpon them, that they were ſcatered abroade euery man to hys awne place.

*ij. Macha. vi. b.

So when Lyſias hearde that Philyp (* whō Antiochus the kynge whyle he was yet lyuynge, had ordened to brynge vp Antiochus his ſonne, that he myght be kynge) was come agayne out of Perſia and Medea with the kynges hooſt, & thought to optayne the kyngdome. He gat him to ẏ kynge in all the haſte, & to the captaynes of the hooſt, and ſayde: we decreaſe dayly, & oure vytales are but ſmall: Agayne, the place that we laye ſege vnto, is very ſtrōge, & it were our parte to ſe for the realme. Let vs agre wyth theſe men, and take truce with them, and with all theyr people, anb graunte them to lyue after theyr lawe, as they dyd afore. For they be greued & do all theſe thinges agaynſt vs, becauſe we haue deſpyſed theyr lawe. So the kynge and the prynces were content, & ſent vnto them to make peace, & they receaued it. Nowe whē the kynge & ẏ prynces had made an othe vnto thē, they came out of the caſtell, and the kynge wente vp to mount Syon. But when he ſawe that the place was well fenced, he brake the othe that he had made, & commaunded to deſtroye the wall rounde aboute. Then departed he in all the haſte, and returned vnto Antioche, where he founde Philip hauynge dominyon of the cytie. So he fought agaynſt hym, and toke the cytie agayne into hys handes.

¶The .vij. Chapter.

¶ Demetrius raygned after he had kylled Antiochus & Lyſias. He troubleth the chyldren of Iſrael thorowe the councell of certen wycked perſonnes. The prayer of the Preſtes agaynſt Nicanor. Iudas killeth Nicanor, after he had made his prayer.

A In the .Clj. yeare came Demetrius the ſonne of Selcucus from the cytie of Rome wyth a ſmall company of men, vnto a cytie of yͤ ſee coaſt, & there he bare rule. And it chaũced, that when he came to Antioche the cytie of his Progenitours, his hoſt toke Antiochus & Lyſias, to brynge them vnto him. But when it was tolde him, he ſayde: let me not ſe their faces: So the hooſt put them to death. Nowe when Demetrius was ſet vpõ the trone of hys kyngdome, there came vnto him wycked & vngodly mẽ of Iſrael: whoſe captayne was Alcimus, yͭ wolde haue bene made hye preſte: Theſe men accuſed the people of Iſrael vnto the kynge, ſayinge: Iudas & hys brethren haue ſlayne thy frendes, and dryuẽ vs out of oure awne lande. Wherfore, ſende nowe ſome mã (to whom thou geueſt credence) yͭ he maye go and ſe all the deſtruccyon, whych he hath done vnto vs & to the kynges lãde, and lett him be punyſhed wyth all hys frendes and fauourers.

B Then the kynge choſe Bachides a frende of hys, which was a man of greate power in the realme (beyonde the greate water) and faythfull vnto the kynge: and ſent hym to ſe the deſtruccyon that Iudas had done. And as for that wycked Alcimus, he made hym hye preſte, and commaunded him to be auenged of the chyldren of Iſraell. So they ſtode vp, and came wyth a greate hooſt into the lande of Iuda, ſendynge meſſaũgers to Iudas & hys brethren, & ſpeakynge vnto them wyth peaceable wordes: but vnder diſceate.
*i. Mac.i.b. * Therfore Iudas & hys people beleued not theyr ſayinge, for they ſawe that they were come with a greate hooſt.

After thys came the ſcribes together vnto Alcimus & Bachides, truſtynge the beſt vnto them. And fyrſt the Aſſideãs requyred peace of them, ſayinge: Alcimus the preſte is come of yͤ ſede of Aarõ, howe can he diſceaue vs? So they gaue them louynge wordes, & ſwore vnto them, & ſayde: we will do you no harme: nether youre frendes: & they beleued them. But the very ſame daye toke they .lx. men of them & ſlewe them accordynge to the

C rounde about Ieruſalẽ, & there was no man yͭ wolde bury them. So there came a greate feare and drede amonge the people, ſayinge: there is nether trueth nor ryghteouſneſſe in them, for they haue broken the appoyntemẽt and othe that they made. And Bachides remoued his hooſt frõ Ieruſalem, and pytched his tente at Betzecha: where he ſent forth, & toke many of them that had forſaken hym: He ſlewe many of the people alſo, and caſt them into a greate pytt. Then commytted he yͤ lande vnto Alcimus, and left mẽ of warre wyth him to helpe him, & Bachides him ſelfe wente vnto the kynge. And thus Alcimus defended hys hye preſthode: and all ſoche as vexed Iſrael reſorted vnto him: In ſo moche that they optayned the lande of Iuda, and dyd moche euell vnto the Iſraelites.

Nowe when Iudas ſawe all the myſchefs that Alcimus and his cõpany had done (yee, more then the Heathen them ſelues) vnto the Iſraelites: he wente forth rounde about all the borders of Iewry, and punyſhed thoſe vnfaythfull rennagates, ſo that they came nomore out into the countre. So when Alcimus ſawe, that Iudas and hys people had gotten the vpperhande, and that he was not able to abyde them: he wente agayne to the kynge, and ſayde all the worſt of them that he coulde. Then the kynge ſent Nicanor, one of hys chefe prynces (whych bare euell wyll vnto Iſrael) and commaunded hym, that he ſhulde vtterly deſtroye the people.

* So Nicanor came to Ieruſalem wyth D
a greate hooſt, and ſent vnto Iudas and his *ii. Mach. xv.a.
brethren wyth frendly wordes (but vnder diſceate) ſayẽge: there ſhall be no warre betwyxte me & you: I wyll come wyth a fewe men, to ſe howe ye do, with frendſhyppe. Vpõ thys he came vnto Iudas, and they ſaluted one another peaceably: but yͤ enemyes were appoynted to take Iudas by violence. Neuertheles it was tolde Iudas, that he came vnto hym but vnder diſceate: wherfore, he gat hym awaye from hym, and wolde ſe his face nomore. When Nicanor perceaued that hys councell was bewrayed, he went out to fyght agaynſt Iudas, beſyde Capharſalama: where there were ſlayne of Nicanors hooſt .v. M. men: and the reſydue fled vnto the caſtell of Dauid.

After this came Nicanor vp vnto mount Syon: and the preſtes with the elders of the people wente forth to ſalute him peaceably, & to ſhewe him the burntſacrifyces that were offered for the kynge. But he laughed thẽ and the people to ſcorne, mocked thẽ, defyled their offerynges, & ſpake diſdaynefully, yee, E

When Nicanor was gone from Jeruſalem, he pitched hys tente at Bethoron, and there an hooſt met hym out of Syria. And Judas came to Adarſa with thre thouſande men, & made hys prayer vnto God, ſayeng: O Lord, * becauſe ẏ meſſaungers of kynge Senacherib blaſphemed ẏ, the angell went forth, and ſlewe an hundred foure ſcore and fyue thouſande of them. Euen ſo deſtroye thou thys hooſt before vs to daye, ẏ other people maye knowe how that he hath blaſphemed thy Sanctuary: & punyſh hym accordynge to hys malyciouſneſſe.

And ſo the hooſtes ſtroke the felde, the thyrtene daye of the moneth * Adar: and Nicanors hooſt was dyſconfyted, * and he him ſelfe was fyrſte ſlayne in the battaylle. When Nicanors men of warre ſawe that he was kylled, they caſt awaye theyr weapens and fled, but the Jewes folowed vpon them an whole dayes iourney, from Adazer vnto Gazara, blowynge with ẏ trõpettes, and makynge tokens after them. So ẏ Jewes came forth of all ẏ townes there about, and blewe out theyr hornes vpon them, and turned agaynſt them. Thus were they all ſlayne, and not one of them lefte.

* Februarij. * ij.Mac.xv.d

Then they toke theyr ſubſtaunce for a pray, and ſmote of Nicanors heade and hys ryght hande (* which he helde vp ſo proudly) and brought it with them, & hãged it vp afore Jeruſalem. Wherfore, the people were exceadyngly reioyſed, and paſſed ouer that day in great gladneſſe. And Judas ordeyned, that ẏ ſame daye (namely ẏ thyrtynth daye of the moneth Adar) ſhulde be kepte in myrth euery yeare. Thus the lande of Juda was in reſt a lytle whyle.

The. viij. Chapter.

Judas conſyderyng the power and godly pollicye of the Romaynes maketh peace with them. The reſcrypt of the Romaynes ſent vnto the Jewes.

A IUdas hearde alſo the fame of the Romaynes, that they were myghtye and valeaunt men, & agreable to all thynges that are required of them, & make peace with all men, whiche come vnto them, and how they were doughty men of ſtrẽgth. Beſydes ẏ it was tolde hym of theyr battayles, and noble actes whiche they dyd in Galacia, howe they had conquered them, and brought them vnder tribute: and what greate thynges they had done in Spayne: how that wͭ their wyſdome & ſober behauour they had wõne the Mynes of ſiluer & gold ẏ are there, & optayned all ẏ lãde, with other places farre from them: howe they had diſconfyted & ſlayne downe ẏ kynges ẏ came vpon them, from the vttermoſt parte of ẏ earth, and how other people gaue thẽ tribute euery yeare. How they had ſlayn and ouercome Philip and Perſes kynges of Cethim, and other mo (in battaylle) whiche had brought theyr ordinaunce agaynſt thẽ: how they diſcõfyted great Antiochus king of Aſia (that wolde nedes fyght wyth thẽ) hauynge an hundred & twenty Elephantes, with horſemen, charettes, and a very great hooſt: howe they toke hym ſelfe alyue, & ordeyned him (with ſoch as ſhuld raygne after hym) to paye them a greate trybute. * Yee, and to fynde them good ſuertyes & pledge: beſydes all thys, howe they had taken from hym India, Media, and Lydia (hys beſt lãdes) and geuen them to kynge Eumenus. Agayne, how they perceauyng that ẏ Grekes were cõmynge to vexe thẽ: ſent agaynſt them a captayne of an hooſt, which gaue thẽ battaylle, ſlewe many of them, led awaye theyr wyues and chyldren captyue, ſpoyled thẽ, toke poſſeſſion of theyr lande, deſtroyed theyr ſtronge holdes, and ſubdued them to be theyr bonde men, vnto thys daye. Moreouer, howe that as for other kyngdomes & Jles, which ſomtyme withſtode them, they deſtroyed them, and broughte them vnder theyr dominyõ. But helped euer theyr awne frendes and thoſe that where confederat wͭ them, and conquered kyngdomes both farre and nye: and that whoſoeuer herde of theyr renowne, was afrayed of them: for whome they wolde helpe to theyr kingdomes, thoſe raygned: and whome it lyked not them to raygne, they put him downe. And how they were come to greate preeminence: hauynge no kynge among them, nether any man clothed in purple, to be magnyfyed there thorow, but had ordeyned them ſelues a perlament, where in there ſat thre hundred & twẽty Senatours daylye vpon the councell, to diſpatch euer ẏ buſyneſſe of the people, & to kepe good ordre. And how that euery yeare they choſe a Mayre, to haue ẏ gouernaunce of all theyr lande: to whom euery man was obedient, & there was nether euell wyll nor diſcencyon amonge them.

B * i. Mac.i.a.

C Then Judas choſe Eupolemus ẏ ſonne of Jhon the ſonne of Jacob, and Jaſon the ſonne of Eleazar, & ſente them vnto Rome for to make frendſhippe and a bonde of loue with them: that they might take from them the bõdage of ẏ Grekes, for ẏ Jewes ſawe, that the Grekes wolde ſubdue ẏ kyngdome of Jſrael. So they went vnto Rome (a very great iourney) & came into the parlamẽt, and ſayd: Judas Machabeus with hys brethren and ẏ people of ẏ Jewes hath ſent vs vnto you, to make a bõde of frẽdſhyppe and peace wͭ you, & ye to note vs as youre louers and frendes. And yͤ matter pleaſed the Romaynes right wel, wherfore it was written vp: of the whych yͤ Romaynes made a wrytynge in tables of braſſe, and ſent it to Ieruſalem: that they myght haue by them a memoriall of the ſame peace & bonde of frendſhyp after thys maner: God ſaue yͤ Romaynes and the people of the Iewes both by ſee and by land, and kepe the ſweard and enemy frõ thẽ for euermore. If there come firſt any warre vpon the Romaynes or any of theyr frẽdes thorowe out all theyr dominyon, the people of the Iewes ſhall helpe them (as the tyme requyreth) & that with all their hertes. Alſo they ſhall nether geue nor ſende vnto their enemyes vitayles, weapens, money nor ſhyppes: but fulfyll thys charge at yͤ Romaynes pleaſure, & take nothyng frõ them therfore. Agayne yf the people of the Iewes happen fyrſt to haue warre, the Romaynes ſhall ſtãde by them wᵗ a good wyll, accordynge as yͤ tyme wyll ſuffre. Nether ſhall they geue vnto yͤ Iewes enemyes, vytales, weapens, money nor ſhyppes. Thus are the Romaynes cõtẽt to do, and ſhall fulfyll their charge without any diſceate.

D Accordyng to theſe articles, the Romaynes made the bonde with the Iewes. Now after theſe articles (ſayde they) yf any of the parties wyll put to thẽ, or take any thynge from them: they ſhall do it wᵗ the conſente of both: & what ſoeuer they adde vnto them or take from them, it ſhall ſtande faſt. And as touchyng yͤ euell that Demetrius hath done vnto the Iewes, we haue written vnto him ſayenge:, wherfore layeſte thou thy heuye yocke vpon yͤ Iewes oure frendes & louers? Yf they make any complaynte of the agayne vnto vs, we ſhall defende them, and fyghte with the by ſee and by lande.

¶ The .ix. Chapter.

¶ After the deeth of Nycanor. Demetrius ſendeth hys armye agaynſt Iudas. Iudas is ſlayne. Ionathas is put in the ſteade of hys brother. The ſtryfe betwene Ionathas and Bachydes. Alcymus is taken with the palſye and dyeth. Bachydes retourneth agayne vnto yͤ king He cometh vpon Ionathas by the councell of certayne wycked perſonnes, and is ouercome. The truce of Ionathas with Bachydes.

A IN the meane ſeaſon whẽ Demetrius herde that * Nicanor and hys hooſte was ſlayne in the felde, he proceded further to ſende Bachydes and Alcymus agayne into Iewry, & thoſe that were in the ryght wynge of hys hooſt, with them. So they went forth by the waye yͭ ledeth vnto Galgala, and pitched theyr tentes before Meſaloth which is in arbellis, and wanne the cytye & ſlewe moche people. In the fyrſte moneth of the .Clii. yeare, they broughte theyr hooſt to Ieruſalem, and roſe vp & came to Berea, with .xx. M. fotemen, & .ii. M. horſmen.

*i. Mac. vij. f
Ioſephus ca. xvij. lib. xii.

Now Iudas had pytched his tẽte at Layſa, with thre thouſande choſen men. And when they ſawe the multytude of the other army that it was ſo greate, they were ſore afrayed, and many cõueyed them ſelues out of the hooſt, In ſo moch that there abode no mo of them but eyght hundred men. When Iudas ſawe yͭ his hoſt fayled hym, and that he muſt nedes fight: it brake his herte, that he had no tyme to gather them together: wherfore the man was in extreme trouble. Neuertheleſſe, he ſayde vnto them, that remayned with hym. Up, let vs go agaynſte oure enemyes, peraduẽture we ſhalbe able, to fyght with them. But they wolde haue ſtopped hym, ſayenge: we ſhall not be able, therfore let vs now ſaue our lyues, and turne agayne to our brethren and then will we fyght agaynſt thẽ, for we are here but fewe. And Iudas ſayde: God forbyd, yͭ we ſhulde fle from them. B Wherfore, yf oure tyme become, let vs dye manfully for oure brethren, and let vs not ſtayne oure honoure. Then the hooſt remoued out of yͤ tentes, and ſtode agaynſte them. The horſmen are devyded in two partes: the ſlynge caſters & archers wente before yͤ hooſt, and all the myghtye men were formoſt in yͤ felde. Bachides hym ſelfe was in yͤ ryght wyng of yͤ battayl, and the hooſt drewe nye in two partes, & blewe the trompettes. They of Iudas ſyde blewe the trompettes alſo, & the earth ſhoke at the noyſe of yͤ hoſtes, & they ſtroke a felde frome the morow tyll nyghte. And when Iudas ſawe yͭ Bachides hooſt was ſtrongeſt of the ryghte ſyde, he toke with hym all the hardy men, & brake yͤ ryght wynge of theyr ordre, & folowed vpon them vnto yͤ mount Azot.

Now when they which were of the lefte wyng, ſawe that yͤ ryght ſyde was diſcõfyte, they perſecuted Iudas & them yͭ were wᵗ hym. Then was there a ſore battaylle, for many were ſlayne & wounded of both yͤ parties, Iudas alſo hym ſelfe was kylled, & the remnaunt fled. So Ionathas and Symon toke Iudas theyr brother, and buryed hym in his fathers ſepulchre in yͤ citie of Modin. And all yͤ people of Iſraell made great lamẽtacion for hym, & mourned longe, ſayenge: Alas, that thys worthy ſhulde be ſlayne, which delyuered the people of Iſrael. As for other thynges perteynynge to the battayles of Iudas, the noble actes that he dyd and of hys worthyneſſe: they are not wrytten, for they were very many.

C * And after yͤ death of Iudas, wicked men came vp in all the coaſtes of Iſraell, & there aroſe all ſoche as worke vngodlyneſſe. In thoſe dayes was there a great dearthe in the lande, and all the countre gaue ouer them ſelues and theyrs vnto Bachydes. So Bachydes choſe wycked men, and made them

lordes in yͤ lande. Theſe ſoughte out & made ſearch for Judas frendes, and brought them vnto Bachydes: which auẽged him ſelf vpõ them with great deſpyte. And there came ſo great trouble in Iſraell, as was not ſens the tyme that no prophet was ſene there.

Then came all Judas frendes together, and ſayde vnto Jonathas: For ſo moche as thy brother Judas is deed, there is none lyke hym to go forth agaynſt our enemyes, agaynſt Bachides, & ſoch as are aduerſaries vnto oure people. Wherfore, thys daye we choſe yͤ for hym, to be oure prince & captayne to ordre oure battayle. And Jonathas toke the gouernaunce vpon hym at the ſame tyme, and ruled in ſteade of his brother Judas. When Bachides gat knowledge therof, he ſought for to ſley hym. But Jonathas and Symon hys brother, perceauinge that, fled into the wildernes of Thecua with all their company, and pytched their tẽtes by the water pole of Aſphar.

Which when Bachides vnderſtode, he came ouer Jordane with all hys hooſt vpon yͤ Sabboth day. Now had Jonathas ſent his brother Jhon (a captayne of the people) to praye hys frendes the Nabuthytes, yͭ they wolde lende them their ordinaunce, for they had moche. So the chyldrẽ of Jambry came D out of Madaba, and toke Jhon and all that he had, and went theyr waye withall. Then came worde vnto Jonathas & Symon hys brother, that the chyldren of Jambry made a great mariage, and broughte the bride frõ Madaba wyth greate pompe: for ſhe was daughter to one of yͤ nobleſt prynces of Canaã. Wherfore, they remembred the bloude of Jhon their brother, and went vp and hyd them ſelues vnder the ſhadowe of the mountayne.

So they lifte vp theyr eyes, and loked, & beholde, there was moch a do, and great repayre: for the brydegrome came forth, & hys frendes and hys brethren mete them wͭ tympanyes, inſtrumẽtes of muſycke, and many weapens. Then Jonathas and they yͭ were with hym, roſe out of their lourkyng places agaynſt them, and ſlewe many of them. As for the remnaunt, they fled into yͤ mountaynes, and they toke all theyr ſubſtaũce. Thus the maryage was turned to mourning, and the noyſe of theyr melody into lamentacyõ. And ſo when they had auenged the bloud of theyr brother, they turned agayne vnto Jordane.

Bachides hearynge thys, came vnto the C very border of Jordane with a great power vpon yͤ Sabbath daye. And Jonathas ſayd to hys companye, let vs get vp, and fyghte agayne our enemyes: for it ſtãdeth not with vs to daye, as in tyme paſt: Beholde, oure enemyes are in our waye, the water of Jordane vpon the one ſyde of vs, with bankes, fennes and woddes of the other ſyde, ſo that there is no place for vs to departe vnto. *Wherfore, crie now vnto heauen, that ye maye be delyuered frõ yͤ power of your enemyes. So they ſtroke yͤ battaylle. And Jonathas ſtretched oute hys handes to ſmyt Bachydes, but he fled backwarde. Then Jonathas & they yͭ were with hym leapte into Jordane, and ſwimmed ouer Jordane vnto hym, and there were ſlayne of Bachydes ſide that daye, a thouſande men.

*1.Para.x.a. 1.Ma.15.iiii.d.

Therfore Bachydes with hys hooſt turned agayne to Jeruſalem, and buylte vp the caſtels and ſtrong holdes that were in Jewrye, Jericho, Emaus, Bethoron, Bethell, Thamnata, Phara and Topo, wͭ hye walles, with portes and wyth lockes: & ſet men to kepe them, that they might vſe theyr malyce vpõ Iſraell. He walled vp the cytye Bethſurath, Gazarah and the caſtell and prouided thẽ with mẽ and vitayles. He toke alſo the chefeſt mens ſonnes in the countre for pledges, and put them in the caſtel at Jeruſalẽ to be kepte.

Afterwarde in the hundred fiftye & thre yeare in yͤ ſecõde moneth, Alcimus cõmaunded, that the walles of the ynmoſt Sanctuary ſhuld be deſtroyed, and the buyldinges of the prophetes alſo. And when he beganne to deſtroye them, yͤ thynges yͭ he went aboute, were hyndered, for he was ſmytten wͭ a palſey, and his mouth ſhut, ſo that he coulde no more ſpeake nor cõmaunde any of his houſe concernynge hys buſyneſſe. E Thus dyed Alcimus in great myſery at the ſame tyme. And when Bachides ſawe yͭ Alcimus was deed, he turned agayne to the kynge, and ſo yͤ lãde was in reaſte two yeares. Then all the vngodly men held a councell, ſayeng: Beholde Jonathas and hys company are at eaſe, and dwel without care. Wherfore, let vs bringe Bachides hyther, and he ſhall take them all in one nyght.

So they wente and gaue Bachides thys councell, which aroſe to come with a greate hooſt, and ſent letters preuely to hys adherẽtes, whiche were in Jewrye, to take Jonathas & thoſe yͭ were wͭ hym: but they myghte not, for yͤ other had gottẽ knowledge of their deuyce. And Jonathas toke fyfty mẽ of the countre (which were the ringleaders of thẽ) and ſlewe thẽ. Then Jonathas and Simon with theyr company departed vnto the cyte Bethbeſſen whyche lyeth in the wyldernes, & repayred yͤ decaye therof, & made it ſtrong. When Bachides knewe thys, he gathered all hys hooſt, and ſente worde to them that were of Jewry. Thẽ came he and layed ſege to Bethbeſſen & foughte agaynſte it a longe ſeaſon, & made inſtrumẽtes of warre. Now Jonathas left his brother Simõ in yͤ cytye, and wente forth hym ſelfe into the coũtre, & came with a certayne nombre, & ſlewe Odares and hys brethrẽ and the chyldren of Phaſeron in theyr tentes: ſo that he beganne to be ſtronge, and to increaſe in power.

As for Symon and hys companye, they wente out of the cytye, and brent vp the inſtrumẽtes of warre, & fought agaynſt Bachydes, and diſcõfyted hym. And Bachides was ſore vexed, becauſe his councel and trauayl was in vayne. Wherfore he was wroth at the wycked men (that gaue hym councell to come into theyr lãde) and ſlewe many of them. Then purpoſed he with hys company to go awaye into his awne countre: wherof when Jonathas had knowledge, he ſent ambaſſitoures vnto hym, for to make peace wᵗ hym, and that he ſhuld delyuer hym his preſonners agayne. To the whych Bachydes cõſented gladly, and dyd accordynge to hys deſyre: yee, and made and othe, that he ſhuld neuer do him harme all the dayes of his lyfe. So he reſtored vnto hym all the preſonners that he had taken out of the lãde of Juda, & then turned & wẽte his waye into his awne lãde, nether proceded he any further to come vnto the borders of Juda. Thus Iſrael had nomore warre. And Jonathas dwelt at Machemas, and beganne there to gouerne the people, and deſtroyed the vngodly men out of Iſraell.

¶ The .x. Chapter.

¶ Demetrius deſyreth to haue peace with Jonathas. Alexander moueth warre againſt Demetrius. Demetrius is ſlayne. The frendſhyppe of Ptolomeus and Alexander.

* Joſeph.ca. ii. iii.lib.xiii.

A In the hũdred and thre ſcore yeare came Alexander yͤ ſonne of noble Antiochus and toke Ptolomays, whoſe cyteſyns receaued him, and there he raygned. When Demetrius herde therof, he gathered an exceading great hoſt, and went forth agaynſt him to fyght. Wherfore Demetrius ſent lettres vnto Jonathas with louing wordes, & prayſed him greatly. For he ſayde: we will firſt make peace wyth hym, before he bynde hym ſelfe with Alexãder agaynſt vs: els he ſhall remembre yͤ euell that we haue done agaynſt him, his brother and his people. And ſo he gaue Jonathas leaue to gather an hoſt, to make weapens, & to be confederat with hym, & commaunded the pledges that were in the caſtell, to be delyuered vnto hym.

Then came Jonathas to Jeruſalem, and red the letters in the audience of all the people, B and of them that were in the caſtel. And therfore were they ſore afraied, becauſe they herde, that yͤ kynge had geuen hym lycence to gather an hooſt. Thus were the pledges delyuered vnto Jonathas, whyche reſtored thẽ to theyr elders. Jonathas alſo dwelt at Jeruſalem, and beganne to buylde vp & to repayre the cytie: commaũdyng the workmen, to wall it, and the mount Sion round aboute with fre ſtone, to be a ſtronge holde, and ſo they dyd. As for yͤ heathẽ that were in the caſtels which Bachides had made vp they fled: ſo that euery man left yͤ place, and wẽt into his awne coũtre. Only at Bethſura remayned certayne of yͤ Jewes, whiche had forſaken yͤ lawe and commaundementes of God, for Bethſura was theyr refuge.

Now when kyng Alexander herde of the promyſes that Demetrius had made vnto Jonathas, and when it was tolde hym of yͤ battels and noble actes, whyche he and hys brethren had done, and of the greate trauayles that they had takẽ, he ſayde: where ſhall we fynde ſoche a man? well, we wyll make hym our frende, and be cõfederat with hym. Upon this he wrote a lettre vnto him, with theſe wordes: kynge Alexãder ſaluteth hys brother Jonathas. We haue herde of the, yͭ thou art a valeaũt man, and mete to be oure frende: wherfore, thys daye we ordeyne the to be the hye preſte of thy people, and to be called the kynges frende. (Upon this, he ſent hym a purple clothynge, and a crowne of golde) that thou mayeſt conſydre what is for oure profyt, and kepe frendſhyp towarde vs.

C So in the ſeuenth moneth of the hũdred and thre ſcore yeare vpon the ſolempne feaſt daye of the tabernacles, Jonathas put yͤ holy rayment vpon him. Then gathered he an hooſt, and made many weapẽs. Which whẽ Demetrius herde, he was maruelous ſory, & ſaide: Alas, what haue we done, that Alexander hath preuẽted vs in gettynge yͤ frendſhyppe of the Jewes, for hys awne defence? Yet will I wryte louyngly vnto them alſo, yee, and promyſe them dignites and rewardes, yͭ they maye be of my ſyde. Wherupon he wrote vnto thẽ theſe wordes. Kinge Demetrius ſendeth greting vnto yͤ people of yͤ Jewes. Where as ye haue kepte youre couenaunt towarde vs, & cõtinued in our frendſhyp, not enclining to our enemies, we were glad, when we herde therof. Wherfore, remayne ſtyll, & be faythfull to vs: & we ſhall well recompenſe you for yͤ thinges, yͭ ye haue done on oure partye: we ſhall releaſe you of many charges, and geue you rewardes. And nowe I dyſcharge you & all yͤ Jewes frõ trybutes, I forgeue you yͤ cuſtomes of ſalt, and releaſe you of yͤ crowne taxes, of the thyrde parte of ſede, & half of yͤ frute of trees, which is myne awne dewtye. Theſe I leaue for you, frõ this daye forth: ſo yͭ they ſhal not be taken of the lande of Juda, nor of the thre cyties whych are added ther vnto out of Samaria D and Galylee, frome thys daye forth

D for euermore. Jeruſalē alſo withal thinges belonging therto, ſhalbe holy and fre, yee, yͤ
tythes and trybutes ſhall pertayne vnto it.
As for the power of yͤ caſtell which is at Jeruſalē, I remyt & geue it vnto yͤ hye preſte,
yͭ he maye ſet in it ſoch men, as he ſhall choſe to kepe it. I frely deliuer all the Jewes that are preſonners thorowe out all my realme:
ſo yͭ euery one of thē ſhalbe fre from payinge
any trybute, yee, euen of their catell:

All the ſolempne feaſtes, Sabbathes,
new moones, the dayes appoynted, the thre dayes before & after the feaſte, ſhalbe fre for all the Jewes in my realme: ſo that in them
no man ſhall haue power to do any thynge,
or to moue any buſyneſſe agaynſt any of thē
in any maner of cauſe. There ſhall thyrty thouſande alſo of the Jewes be wrytten vp
in the kynges hooſte, and haue theyr wages
payed, as all other men of warre of the kyn-
ges ſhuld haue: and of them ſhalbe ordeyned
certayne, to kepe the kynges ſtronge holdes:
yee, and ſome of them ſhalbe ſet ouer the kyn
ges buſyneſſe, yͭ they maye faythfully deale
with the ſame. The Jewes alſo ſhall haue princes of theyr awne, and walcke in theyr

* But when Jonathas and the people
hearde theſe wordes, they gaue no credence vnto them, nether receaued them: for they re membred the greate wyckedneſſe that he had done vnto Jſraell, and how ſore he had vexed them. Wherfore, they agreed vnto Alexander, for he was a prynce that had de-
alte frendlye with them, and ſo they ſtode
by hym all waye. * Then gathered kynge
* Joſeph.ex. b.lib.xiii.
Alexander a greate hooſt, and brought hys armye agaynſte Demetrius. So the two kynges ſtroke battaylle together, but Demetrius hoſt fled, and Alexander folowed
after and fell vpon them. A myghtye ſore felde was it, contynuynge tyll the Sonne
wente downe, and Demetrius was ſlayne
the ſame daye.

And Alexander ſent ambaſſitours vnto F
Ptolomy the kynge of Egypte with theſe wordes, ſayenge: For ſo moch as I am come agayne to my realme, and am ſet in yͤ trone
of my progenitours, and haue gotten the do
mynyon, ouercomed Demetrius, conquered
the lande, and ſtryken a felde with hym, ſo that we haue diſconfyted both hym and his hooſt, and ſyt in the trone of hys kyngdome.
Let vs nowe make frendſhyppe together,
geue me thy daughter to wyfe: ſo ſhall I be thy ſonne in lawe, and both geue the rewar-des, and her greate dygnite. Ptolomy the kynge gaue anſwere, ſayenge: Happy be the daye wherin thou arte come agayne to the lande of thy progenytoures, and ſet in the trone of theyr kyngdome. As nowe wyll I fulfyll thy wrytynge: but mete me at Ptolo
mais, that we maye ſe one another, & that I maye mary my daughter vnto the accordynge to thy deſyre. So Ptolomy wente
oute of Egypte wyth hys daughter Cleopa tra, and came vnto Ptolomais in the. C.lxii yeare: where kynge Alexander mete hym, G
and he gaue Alexander hys daughter Cleopatra, and maried them at Ptolomais with greate worſhypp, lyke as the maner of kynges is to be. Then wrote kynge Alexander vnto Jonathas, that he ſhulde come & mete
hym. So he wente honorably vnto Ptolo-mais, & there he mete the two kynges, and gaue them greate preſentes of golde and ſyl uer, and founde fauoure in theyr ſyght. And there came together agaynſt Jonathas cer-tayne wycked men & vngracyous perſonnes of Jſrael, makyng complayntes of him,
but the kynge regarded them not. As for Jo nathas, the kynge commaunded to take of
hys garmentes, and to clothe him in purple:
and ſo they dyd. Then the kynge appoynted hym to ſyt by hym, and ſayde vnto his princes: Go wyth hym into the myddeſt of the cytye, and make a proclamacion, that no man complayne agaynſt him of any matter
and that no mā trouble hym for any maner
of cauſe.

So it happened, that when hys accuſers ſawe the worſhyppe which was proclamed of hym, and that he was clothed in purple: they fled euery chone. And the kynge made moch of hym, wrote hym amonge hys chefe frendes, made hym a duke, and partaker of hys domynion. * Thus Jonathas went agayne to Jeruſalem with peace & gladnes. In the. Clxv. yeare came Demetrius yͤ ſonne of Demetrius from Creta into hys fathers lande: wherof when Alexander herde tel, he was ryght ſory, and retourned vnto Antioche. And Demetrius choſe * Appollonyus, (whych had the gouernaunce of Celoſyrya) to be hys captayne.

* Joſephus. ca. vi lib. xiii. antiq.

* i. mac. iii. a.

So he gathered a greate hooſt and came vnto Jamnia, and ſente worde vnto Jonathas the hye preſte, ſayenge: Darreſt yͧ withſtand vs thy ſelf alone? As for me, I am but laughed to ſcorne and ſhamed, becauſe thou prouedſt thy ſtrength agaynſt vs in yͤ mountaynes. Nowe therfore, yf thou truſteſt in thyne awne ſtrength, come downe to vs into the playne felde, and there let vs proue H our ſtrength together: thou ſhalt fynde, that I haue valeaunt men of warre with me and ſhalt knowe whome I am, & the other that ſtande by me.

Which ſaye, that your fote is not able to ſtande before oure face, for thy fathers haue bene twiſe chaced into theyr awn lãde. And now, howe wilt yͧ be able to abyde ſo greate an hooſt of horſmen and foteme̅ in the felde, where as is nether rocke, ſtone nor place to fle vnto?

When Jonathas herde the wordes of Appolloniꝰ, he was moued in his mynde: wherfore he choſe ten thouſande men, and wente out of Jeruſalem, and Symon hys brother mete him for to helpe him: And they pitched theyr tentes at Joppa, but yͤ cytye kept hym forth, for Joppa was an holde of Appollonius: Then Jonathas layed ſege to it, & they that were in the cytye, for very feare let him in: and ſo Jonathas wanne Joppa. Appollonius hearynge of thys toke thre thouſande horſmen, wyth a greate hooſte of fote, and wente as though he wolde go to Azotus, and came immediatly into the playne felde: becauſe he had ſo many horſmē, and put hys truſte in them. So Jonathas folowed vpon hym to Azotus, and there they ſtroke the battayle. Nowe had Appolonius lefte a thouſand horſmen behynde them preuely in the tentes. And when Jonathas knew that ſoche wayte was layed behynde them, they went rounde aboute the enemyes hooſt and ſhot dartes at the people frō the mornynge to the euenynge. As for Jonathas people, they kepte theyr ordre as he had commaunded them, and the enemies horſes were euer labouringe.

I Then brought Symon forth hys hoſt, & ſet them agaynſt the fote men. For the horſmen were wery all ready. So he diſconfited them, and they fled. And they that were ſcatred in the felde, gat them to Azotus, & came into the temple of Dagon theyr Idoll, that they myght there ſaue theyr lyues. But Jonathas ſet fyre vpon Azotus and all the cyties rou̅de about it, and toke theyr goodes and * brent vp the temple of Dagon, wyth all them that were fled into it.

Thus were ſlayne and brent well nye. viii. M. men. So Jonathas remoued the hooſt from thence, and brought them to Aſcalon: where the men of the cytie came forth, & met hym with great worſhypp. After this wente Jonathas and hys hooſt agayne to Jeruſalem, with greate ſubſtaunce of good. And when kyng Alexander herde theſe thinges, he thought to do Jonathas more worſhyppe and ſente hym a colar of golde, as the vſe is to be geuen vnto ſoche as are of the kynges next bloude. He gaue hym alſo the cytye of Accaron (with yͤ landes belongynge therto) in poſſeſſion.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

¶ The diſſenſyon betwixt Ptolomes and Alexãder hys ſonne in lawe. The death of Alexander. Demetrius raygneth after the death of Ptolomeus. Syon is beſeged of Jonathas. Demetrius ſeynge that no man reſiſteth hym, ſendeth hys armye agayne. Tryphon moueth Antiochus agaynſt Demetrius. Demetrius is delyuered by the ſuccour of Jonathas. After hys delyueraunce he breaketh hys couenaunt that he had made.

A AND the kyng of Egipte gathered an hooſte (lyke yͤ ſande that lyeth vpō yͤ ſee ſhore) and many ſhipes: * & wēt about thorow diſceate to optaine yͤ kingdome of Alexãder, & to ioyne it vnto hys awne realme. Upon thys he toke his iourney into Siria, & was lettē into the cyties, and mē came forth to mete hym: for kynge Alexander had commaunded them ſo to do, becauſe he was hys father in law. Now when Ptolomy entred into any cytye, he lefte men of warre to kepe it, and thys he dyd thorowe out all the cities. And when he came to Azotus, * they ſhewed hym the temple of Dagon and Azotus that was brent vp, with the other thynges whiche were deſtroyed, the deed bodyes caſt abrode, & yͤ graues that they had made by yͤ waye ſyde, for ſoch as were ſlayne in yͤ felde. And tolde yͤ kyng that Jonathas had done all theſe thynges, to yͤ intēt they might get hym euel wyll. But the kyng ſayde not a worde therto. And Jonathas mete the kynge with great honour at Joppa, where they ſaluted one another, & toke theyr reſte. So when Jonathas had gone with yͤ kyng vnto the water that was called Eleutherus he returned agayne to Jeruſalem.

* Joſeph. cap vii. lib. xiii.

* ii. Mac. x. c.

Nowe Ptolompe had gotten the dompnion of the cyties vnto Seleucia vpon yͤ ſee coaſt ymaginynge wicked coũcels agaynſt Alexander, and ſent ambaſſitours vnto B Demetrius, ſayenge: Come let vs make a bõde betwyxte vs, ſo ſhall I geue the my daughter that Alexander hath, and thou ſhalt raygne in thy fathers kyngdome. I repente that I gaue Alexander my daughter, for he goeth aboute to ſlay me. And thus he ſclaundred Alexander, becauſe he wolde haue had hys realme.

Thus he toke hys daughter from hym, gaue her vnto Demetrius, and forſoke Alexander, ſo that hys malyce was openly knowen. And Ptolomy came to Antioche, wher he ſet two crownes vpõ hys awne head: the crowne of Egipt and of Aſia. In the meane ſeaſon was kynge Alexander in Cilicia, for they that dwelt in thoſe places, had rebelled agaynſt hym. But when Alexãder herde of thys, he came to warre agaynſt hym. So kynge Ptolomy brought forth hys hooſt & mete hym with a mighty power, and chaſed him awaye. Then fled Alexander into Araby, there to be defended, and kynge Ptolomyes honoure increaſed. And zabdiel yͤ Arabian ſmote of Alexanders head, and ſent it vnto Ptolomy. But the thyrde daye after, dyed kynge Ptolomy hym ſelfe: & they whõ he had ſet in the ſtronge holdes, were ſlayne C of thoſe that were wythin the cyties. And Demetrius raygned in the hundred and ſeuen and ſyxtie yeare.

At the ſame tyme gathered Jonathas thẽ that were in Jewry, to laye ſege vnto the caſtell whyche was at Jeruſalem, and ſo they made many inſtrumentes of warre agaynſt it. Then wente there certayne vngodly perſonnes (whych hated their awne people) vnto kynge Demetrius: and tolde him that Jonathas beſeged the caſtell. So whẽ he heard it, he was angrie, and immediatly came vnto Ptolomais, and wrote vnto Jonathas, that he ſhulde not laye ſege to the caſtel, but come and ſpeake with hym in all the haſte. Neuertheles, when Jonathas herde this, he commaunded to beſege it. He choſe alſo certayne of the elders and preſtes of Iſrael, and put him ſelf in the parell, and toke with him golde, ſyluer, clothynge, and diuerſe preſentes: and went to Ptolomais vnto the kyng, and founde hym gracyous.

And though certayne vngodly men of his awne people made cõplaintes vpon him, yet yͤ kynge intreated hym, *lyke as hys predeceſſours had done before: and promoted hym in the syght of all his frendes, cõfyrmed hym in the hye preſthode with all yͤ worſhyp yͭ he had afore, and made him hys chefe frẽde. Jonathas alſo deſyred the kyng, that he wolde make Jewry fre, *wͭ the thre head cytyes of Samaria and the landes pertaynynge therto: vpon thys dyd Jonathas promyſe hym thre.C. talentes. Where vnto yͤ kinge cõſented, & gaue Jonathas wrytinge of the ſame, conteynynge theſe wordes: Kyng Demetri9 ſendeth greting vnto his brother Jonathas & to the people of the Jewes. We ſende you here a copy of the lettre which we dyd write vnto oure elder Laſthenus, concernyng you that ye ſhulde knowe it.

* i. Mac.x.c. and .xi.d.

Kynge Demetrius ſendeth gretyng vnto Laſthenus hys elder. For the faythfulneſſe D yͭ oure frendes the people of the Jewes kepe vnto vs, and for the louing kyndnes which they beare towarde vs: we are determyned to do thẽ good. Wherfore, we ordeyne al the coaſtes of Jewry with thre cyties, Lydda & Ramatha (whych are added vnto Jewrye from Samaria) and all the landes pertaynynge there vnto, to be frely ſeparated for ſoche as do ſacrifyce in Jeruſalẽ: both concernynge the paymentes which the kynge toke yearly afore tyme, and the frutes alſo of the earth and trees. As for other tythes and tributes that belonged vnto vs, we diſcharge them therof from thys tyme forth. In lyke maner we graunte vnto them all the cuſtomes of ſalt and crowne taxes, whyche were brought vnto vs. And this fredome ſhall they haue fyrme and ſtedfaſt, from thys tyme forth for euermore. Therfore, ſe that ye make a copy of theſe our lettres, and delyuer it vnto Jonathas: that it maye be kepte vpõ the holy mount in a conuenient place.

After thys, when Demetrius the kynge E ſawe that his lande was in reſt, and that no relyſtaũce was made hym: he ſent awaye all hys hooſt, euery man to hys awne place, excepte an army of ſtraũgers, whõ he brought from the Iles of the Heathen, wherfore all hys fathers hooſt had euell wyll at hym. * Nowe was there one Triphon (yͭ had bene of Alexanders parte afore) whiche when he ſawe that all the hooſt murmured agaynſte Demetrius: he wente to Emalcuel the Arabian (that brought vp Antiochus the ſonne of Alexãder) and laye ſore vpon hym, to delyuer hym this yõge Antiochus: yͭ he myght raygne in hys fathers ſteade. He tolde hym alſo, what great euell Demetrius had done and howe his men of warre loued him not: & ſo remayned there a longe ſeaſon.

And Jonathas ſent vnto kynge Demetrius, to dryue them out whyche were in the caſtell at Jeruſalem, and in the other refuges, for they dyd Iſraell greate harme. So Demetrius ſent worde vnto Jonathas, ſayeng: I wyll not only do theſe thynges for yͤ F and thy people, but at tyme conueniẽt I wil do both the and thy people great worſhippe. But nowe thou ſhalt do me a pleaſure, yf yͧ wylt ſende me men to helpe me: for all myne armye is gone fro me. So Jonathas ſent hĩ thre thouſand ſtronge men vnto Antioche, & they came vnto yͤ kynge, wherfore the kyng was very glad at their comming. But they that were of the cytie (euen an hundred and twenty thouſande men) gathered thẽ together, and wolde haue ſlayne the king, which fled into his court, and the cyteſins kepte the ſtretes of the cytie, and beganne to fyght.

Then the kynge called for yͤ Jewes helpe, whych came vnto hym all together, & wente abrode thorowe the cytie, and ſlew the ſame daye an hũdred thouſande men: ſet fyre vpõ the cytye, gat many ſpoyles in that daye, & delyuered the kynge. So when the cyteſyns ſawe that the Jewes had gotten their wyll of the cytye, & they them ſelues diſapoynted of their purpoſe, they made their ſupplicaciõ vnto the kynge, ſayeng: Graunt vs peace, & let the Jewes ceaſſe from troublyng vs and the cytye, and vpon thys they caſte awaye theyr weapens. Thus they made peace, and the Jewes gat great worſhyp in the ſyghte of the kynge, and in the ſyghte of all yͭ were in hys realme, and were ſpoken of thorowe out the kingdome: and ſo they came agayne to Jeruſalem with great goodes.

G So the kynge Demetrius ſat in the trone of hys kyngdome, and had peace in his lãde. Neuertheleſſe, he dyſſembled in all that euer he ſpake, and wythdrewe hym ſelfe frõ Jonathas, nether rewarded hym accordyng to the benefites which he had done for him, but troubled hym very ſore. After thys came Tryphon agayne wyth yonge Antiochus, whyche raygned and was crowned kynge. Then there gathered vnto hym all the men of warre, whom Demetrius had put away: theſe fought againſt Demetrius, which fled and turned his backe. So Triphon toke the Elephãtes, & wãne Antioche. And yõg Antiochus wrote vnto Jonathas, ſayẽge: I cõfyrme the in thy preſthode, and make the ruler of .iiij. countres, yͭ thou mayeſt be a frẽde of the kynges.

Upon thys he ſent hym golden veſſels to be ſerued in, & gaue him leaue to drynke in golde, to be clothed in purple, and to were a colar of golde, He made hys brother Symõ alſo captayne, frõ the coaſtes of Tyrus vnto the borders of Egypt. Then Jonathas toke hys iourney, and wente thorowe the cytyes beyonde the water of Jordane, & all the mẽ of warre of Syria gathered them vnto him for to helpe hym. So he came vnto Aſcalon, and they of the cytye receaued hym honorably, and from thence wente he vnto Gaza, but they wolde not let hym in: wherfore he layed ſege vnto it, burnynge vp and ſpoylynge the places that were aboute the cytye

H And the cyteſyns of Gaza ſubmitted thẽ ſelues vnto Jonathas, which made peace wͭ thẽ, but toke of theyr ſonnes to pledge, ſente them to Jeruſalem, and wente thorowe the countre vnto Damaſcus. Nowe whẽ Jonathas hearde that Demetrius prices were come into Cades (which is in Galilee) wyth a great hooſt, purpoſynge to put Demetrius out from medlynge in the realme: he came agaynſt them, and lefte Symon hys brother in the lande: whych came to Bethſura, and layed ſege to it a longe ſeaſon, and diſconfyted thẽ. So they deſyred to haue peace wyth hym, whyche he graunted them, and afterwarde put them out from thẽce, toke the cytie, and ſet men to kepe it. And Jonathas wͭ hys hooſt came to the water of Geneſar, and be tymes in the mornynge gat them to the playne felde of Azor.

And beholde, the hooſtes of the Heathen mete them in the felde, and layed watch for them in the mountaynes: ſo that when Jonathas came againſt them, the other (which were layed to watche) roſe out of theyr places and fought, and they that were of Jonathas ſyde, fled euery man. and there was not one of them left, except Mathathias the ſonne of Abſalomus, & Judas the ſonne of Calphi the captayne of the hooſt. Then Jonathas rente his clothes, layed earth vpon hys head, made hys prayer, and turned agayne to them in the felde: where they fought together, & he put them to flyght. Nowe whẽ his awne mẽ, that were fled, ſawe this: they turned agayne vnto hym and helped him to folowe vpon all their enemyes vnto their tentes at Cades. So there were ſlayne of the Heathen the ſame daye thre thouſande mẽ, and Jonathas turned agayne to Jeruſalẽ.

¶ The .xij. Chapter.

¶ Jonathas ſendeth Ambaſſitours to Rome and to yͤ people of Sparta to renue their couenaũt of frendſhyp. Jonathas putteth to flyght the princes of Demetrius. Tryphon taketh Jonathas by deceyte.

A Jonathas ſeing that the time was mete for hym, choſe certayne men and ſent thẽ vnto Rome for to ſtablyſh & to renue * the freudſhyppe with thẽ. He ſent lettres alſo vnto Sparta, and to other places in lyke maner. So they wente vnto Rome, and entred into the coũſell, & ſayde: Jonathas the hye preſte & the people of the Jewes ſent vs vnto you, for to renue the olde frendſhyp and bonde of loue: Upon this the Romaynes gaue them fre paſportes, that mẽ ſhulde leade them home into the lande of Juda peaceably. And thys is yͤ copy of the letters that Jonathas wrote vnto the Spartians.

Jonathas the hye preſt wͭ the elders, preſtes, & the other people of the Jewes, ſende gretynge vnto the Spartians their brethrẽ There were lettres ſente longe a goo vnto Onias the hye preſte, frõ Arius, which than raygned amonge you: that ye are oure brethren, as the wrytinge made ther vpon ſpecifyeth. And Onias entreated the ambaſſitoure that was ſente, honorably, and receaued the letters: where in there was mencion B made of the bonde of loue and frendſhyppe. But as for vs, we nede no ſuch wrytinges: for why? we haue yͤ holy bokes of ſcripture in oure handes to oure comforte. Neuertheles, we had rather ſende vnto you, for the renuynge of the brotherhode and frendſhippe: leſt we ſhulde be ſtraunge vnto you: for it is longe, ſens the tyme that ye ſent worde vnto vs. Wherfore, in the ſacrifices that we offre and other ceremonies vpō the hye ſolempne dayes and other, we alwaye remember you wythout ceaſſynge (lyke as reaſon is, and as it becommeth vs to thynke vpon our brethren) yee, and are ryght glad of youre proſperous honoure.

And though we haue had great troubles and warres, ſo that the kynges aboute vs haue foughten agaynſt vs: yet wold we not be greuous vnto you, nor to other of our louers and frendes in theſe warres. For we haue had helpe from heauen, ſo that we are delyuered, and our enemyes ſubdued. Wherfore we choſe Numenius the ſonne of Antiochus and Antipater the ſonne of Iaſon, and ſent them vnto the Romaynes, for to renue the olde bonde of frendſhyppe and loue with them. We cōmaunded them alſo to come vnto you to ſalute you, and to delyuer you our letters, concernynge the renouacion of oure brotherhode. And nowe ye ſhall do ryghte well to gyue vs an anſwere there vnto.

C And thys is the copye of the wrytynge, which Arius the kynge of Sparta ſent vnto Onias. Arius kynge of the Spartiās ſendeth gretynge vnto Onias the hye preſt. It is founde in wrytynge, that the Spartians and Iewes are brethren, and come out of the generacion of Abraham. And nowe for ſo muche as thys is come to our knowlege, ye ſhal do wel, to wryte vnto vs of your proſperitie. As for vs, we haue wrytten oure mynde vnto you. Our catell and goodes are yours, ⁊ yours ours. Theſe thynges haue we commaunded to be ſhewed vnto you.

When Ionathas herde, that Demetrius princes were come forth to fyghte agaynſt hym, with a greater hooſt thē afore, he went from Ieruſalem, and met them in the lande of Hemath, for he gaue thē not ſpace to come into hys owne coūtre. And he ſent ſpyes vnto theyr tētes, which came agayne and tolde hym, that they were appoynted to come vpō him in the nyght ſeaſon. Wherfore when the ſunne was gone downe, Ionathas cōmaunnded hys men to watche all the nyght, and to be ready wyth weapens for to fyght: and ſet D watchmen rounde aboute the hooſt. But when the aduerſaries herde that Ionathas was ready with his men to yͤ battayll, they feared, and were afrayed in theyr hartes, ⁊ kyndled fyres in theyr tentes, brake vp, and gat thē awaye. Neuertheles, Ionathas and his cōpany knewe it not tyll the mornynge, for they ſawe the fyres burnynge.

Then Ionathas folowed vpō them, but he myght not ouertake them, for they were gone ouer the water Eleutherus. So Ionathas departed vnto yͤ Arabiās (which were called zabadei) ſlewe them, ⁊ toke theyr goodes. He proceded further alſo, and came vnto Damaſcus, and went thorowe al yͤ countre. But Simō his brother toke his iourney and came to Aſcalon and to the nexte ſtrōge holdes: departinge vnto Ioppa. and wanne it. For he herde that they wolde ſtāde of Demetrius partye: wherfore he ſet mē of warre in the cytie, to kepe it. After this came Ionathas home agayne, and called yͤ elders of the people together: and deuyſed wyth them for to buylde vp the ſtronge holdes in Iewry, ⁊ the walles of Ieruſalē, to ſet vp an hye wall betwyxte the caſtel and the cytie, for to ſeparate it from the cytie, that it might be alone, and that men ſhulde nether bye nor ſell in it.

Vpō thys they came together for to buyld vp the cytie, and for ſo much as the wal vpō the broke of the weſt ſyde (called Caphetah) was fallen downe, they repayred it: And Symon ſet vp Adiadah in Sephelah, and made it ſtronge ſetting: portes ⁊ lockes vpō it. E Nowe whē *Triphō purpoſed to raygne in Aſia, to be crowned, ⁊ to ſlaye the kynge Antiochus: he was afrayed that Ionathas wold not ſuffre him, but fyght againſt him. Wherfore, he went about to take Ionathas and to kyll hym.

*1.mac.xi.c. Ioſeph. cap. xxi.lib.xiii.

So he departed, and came vnto Bethſā. Then wente Ionathas forth agaynſt hym to the battayll wyth fourty thouſande choſen men, and came vnto Bethſan alſo. But whē Triphon ſawe that Ionathas came wᵗ ſo great an hooſt to deſtroye hym, he was afrayed: and therfore he receaued hym honorably, commended hym vnto al his frendes, and gaue hym rewardes, and commaunded hys men of warre to be as obediēt vnto him as to hym ſelfe.

And ſayd vnto Ionathas: why haſt thou cauſed thys people to take ſuch trauayle, ſeynge there is no warre betwyxte vs? Therfore ſende thē home agayne, ⁊ choſe certayne men to wayte vpō the, and come thou with me to Ptolomais: for I wyll gyue it the, wᵗ the other ſtronge holdes, men of warre and theyr officers: As for me, I muſt depart, this is onely the cauſe of my cōmynge. F Ionathas beleued hym, and dyd as he ſayde, puttynge awaye his hooſt, which went into the lande of Iuda. He kepte but. iij. M. by him, wherof he ſent.ii.M.into Galile, & one thouſande went wyth hym ſelfe.

Nowe as ſone as Jonathas entred into Ptolomais, the cyteſins ſparred the gates of the cytie, and toke hym, and ſlewe all them wyth the ſwerde, yͤ came in wyth hym. Thẽ ſent Triphon an hooſt of fotemen and horſe men into Galilee and into the great playne felde, to deſtroye all Jonathas cõpany. But when they knew that Jonathas was taken, and all they ſlayne that wayted vpon hym: they toke councell together, and came forth ready to the battayll. So when they whych folowed vpon thẽ, ſawe that it was a matter of lyfe, they turned backe agayne. As for the other, they went into the lande of Juda peaceably, & bewayled Jonathas, and them that were wyth hym ryght ſore. And Iſrael made great lamentacion. Then all the Heathen that were rounde about thẽ, ſoughte to deſtroye thẽ. For they ſayd: nowe haue they no captayne, nor any man to helpe them. Therfore, let vs ouercome thẽ, and rote out theyr name from amonge men.

The.xiii.Chapter.

After Jonathas was taken. Symon is choſen captayne, of whom Triphon takynge hys chyldren and money for the redẽpcion of Jonathas, kylleth hym and his chyldren. The graue of Jonathas. Triphon kylleth Antiochus, and poſſeſſeth the realme. Demetrius taketh truce wyth Symon. Symon wynneth Gaza. He poſſeſſeth the towre of Sion. He maketh hys ſonne Jhon captayne.

A Nowe when Simon herde yͭ Triphon gathered a great hoſte, to come into the lande of Juda, and to deſtroye it: and ſawe that the people was in great fearfulneſſe and care: He came vp to Jeruſalẽ, & gathered the people together, and gaue thẽ exhortacion, ſayeng: Ye knowe what great battayles I and my brethren and my fathers houſe haue fought for the lawe and the Sanctuary, and what maner of troubles we haue ſene: thorow occaſion, wherof, * all my brethren are ſlayne for Iſraels ſake, and I am lefte alone. And nowe lette not me ſpare myne owne lyfe in any maner of trouble, for I am no better thẽ my brethren: but wyll auenge my people & the Sanctuary, oure chyldren and oure wyues: for all the Heathẽ are gathered together to deſtroye vs of very malyce.

At theſe wordes the hertes of the people were kyndled together, ſo that they cryed wͭ a loude voyce, ſayenge: Thou ſhalt be our captaine in ſteade of Judas and Jonathas thy brethren, ordre thou our battell, & what ſo euer thou commaundeſt vs, we ſhal do it So he gathered all the men of warre, makynge haſt to fynyſh all the walles of Jeru-

B ſalem, whych he made ſtronge rounde about Then ſente he Jonathas the ſonne of Abſalomus with a freſh hoſt vnto Joppa, which droue them oute that were in the caſtell, and remayned there hym ſelfe. Triphon alſo remoued frõ Ptolomais with a great armye, to come into the lande of Juda, & Jonathas wyth hym in warde. And Symon pytched hys tentes at Addus before the playne felde

But whan Triphon knewe that Simõ ſtode vp in ſteade of hys brother Jonathas, & that he wolde warre agaynſt hym: he ſent meſſaungers vnto hym, ſayenge: Where as we haue kepte Jonathas thy brother, it is for money that he is owynge in the kynges accompte, concerninge the buſyneſſe that he had in hande. Wherfore, ſende now an.C. talentes of ſyluer and hys two ſonnes for suertye, that when he is letten forth he ſhall not forſake vs: and we ſhall ſende hym agayne. Neuertheleſſe, Simõ knewe, that he diſſembled in hys wordes: yet commaunded he the money and chyldren to be delyuered vnto hym: leſt he ſhulde be the greater enemye agaynſt the people of Iſrael: and ſay, bycauſe he ſent hym not the money and the chyldren therfore is Jonathas deed.

C So Symon ſent hym the chyldrẽ and an hũdreth talentes, but he diſſembled, & wold not let Jonathas go. After warde came Triphon into the lande, to deſtroye it, and went roũde about by the waye, that leadeth vnto Ador. But whereſoeuer they went, thyther went Simon and his hoſt alſo. Nowe, they that were in the caſtell, ſent meſſaũgers vnto Triphon, that he ſhulde make haſte to come by the wylderneſſe, and to ſende them vytayles. And Triphon made ready all his horſmẽ, to come the ſame nyght. Neuertheleſſe, it was a very greate ſnowe, ſo that he came not in Gaaladithim. And when he drewe nye Baſchama, he ſlewe Jonathas & hys ſonnes there, and then turned for to go home into hys owne lande.

Then ſent Symõ for to fet his brothers deade coarſe, and buryed it in Modin hys fathers cytie. So all Iſraell bewayled hym wͭ greate lamentacion, and mourned for hym very longe. And Symon made vpon the ſepulchre of his father and his brethrẽ, a buyldynge hye to loke vnto, of fre ſtone behynde and before, & ſet vp ſeuẽ pyllers, one againſt another (for hys father, hys mother & foure brethrẽ) and ſet great pyllers roũde aboute, wyth armes vpon them for a perpetual memorie, and carued ſhippes beſyde the armes: that they myght be ſene of men ſaylynge in the ſee. Thys ſepulchre whych he made at Modin, ſtandeth yet vnto thys daye.

D * Nowe as Triphõ wẽt forth to walke wͭ the yonge kynge Antiochus, he ſlewe him trayterouſly, & raygned in hys ſteade, crowned hym ſelfe kynge of Aſia, and dyd muche euell in the lande. Simon alſo buylte vp the caſtels in Iewry, makyng thē ſtronge with hye towres, great walles, portes and lockes and layed vp vytaples in yͤ ſtronge holdes. And Simon choſe certaine men, ⁊ ſent them to kynge Demetrius: to deſyre hym, that he wolde diſcharge the lande from al bondage, for Triphō had ſpoyled it very ſore. Where vpon Demetrius the kynge anſwered hym, and wrote vnto hym after thys maner.

Demetrius the kynge ſendeth gretynge vnto Symon the hye preſt hys frende, with the elders and people of the Iewes. The golden crowne and precyous ſtone that ye ſente vnto vs, haue we receaued: and are ready to make a ſtedfaſt peace wyth you, yee, and to wryte vnto oure officers, for to releaſe you, concernynge the thynges wherein we made you fre: and the appoyntment that we make wyth you, ſhalbe firme ⁊ ſtable. The ſtrōge holdes whych ye haue buylded, ſhalbe youre owne. As for any ouerſyght or faute commytted vnto thys daye, we forgyue it, and the crowne taxe that ye ought vs alſo. And where as was any other trybute in Ieruſalem, it ſhal now be no tribute: and loke who are mete amonge you to be in our courte, let them be wryttē vp, that there maye be peace betwyxte vs.

Thus the yocke of the heathen was takē E from Iſraell, in the hundreth and ſeuentieth yeare. And the people of the Iewes began to wryte in theyr letters ⁊ actes on this maner. * In the fyrſt yeare of Symon the hye preſt, and prince of the Iewes.

In thoſe dayes went Symon vnto Gaza, and beſeged it rounde aboute, where he ſet vp ordinaunce of warre. And wanne a towre, which he toke. So they that gat into the towre lept into the cytie, whyche was in a great feare: In ſo muche that the people of the cytie rente theyr clothes, and clymed vp vpon the walles wyth theyr wyues ⁊ chyldren beſechynge Symon to be at one wyth them ſayenge.

O rewarde vs not after our wickednes, but be gracious vnto vs, and we ſhal do the ſeruice. Then Symon for very pytie, wold F fyght nomore agaynſte them, but put them out of the cytie, and cauſed the houſes (wherin the ymages were) to be clenſed, and ſo entred the cytie wyth Pſalmes of prayſe, geuinge thankes vnto the Lorde. So when he had caſt all abbominacions out of the cytie, he ſet ſuch mē in it as kept the lawe of God, and made the cytie ſtronge, and buylded a dwellynge place for hym ſelfe.

Nowe, when they in the caſtel at Ieruſalem were kepte ſo ſtraytly, that they could not come forth into the countre, and myghte nether bye nor ſell: they were very hongrye, and many of them famyſhed to death: In ſo much that they beſought Simō to be at one with them, which he graunted them. So he put them out from thence, and clenſed the caſtell from fylthynes. And vpon the .xxiii. daye of the ſecōde moneth in the .Clxxi. yere they entred into it wyth thankeſgeuynge ⁊ braūches of palme trees, wyth harpes, croudes, cymbals, and lutes, ſyngynge pſalmes, and ſonges of prayſe vnto God, for that the great enemy of Iſrael was ouercome.

And Symon ordeined that the ſame day ſhulde be kept euery yeare in gladneſſe, and made ſtronge the hyll of yͤ temple that was beſyde the caſtell, where he dwelt hym ſelfe wyth hys company. Simon alſo perceiuing that Ihon hys ſonne was a myghtye mā of armes, made him captayne of al the hooſtes and cauſed hym to dwel at Gaza.

The .xiiii. Chapter.

Demetrius is ouercome of Arſaces. Symon beynge captayne, there is great quyetnes in Iſrael. The couenaunt of frendſhyp wyth the Romaynes and wyth the people of Sparta is renued.

IN the .C.lxxii. yeare gathered kynge A Demetrius his hoſt, and departed vnto Media, to gette hym helpe for to fyght agaynſt Triphon. Now when Arſaces the kynge of Perſia and Media herde, yͭ Demetrius was entred within his borders, he ſent one of his princes to take him alyue: and to brynge hym vnto hym. So he wente and ſlewe Demetrius hooſt, toke hym ſelfe, brought hym to Arſaces, whyche kept hym in warde. And all the lande of Iuda was in reſt, ſo longe as Symon lyued, for he ſought the wealth of his people, therfore were they glad to haue hym for theyre ruler, and to do hym worſhyp alwaye.

Simon wanne the cytie of Ioppa alſo for an hauen towne, and made it an entraūce in to the Iles of yͤ ſee. He enlarged the borders of hys people, and cōquered thē more lande: He gathered vp many of theyr people that were preſoners: he had the dominion of Gaza, Bethſura and the caſtell, whych he clenſed from fylthynes, and there was no man that reſiſted hym: So that euery man tylled hys grounde in peace, the lande of Iuda and the trees gaue their frute and encreace. B The elders ſat al in iudgement, and toke theyr deuice for the wealth of the lāde: the yonge mē put on worſhyppe and harneſſe vpon them. He prouyded vytaples for the cyties, and made goodly ſtronge holdes of them: ſo that the fame of hys worſhyp was ſpoken of vnto yͤ ende of the worlde. * For he made peace thorowe out the lande, and Iſrael was full of myrth and ioye.

Euery man ſat vnder his vine and fygge trees, and there was no man to fraye them awaye. There was none in yͤ lande to fyght agaynſt thē, for then the kynges were ouercome.

come. He helped thoſe that were in aduerſite amonge hys people, he was diligente to ſe ẏ lawe kept: as for ſuch as were vngodly and wycked, he toke them awaye. He ſet vp the Sanctuary, and encreaſed the holy veſſels of the temple.

When the Romaynes and Sparcians had gotten worde, that Jonathas was deed they were right ſory. But whan they hearde that Symō his brother was made hye preſt in hys ſteade, & how he had wonne the lande agayne with the cyties in it: they wrote vnto hym in tables of braſſe, to renue the frendſhyp, & bonde of loue, whych they had made afore wyth *Judas ‡ and Jonathas his brethreu. Whych wrytynges were red before the congregacion at Jeruſalem.

C And thys is the copy of the letters, that the Sparciās ſent: The Senatours and cyteſins of Sparta ſende greting vnto Simō the great preſt, wyth the elders, preſtes, and the other people of the Jewes theyr brethrē: When youre ambaſſytours that were ſente vnto oure people, certified vs of youre worſhyppe, honoure and proſperous wealth: we were glad of theyr commynge, & haue wrytten the earande whych they ſpake before the councel of the people: namely, that Numenius the ſonne of Antiochus. And Antipater the ſonne of Jaſon the Jewes ambaſſitours are come vnto vs, for to renue the olde frēdſhyp wyth vs. Upon thys the people conſented, that the men ſhuld be honorably intreated, and that the copy of theyr earaūde ſhuld be wrytten in the ſpecial bokes of the people, D for a perpetuall memorye vnto the Sparcians. yee, and that we ſhulde ſende a copye of the ſame vnto Simon the great preſt. After this dyd Symō ſende Numenius vnto Rome, wᵗ a golden ſhylde of a thouſande poūde weyght, to cōfirme the frēdſhip wᵗ thē: which when the Romaines vnderſtode, they ſayd: what thankes ſhal we recōpence agayne vnto Symō & his chyldrē: For he hath ſtablyſhed his brethrē, & ouercome ẏ enemies of Iſrael. Wherfore they graunted him to be fre. And all thys wrote the Jewes in tables of braſſe, & nayled it vnto ẏ pillers vpō ẏ moūt Symon. The copy of the wrytynge is thys.

The .xviij. daye of ẏ moneth *Elul in the Clxxij. yeare in ẏ third yeare of Simō ẏ hye preſt, in the great cōgregaciō the preſtes, rulers of ẏ people, & elders of ẏ coūtre at Aſarame, were theſe wordes openly declared.

*Auguſt.

E For ſo much as there was much warre in our lande, therfore Simon the ſonne of Matathias (come of the children of Jareb) and hys brethren put them ſelues in parell, and reſyſted the enemies of theyr people: ẏ theyr Sanctuary & lawe myght be mainteyned, and dyd theyr people great worſhyp: Jonathas in lyke maner, after that he had gouerned hys people & bene theyr hye preſt: dyed, and lyeth buryed beſyde hys elders.

After that wold theyr enemyes haue troaden theyr holy thinges vnder fote, deſtroyed theyr lande, and vterly waſted theyr Sanctuary. Then Symon wythſtode them, and fought for his people, ſpēt wuch of his owne money, weapened the valeaunt men of hys people, gaue them wages, made ſtronge the cyties of Juda, wyth Bethſura that lyeth vpon the borders of Jewry (where the ordinaunce of theyr enemies laye ſomtyme) and ſet Jewes therfore for to kepe it.

He made faſt Joppa alſo, which lyeth vpō the ſee, & Gaza that bordreth vpon Azotus (where ẏ enemyes dwelt afore) & there he ſet Jewes to kepe it: and whatſoeuer was mete for the ſubduyng of the aduerſaries, ẏ layed he therin. Now whē the people ſawe the noble actes of Symon, & what worſhyppe, he purpoſed to do for thē, hys godly behauour, & faythfulnes whyche he kept vnto thē, and how he ſought by alwayes the welth of hys people, becauſe he dyd all this, therfore they choſe him to be theyr prince & hye preſt. And in his tyme they proſpered well by hym, ſo ẏ the Heathen were takē out of theyr lande: & they alſo whych were in ẏ cytie of Dauid at Jeruſalē in the caſtel (where they went oute and defyled all thynges that were about the Sanctuary, and dyd great harme vnto clenlynes) and Simon put men of the Jewes in it, for the defence of the lande and cytie, and ſet vp the walles of Jeruſalem. F

And kyng Demetrius confirmed hym in his hye preſthode, made him his frēde, & dyd hym great worſhippe. For he herde that the Romaynes called the Jewes theyr frendes, louers & brethrē: how honorably they receaued Symōs ambaſſitours: how the Jewes and preſtes conſented that he ſhuld be theyr prince & hye preſt perpetually (tyl God rayſed vp the true prophete (& that he ſhulde be theyr captayne, to care for the Sanctuary, & to ſet of officers vpō the workes therof, ouer ẏ lande, ouer the weapēs, ouer the houſes of defence, to make prouiſiō for the holy thynges, & to be obeyed of euery mā, & all ẏ wrytynges of ẏ lande to be made in hys name: ẏ he ſhulde be clothed in purple & golde, & that it ſhulde be laufull for none of the people nor preſtes to breake any of theſe thynges, to wᵗſtande hys wordes, nor to call any congregacion in the lande without him: that he ſhulde be clothed in purple, & weare a colar of gold: And yf ther were any which diſobeied or brake this ordinaunce ẏ he ſhulde be punyſhed. G

So al the people conſented to alowe Symon, and to do accordynge to theſe wordes: Symon alſo hym ſelfe toke it vpon hym, & was content to be the hye preſt, the captaine and prince of the Jewes and preſtes, and to gouerne them all. And they commaũded to make this wrytynge in tables of braſſe, and faſten it vnto the compaſſe of the Sanctuary in an open place: and to laye vp a copy of the ſame in ỹ treaſury, that Symõ and his poſteritie myght haue it.

¶The.xv.Chapter.

¶Antiochus maketh a couenaũt of frendſhyp wᵗʰ Simon, ⁊ Triphon is perſecuted. The Romaynes wryte letters vnto kynges and nacions in the defence of the Iewes. Antiochus refuſynge the helpe that Symõ ſent hym, breaketh hys couenaunt.

A MOreouer, kynge Antiochus the ſonne of Demetrius ſente letters frõ ỹ Iles of the ſee, vnto Symon the hye preſt and prince of the Iewes, ⁊ to al the people cõteynynge theſe wordes: Antiochus the kyng ſendeth gretyng vnto Symon the hye preſt and to the people of the Iewes. For ſo much as certayne wycked mẽ haue gotten ỹ kyngdome of oure progenitours, I am purpoſed to chalenge ỹ realme agayne, and to reſtore it to the olde eſtate.

Wherfore, I haue gathered a great hoſt, ⁊ made ſhyppes of warre: ỹ I maye go thorowe the countre, ⁊ be auenged of thẽ which haue deſtroyed our lande, and waſted many cyties in my realme. And therfore nowe I make the fre alſo frõ al ỹ tributes, wherof al kynges my progenitours haue diſcharged ỹ and frõ other cuſtomes (where frõ they haue releaſed the) whatſoeuer they be: Yee, I geue ỹ leaue to ſmyte money of thyne owne win thy lande. As for Ieruſalem, I wyll that it be holy and fre: ⁊ all the weapẽs and houſes of defence, which thou haſt buylded ⁊ kepeſt B in thyne handes, ſhalbe thyne. Where as any thynge is or ſhalbe owynge vnto the kinge, I forgeue it ỹ, frõ thys tyme forth for euermore. And whẽ we haue optayned our kingdome, we ſhal do the, thy people and the temple great worſhyp: ſo ỹ your honour ſhalbe knowen thorow out the whole worlde.

In the. Clxxiiii. yeare went Antiochus into hys fathers lande, ⁊ all the mẽ of warre came together vnto hym, ſo that fewe were left wyth Triphõ. So the kynge Antiochus folowed vpon hym, but he fled vnto Dora, which lyeth by the ſee ſyde: for he ſaw ỹ ther was myſchefe cõmyng vnto hym, ⁊ that his hoſt had forſakẽ him. Thẽ came Antiochus vnto Dora wyth an. C. and twentye thouſande mẽ of armes vpon fote, ⁊ eyght thouſande horſemẽ. So he cõpaſed the citie roũde about, ⁊ the ſhyppes came by the ſee. Thus they vexed the citie by lãde ⁊ by water, in ſo much ỹ they ſuffred no mã to go in nor out.

In the meane ſeaſon came *Numenius (⁊ they that had ben wyth hym) frõ the cytie of Rome, hauinge letters wrytten vnto the kynges and prouinces, wherin were conteyned theſe wordes: C Lucius the mayre of Rome ſendeth gretyng vnto Ptolomy ỹ kyng. The ambaſſitours of the Iewes our frẽdes beynge ſent from Symon the hye preſt and from the people of the Iewes, came vnto vs for to renue the olde frendſhyppe, and bonde of loue, brought a ſhylde of golde weyenge a thouſande pounde, whych we were content to receaue of them. Wherfore, we thought it good to wryte vnto the kynges and prouinces, to do them no harme, nor to take parte agaynſt them, theyr cyties nor cõutrees, nether to maintaine theyr enemyes agaynſt thẽ. Yf there be any wycked perſonnes therfore, fled from theyr cõutre vnto you, delyuer thẽ vnto Symon the hye preſt, that he may punyſh them accordynge to theyr owne lawe.

The ſame wordes wrote the Romaynes alſo vnto Demetrius ỹ kynge, to Attalus, Araba, Arſaces and to al regions: as Samſanes, to thẽ of Sparta, Delo, Mido, Sidõ, Caria, Samos, Pamphilia, Lycia, Allicarnaſſum, D ⁊ to the Rhodes, to Faſelis, Coo, Sida, Arado, Gortina, Gnydũ, to Cypres and Cyren. And of euery lettre they ſente a coppye to Symon the hye preſt and to the people of the Iewes. So Antiochus the kynge brought hys hoſt vnto Dora ỹ ſeconde tyme to take it: where he made dyuerſe ordinaũce of warre, ⁊ kepte Triphon in, that he ſhulde not come forth. Thẽ ſent Symon to Antiochus two thouſande choſen men to help him with gold, ſyluer and other plẽteous geere: Neuertheleſſe, he wolde not receaue them, but brake al the conenaũt whych he made wᵗ Symõ afore, ⁊ withdrewe him ſelfe frõ him

He ſent Athenobius alſo a frende of hys vnto Simõ, for to reaſon with him, ſayeng: Ye wytholde from me Ioppa ⁊ Gaza (wyth ỹ caſtell that is at Ieruſalem) whyche are cyties of my realme, whoſe borders ye haue deſtroyed, ⁊ done greate euell in the lande, hauynge the dominacion in many other places of my kyngdome. Wherfore, delyuer now ỹ cyties whych ye haue taken, with ỹ tributes of the places that ye haue rule vpõ wythout ỹ borders of Iewry: Or els geue me fyue hũdreth talentes of ſyluer, yee, ⁊ for the harme that ye haue done in ỹ cyties ⁊ for the tributes of ỹ ſame, other fyue hundreth talentes. If no, we ſhall come and fyght againſt you. E

So Athenobius the kynges frende came to Ieruſalem, ⁊ when he ſaw the great worſhyp and honoure of Symon in gold, ſyluer ⁊ ſo great plentye of ornamentes: he marueled, and tolde Symon as ỹ kynge cõmaunded hym: Then anſwered Symon and ſayd vnto hym: *As for vs, we haue neyther takẽ other mens lãdes, nor witholden thẽ, but onely oure fathers heritage, whych our enemyes had vnryghteouſly in poſſeſſion a certayne tyme. Thys heritage of oure fathers haue we chalenged in proceſſe of tyme. And where as thou cõplayneſt concernynge Joppa and Gaza, they dyd great harme to oure people and in oure lande, yet wyll we gyue an C. talentes for them.

Neuertheles, Athenobius anſwered him not one word, but turned agayne wrothfully vnto the kynge, & tolde hym al theſe wordes, and the great dignitie of Symon, with all that he had ſene, and the kynge was very angrye. In the meane tyme fled Triphon by ſhyp vnto Orthoſaida. Then the kynge made Cendebeus captayne of the ſee coaſt, & gaue him an hoſt of fotemen and horſmen, commaundynge hym to remoue the hoſt towarde Jewry, and to buylde vp the cytie of Cedron, to make vp the portes, & to warre agaynſt the people of the Jewes. As for the kynge hym ſelfe, he folowed vpon Triphon. So Cendebeus came vnto Jamnia, and beganne to vexe the people, to treade downe Jewry, to take ỹ people preſoners, to ſlaye *1.mac.xv.b them, and *to buylde vp Cedron: where he ſet horſemen and other men of warre, that they myght come forth and go thorowe the ſtretes of Jewry, lyke as the kynge had commaunded hym.

¶The.xvi.Chapter.

¶Cendebeus the captayne of Antiochus hoſt is put to flyght of the ſonnes of Symon. Ptolomeus the ſonne of Abobus kylleth Symon & hys.ii.ſonnes at a banket. Jhon kylleth them that lye in wayte for hys lyfe.

A *1.mac.xiiii.c Then came Jhon vp from *Gaza, and tolde Symon his father, what Cendebeus had done amonge theyr people. Upon thys called Symon two of hys eldeſt ſonnes, Judas and Jhon, and ſayd vnto them: I and my brethren and my fathers houſe, haue euer frõ our youth vp vnto this daye, foughten agaynſt the enemyes of Iſrael, and God gaue vs good fortune to delyuer Iſrael oft tymes. And nowe for ſo much as I am olde, be ye in ſtede of me & my brother, to go forth and fyght for our people, & the helpe of God be wyth you. So he choſe xx. M. fyghtynge mẽ of ỹ countre, with horſmen alſo, whych wente forth agaynſt Cendebeus, and reſted at Modin.

In the mornyng they aroſe, and went into the playne felde: and beholde, a myghtye great hooſt came agaynſt them, both of fotemen and horſmen. Now was there a water broke betwyxte them, & Jhon remoued the hoſt towarde them. And whan he ſawe that the people was afrayed to go ouer the water broke, he wente ouer fyrſt hym ſelfe: and the men ſeynge thys, folowed hym.

B Then Jhon ſet hys horſmen and fotemẽ in order, the one by the other, for theyr enemyes horſmen were very many. But when they blewe vp the preſtes trompettes, Cendebeus fled wt his hooſt, wherof many were ſlayne, and the remnaunt gat them to theyr ſtronge holde. Judas alſo Jhons brother was wounded at the ſame tyme. And Jhon folowed ſtyl vpon the enemyes, tyl he came to Cedrõ *whych he buylded. The enemyes fled alſo vnto the towres that were in the feldes of Azotus, & thoſe dyd Jhon burne vp. *1.mac.xv.f. Thus there were ſlayne two thouſande mẽ of them, and Jhon turned againe peaceably into Jewry.

And in the feld of Jericho was Ptolomy the ſonne of Abobus made captayne: whych becauſe he had aboundaunce of ſyluer and golde (for he had maried ỹ daughter of Symõ ỹ hye preſt) waxed proude in his minde, and thought to conquere the lande, ymagenynge falſhed agaynſt Symon and hys ſonnes, C to deſtroye them. Now as Symõ was goynge aboute thorow the cyties, that were in the coũtre of Jewry, and carynge for thẽ: he came downe to Jericho with Mathatias and Judas his ſonnes, in the.C.lxx.vii. yeare in the.xi.moneth called *Sabat. *Januarye. Thã Ptolomy the ſonne of Abobus receaued thẽ (but wyth diſceate) into a ſtrõge houſe of his called Doch, whyche he had buylded, where he made them a banket.

So whan Symon and hys ſonnes were mery and had dronken wel, Ptolomy ſtode vp wyth hys men (whom he had hyd there) and toke theyr weapens, entred into the banket houſe, and ſlewe Symon wyth hys two ſonnes, and certaine of his ſeruaũtes. Such greate vnfaythfulneſſe dyd Ptolomy in Iſrael, and recompenſed euell for good. Then D wrote this Ptolomy ỹ ſame vnto king Antiochus, requyrynge him, that he ſhuld ſende hym an hoſt to helpe him: and ſo ſhuld he delyuer him the lande, with the cyties and tributes of the ſame. He ſent other men alſo vnto Gaza, for to take Jhon: and wrote vnto the captaynes to come to hym, and he ſhulde geue them ſyluer, golde and rewardes. And to Jeruſalem he ſente other, to take it, & the Sanctuary.

Then ranne there one before, and tolde Jhon in Gaza, that his father & his brethren were ſlayne, & howe that Ptolomy had ſent to ſlaye hym alſo. When Jhon herde thys, he was ſore abaſhed, and layed handes of them that were come to deſtroye hym, and ſlewe them: for he knewe, that they wente aboute to kyll hym.

As for other thynges concernynge Jhon: of hys warres, of hys noble actes (wherin he behaued hym ſelfe manfully) of the buyldynge of walles whych he made, and other of his dedes: They are wrytten in the cronicles of his preſthode, frõ the tyme forth that he was made hye preſt after hys father.

¶An Epiſtle of the Jewes that dwelte at Jeruſalem ſente vnto them that dwelt in Egypt, wherin they exhorte them to gyue thankes for the death of Antiochus. Of the fyre that was hydde in the pyt. The prayer of Nehemias.

A The brethren of the Jewes whych be at Jeruſalē, and in the lande of Jewry, wyſhe vnto thoſe brethrē of the Jewes that are thorow out Egypte: good fortune, health and peace.

God be gracious vnto you, and thynke vpon hys couenaunt ẏ he made wyth Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob his faythful ſeruaũtes: *and gyue you all ſuch an harte, that ye maye loue & ſerue hym, yee, and perfourme hys wyll wyth an whole herte and of a wyllynge mynde. He open your hertes in hys lawe and in hys commaundementes, ſende you peace: heare youre prayers, be at one wyth you, and neuer forſake you in tyme of trouble. Thys is here our prayer for you.

what tyme as Demetrius raygned, in ẏ Clxix. yeare, we Jewes wrote vnto you in the trouble and violence that came vnto vs. In thoſe yeares, after that Jaſon departed oute of the holy lande and kyngdome, they brent vp the portes, & ſhed innocent bloude. Then made we our prayer vnto the Lorde, and were hearde: we offred: and lyghted the candels, ſetting forth cakes and bred: *And nowe come ye vnto the feaſte of tabernacles in the moneth †Caſleu.

B In the. Clxxxviij. yeare, the people that was at Jeruſalem and in Jewry, the councell and Judas hym ſelfe, ſent thys wholſome ſalutacion vnto Ariſtobolus kyng Ptolomys maſter, which came of the generacion of the anoynted Preſtes: and to the Jewes that were in Egypte: In ſo muche as God hath delyuered vs from greate parels, we thanke hym hylye. In that we reſyſted ſo myghtye a kynge. And why? he brought mē out of Perſis by heapes, to fyght agaynſte vs and the holy cytie. For as he was in Perſis (namely, the Captayne wyth the greate hooſt) he peryſhed in the temple of Naneas, beynge diſceaued thorowe the deuice of Naneas preſtes. For as he was purpoſed to haue dwelt there, Antiochus & hys frendes came thyther, to receaue muche money for a dowry. So when Naneas preſtes had layed forth the money, he entred wyth a ſmal company into the compaſſe of the temple, and ſo they ſhut the temple.

C Now when Antiochus entred by opening the preuy intraũce of the temple, the preſtes ſtoned the captaine to death, hewed them in peces that were wyth hym, ſmote of theyr heades, and threwe them out. In al thinges God be prayſed, whyche hath delyuered the wycked into our handes.

Where as we are now purpoſed to kepe the purificacion of the temple vpon the xxv. daye [illegible] the moneth Caſleu, we thought neceſſarye to certifye you therof: that ye alſo myght *kepe the tabernacles feaſt day, and the daye of the fyre, whyche was gyuen vs when Nehemias offred, after that he had ſet vp the temple and the aulter. For what tyme as oure fathers were ledde a waye vnto Perſis, the preſtes (whyche then ſoughte the honoure of God) toke the fyre preuely from the aulter, and hyd it in a valley, where as was a depe drye pytte: and therin they kepte it, ſo that the place was vnknowen to euery man. Now after many yeares whan it pleaſed God that Nehemias ſhulde be ſente from the kynge of Perſia, *he ſente the chylders chyldren of thoſe preſtes (which had hyd the fyre) to ſeke it. D And as they tolde vs they founde no fyre, but thycke water. Then commaunded he them to drawe it vp, & to bring it hym, and the offringes withal. Now whē the ſacrifices were layed on and ordred, the Preſt Nehemias commaunded to ſprynkle them and the wod wyth water. Whan thys was done, & the tyme come that the Sunne ſhone, whyche afore was hyd in the cloude: there was a great fyre kyndled. In ſo much that euery man marueled. Nowe al the preſtes prayed, whyle the ſacrifyce was a makynge. Jonathas prayed fyrſt, and the other gaue anſwere.

*Leu.xxiii.f Num.xxix.b iii.Eſd.v.c

*Leui.vi.a, f.a.xvi.c

And Nehemias prayer was after thys maner: O Lorde God maker of al thynges, thou fearfull and ſtronge, thou ryghteous and mercyfull, thou that arte onely a gracious kynge, onely lyberall, onely iuſte, Almyghtye and euerlaſtynge, thou that delyuereſt Iſrael from al trouble, thou that haſt choſen the fathers and halowed thē: receaue the offerynge for the whole people of Iſrael, preſerue thine owne porcion, and halowe it, gather thoſe together, that are ſcatred abrod from vs: delyuer them that are vnder the Heathens bondage, loke vpon them which are deſpyſed and abhorred, that the Heathē maye knowe and ſe howe that thou arte our God: Punyſhe them that oppreſſe, & proudlye put vs to diſhonoure. Set thy people agayne in thy holy place * lyke as Moſes hath ſpoken.

*Deu.xxx.a.

E And the preſtes ſonge Pſalmes of thankeſgeuynge, ſo lõge as the ſacrifice endured. Nowe when the ſacrifice was brent, Nehemias commaunded the greate ſtones to be ſprynkled wyth the reſidue of the water: *Whych whā it was done, ther was kyndled.

*Judi.vi.d iii.Re.xviii.c Eccl.xlviii.a

led a flamme of them alſo: but it was conſumed thorowe ẏ lyght, that ſhyned from the aulter. So when this matter was knowen, it was tolde ẏ kynge of Perſia, ẏ in the place where the preſtes, which were led awaye, had hyd fyre, there apeared water in ſteade of fyre, and that Nehemias & his company, had puryfied the ſacryfyces withall. Then the kynge conſyderynge & ponderynge the matter dilygently, made hym a temple to proue the thynge that was done. And when he founde it ſo in dede, he gaue the preſtes many gyftes & diuerſe rewardes, yee, he toke them with his awne hād and gaue them. And Nehemias called the ſame place Nephthar, which is as moch to ſaye as a cleuſynge: but many men call it Nephi.

¶ The.ii.Chapter.

¶ Howe Jeremye hyd the tabernacle, the Arke, and the aulter in the hyll. Of the.v.bokes of Jaſon conteyned in one.

A It is founde alſo in the wrytynges of Jeremy the prophet, that he cōmaūded thē which where caryed awaye. *ii.Mac.i.c. ‡Jere.xxix.b Baruc.vi.a to take fyre, *as it is ſayde afore. ‡ He commaunded them alſo, that they ſhuld not forget the lawe and commaundementes of the Lorde, and that they ſhulde not erre in theyr myndes, whan they ſe ymages of ſyluer and golde wyth theyr ornamentes. Theſe & ſuch other thynges cōmaunded he them, and exhorted them, that they ſhulde not let the law of God go out of theyr hertes.

It is wrytten alſo, howe the prophet (at the commaundement of God) charged them to take the tabernacle, & the arcke with thē: and he wente forth vnto the mountayne, *Deute. xxxiiii.a. where Moſes clymed vp, *and ſawe the heritage of God. And whē Jeremy came there he founde an open caue, wherin he layed the tabernacle, the arke. and the aulter of incēſe, and ſo ſtopped the hole. There came certaine men together alſo folowynge him, to marke the place, but they could not fynde it. Which whan Jeremy perceaued, he reproued them,
B ſayenge: As for that place, it ſhalbe vnknowen, vntyll the tyme that God gather hys people together agayne, and receaue them vnto mercy. Then ſhal God ſhewe thē theſe thynges, and the maieſtye of the Lorde ſhall *Exo.xiii.d. ii.Re.viii.b. appeare, *and the cloud alſo lyke as it was ſhewed vnto Moſes: and lyke as when Salomon deſyred, that the place myght be ſanctifyed, and it was ſhewed hym.

For he beynge a wyſe man, handled honorably & wyſely, offrynge vnto God in the halowynge of the tēple, whan it was fyniſhed. *Leui.ix.d. *And like as whē Moſes prayed vnto the Lorde, the fyre came downe frō heauen, and conſumed the burnt offerynge: Euen ſo prayed Salomon alſo, *and the fyre came downe from heauen, and conſumed ẏ burnt offerynge. *ii.pa.vii. And Moſes ſayd: becauſe the ſynofferynge was not eaten, therfore it is conſumed. In lyke maner Salomon kepte the dedicacion (or halowynge) eyght dayes.

C In the Annotacions and wrytynges of *Jeremy, *Some reade: nehemias were theſe thynges put alſo: and howe he made a lybrary, and how he gathered out of all countrees the bokes of the prophetes, of Dauid, the Epiſtles of the kinges and of the preſentes. Euen ſo Judas alſo, loke what he learned by experiēce of warre, and ſuche thynges as hath happened vnto vs, he gathered them altogether, and ſo we haue them by vs: Yf ye nowe deſyre to haue the ſame, ſende ſome bodye to fetch thē vnto you. Where as we then are aboute to celebrate the purificacion, we haue wrytten vnto you. Therfore, ye ſhall do well, yf ye kepe the ſame dayes. We hope alſo, that the God (which delyuered hys people, and gaue them all the heritage, kyngdome, preſthode *Deu.xxx.a. and Sanctuarye *that he promyſed them in the lawe) ſhall ſhortly haue mercye vpon vs, and gather vs together from vnder the heauen into hys holy place: for he hath ſaued vs from greate parels, and hath clenſed the place.

D As concernynge Judas Machabeus and hys brethren, the purificacyon of the greate temple, the dedicacion of the aulter, yee, and of the warres that cōcerne noble Antiochus *i.mac.vi.a. and *Eupator hys ſonne, of the ſhynynges that came downe from heauen vpon thoſe, whyche manfully defended the Jewes. For though they were but fewe, yet defēded they the whole lande, droue awaye the enemyes hooſt, recouered agayne the tēple, that was ſpoken of thorowe out all the worlde, delyuered the cytie, doynge theyr beſte, that the lawe of the Lorde whyche was put downe, myghte wyth all tranquilitie be reſtored agayne vnto the Lord, that was ſo mercyful vnto thē. As touchyng Jaſon alſo of Cyrē, we haue vndertaken cōpendeouſly to bringe into one boke, the thynges that were comprehended of hym in fyue: For we conſyderynge the multitude of the bokes, and howe harde it ſhulde be for them that wolde medle wyth ſtoryes and actes (and that becauſe of ſo dyuerſe matters) haue vndertaken ſo to comprehende the ſtories: that ſuch as are diſpoſed to reade myght haue pleaſure and paſtyme therin: and that they whyche are diligente in ſuche thynges, myghte the better thynke vpon them: yee, and that whoſoeuer reade them: myght haue profyte therby.

E Neuertheleſſe, we our ſelues that haue medled with this matter for the ſhortening of it haue taken no ſmall labour, but greate diligence, watchynges & trauayle. Lyke as they

as they that make a feaſt, wolde fayne do other men pleaſure: Euē ſo we alſo (for many mens ſakes) are very well contēt to take the laboure, where as we maye ſhortly comprehende, the thynges that other men haue truly wrytten.

For he yͭ buyldeth an houſe anewe, muſt prouyde for many thiges, to the whole buyldynge: but he that paynteth it afterwarde, ſeketh but only what is comly, mete & conueniēt to garnyſh it wythall. Euen ſo do we alſo in lyke maner. And why? He that beginneth to wryte a ſtory for the fyrſt, muſt with his vnderſtandynge gather the matter together, ſet hys wordes in ordre, and deligētly ſeke out of euery parte: But he that afterwarde wyll ſhorten it, vſeth fewe wordes, & toucheth not the matter at the largeſt ; Let thys be ſufficient for a Prologe, nowe wyll we beginne to ſhewe the matter: for it is but a folyſh thynge to make a longe Prologe, & to be ſhorte in the ſtory it ſelfe.

¶ The.iij. Chapter.

¶ Of the honoure done vnto the temple by the kynges of the Gentyles. Symon vttereth what treaſure is in the temple. Heliodorus is ſent to take them awaye. He is ſtrycken of God, & healed at the prayer of Onias.

A What tyme as the holy cyte was inhabited in all peace & wealth, and whē the lawes were yet very well kepte. (For ſo was it ordeyned by Onias the hye preſtes and other godly mē yͭ were enemyes to wyc-
*i. Mac.i.c. kedneſſe) It came therto, *yͭ euē the kynges & princes thē ſelues dyd the place great worſhyppe, & garnyſhed the temple wyth greate gyftes: In ſo moche that Seleucus kinge of Aſia of hys awne rentes, bare all the coſtes belongynge to the ſeruice of the offrynges. Then *Simon of the trybe of Bē Jamin, &
*ij.mac.iij.a ruler of the tēple, labonred to worcke ſome myſchefe i yͤ cite: but yͤ hie preaſte reſiſted hī.

Neuertheleſſe, when he myght not ouer-
*ij.mac.iij.b come Onias, he gat hym to *Appolonius yͤ ſonne of Therſa (whych thē was chefe Lord in Celoſyria and Phenices) and tolde him, yͭ the treaſury in Jeruſalem was full of innumerable money, & howe that the comō goodes (whych belonged not vnto the offerynges) were exceadinge greate alſo: yee, & how it were poſſyble, that all theſe myght come vnder the kynges power.

Nowe when Appolonius had ſhewed the kynge of the moneye, as it was tolde hym:
B yͤ kynge called for Heliodorus his ſtewarde, & ſent hym with a cōmaundement, to bringe hym the ſame money. Immediatly Heliodorus toke hys iourney, but vnder a coloure, as though he wolde go thorowe Celoſyria and Phenices to viſet the cyties, but his purpoſe was to fulfyll the kynges pleaſure. So whē he came to Jeruſalē, and was louyngly receaued of the hye preſt into the cyte: he tolde what was determyned concernynge the moneye, and ſhewed the cauſe of hys cōmynge: he aſked alſo, yf it were ſo in dede. Thē the hye preſt tolde hym, that there was ſoch money layed vp for the vpholdynge of wydowes and fatherleſſe chyldren, & howe that a certayne of it belōged vnto Hyrcanus Tobias a noble man: and that of all the moneye (whych yͤ wycked Simon had bewrayed) there were.iiij.hūdreth talētes of ſyluer, &.ij.hūdreth of golde: yee, & that it were vnpoſſyble for thoſe mens meanynge to be diſceaued, that had layed vp theyr money in the place and temple (whych is had in worſhyp thorow the whole worlde) for yͤ mayntenaunce and honoure of the ſame. Wher vnto Heliodorus anſwered, that the kinge had commaunded hym in any wyſe, to brynge hym in the money.

So at the daye appoynted, Heliodorus C entred into the temple to ordre thys matter. But there was no ſmall feare thorowe out the whole cytie. The Preſtes fell downe before the aulter in theyr veſtimentes, & called vnto heauē vpon hym, *whych had made a *Exo.xxij.b
lawe concernynge ſtuffe geuen to kepe, that they ſhulde be ſafely preſerued for ſoch as cōmytte thē vnto keppynge. Then who ſo had loked the hye preſte in the face, it wolde haue greued hys herte: For hys coūtenaunce and the chaungynge of hys coloure, declared the inwarde ſorowe of his minde. The mā was all in heuyneſſe, and hys body in feare: wherby they that loked vpō hym, myght perceaue the grefe of hys herte. The other people alſo came out of theyr houſes by heapes vnto the comon prayer becauſe the place was lyke to come into confuſyon. The wemen came together thorowe the ſtretes, with hearrye clothes aboute theyr breſtes.

The virgyns alſo that were kepte in, rāne to Onias, ſome in the walles, other ſome loked out of the wyndowes: yee, they all helde vp theyr handes towarde heauen, & prayed. A miſerable thynge was it, to loke vpon the comen people, & the hye preſt beynge in ſoche trouble. But they beſought almyghty God that the goodes whych were cōmytted vnto them, might be kepte whole, for thoſe that had delyuered thē vnto theyr keppynge. Neuertheles, the thynge that Heliodorus was determyned to do, that perfourmed he in the ſame place, he hym ſelfe perſonally beynge about the treaſury wyth hys men of warre, But the ſprete of almyghty God ſhewed hī ſelfe opēly, ſo that all they whych preſumed to obeye Heliodorus, fell thorow the power of God into a greate fearfulneſſe and drede.
*For there appeared vnto them an horſe, wͭ *ij.Mac.x.e. and.xi.b a terrible man ſyttynge vpon hym, deckt in goodly araye, and the horſe ſmote at Heliodorus wyth hys fore fete. Nowe, he that ſat

vpō the horſe, had harneſſe of golde vpō him

Moreouer, there appeared.ij. fayre & beutyfull yōge mē in goodly aray, whych ſtode by hym, ſcourged hym of both the ſydes, and gaue hym many ſtrypes without ceaſynge. * With that fell Heliodorus ſodēly vnto the grounde. So they toke hym vp (beynge cōpaſed aboute with greate darckeneſſe) & bare hym out vpon a bere. Thus he that came wyth ſo many runners and men of warre in to the ſayde treaſury, was borne out, where as no man myght helpe hym: & ſo the power of God was manifeſt and knowne. He laye ſtyll domme alſo by the power of God deſtitute of all hope & lyfe, And they prayſed the Lord, that he had ſhewed his power vpō his place and tēple, whych a lytle afore was full of feare & trouble: and that thorowe the reuelacyon of the almyghtye Lorde, it was fylled wyth ioye and gladneſſe.

Then certayne of Heliodorus frendes prayed Onias, that in all haſte he wolde call vpon God, to graunte hym hys lyfe, whych was geuynge vp the gooſt. So the hye preſt conſydered the matter, and leſt the kynge ſhulde ſuſpecte that the Jewes had done Heliodorus ſome euell: he offred an healthofferynge for hym. Nowe whē the hye Preſt had opteyned hys peticyon, the ſame yonge men in the ſame clothinge appeared, and ſtode beſyde Heliodorus, ſayenge: Thancke Onias the hye preſt, for * for hys ſake hath the Lord graunted the thy lyfe: therfore ſeynge that God hath ſcourged the, geue him prayſe and thankes, and ſhewe euery man hys myght & power. And when they had ſpokē theſe wordes, they appeared nomore.

F

So Heliodorus offred vnto God, made great vowes vnto hym, whych had graūted hym hys lyfe, thācked Onias, toke his hooſt & wēte agayne to the kynge. Then teſtifyed he vnto euery man of the greate worckes of God, that he had ſene wt hys eyes. And whē the kynge aſked Heliodorus who were mete to be ſent yet once agayne to Jeruſalem, he ſayde: yf thou haſt any enemy or adnerſary vnto thy realme, ſende hym thyther, & thou ſhalt haue hym punyſhed, yf he eſcape wyth hys lyfe: for in that place (no doute) there is a ſpeciall power & worckyng of God. For he ẏ dwelleth in heauen, viſyteth & defendeth ẏ place: and all that come to do it harme, he punyſheth and plageth thē. Thys is nowe the matter concernynge Heliodorus, and the kepynge of the treaſury at Jeruſalem.

¶ The.iiij.Chapter.

* ij. Mac.iij.a.

THis Symō now * (of whō we ſpake afore) beynge a bewrayer of the money & of hys awne naturall cōtre, reported the worſt of Onias: as though he had moued Heliodorus vnto thys, & as though he had bene a brynger vp of euel. Thus was he not aſhamed to call hym an enemye of the realme, that was ſo faythfull an ouerſeer & defender of the cyte & of hys people: yee, & ſo feruent in the lawe of God. But whē the malice of Simō increaſed ſo farre, that thorow his frendes there were certayne manſlaughters cōmytted: Onias conſydered the parell that myght come thorow thys ſtryfe, & how that Appolonius (namely the chefe Lorde in Celoſyria & Phenices) was all ſet vpon tyranny, and Symons malice increaſed the ſame: He gat hym to the kynge, not as an accuſer of the cyteſyns, but as one ẏ by hym ſelfe intended the comō wealth of the whole multitude. For he ſawe it was not poſſible to lyue in peace, nether Simon to leaue of from his folyſhneſſe, except the kynge dyd loke therto. But after the deeth of Seleucꝰ, when Antiochus (which is called the noble) toke ẏ kyngdome: Jaſon the brother of Onias laboured to be hye preſt: For he came vnto the kynge, and promiſed him thre hundreth &.lx. talentes of ſyluer, & of the other rentes.lxxx. talentes. Beſydes this he promyſed him yet an.C.&.L. yf he myght haue the ſcole of the chyldren, & that he myght call them of Jeruſalem Antiochians. Whych when the kynge had graunted, & he had gottē the ſuperiorite, he begāne immediatly to drawe his kynſmē to the cuſtome of the Heathē, put downe the thynges that the Jewes had ſet vp of loue, by John the father of Eupolonius whych was ſent ambaſſytoure vnto Rome, for to make the bonde of frēdſhyppe & loue. He put downe all the Jewes & Lyberties of the Jewes, & ſet vp the wycked ſtatutes. He durſt make a fyghtinge ſcole vnder the caſtell, and ſet fayre yonge men to lerne the maners of whores and brothels.

Thys was nowe the begynnynge of the Heathenyſh & ſtraunge cōuerſacyō, brought in thorowe the vngracyous & vnhearde wyckedneſſe of Jaſon, whych ſhulde not be called a Preſt, but an vngodly perſonne. In ſo moch that the preſtes were now nomore occupied about the ſeruice of the aulter, but deſpyſed the temple, regarded not the offrynges: yee, gaue their diligēce to lerne to fyght, to wraſtle, to leape, to daūce, & to put at the ſtone, not ſettynge by the honoure of the fathers, but lyked the glory of the Grekes beſt of all: for the whych they ſtroue perlouſly, & were gredy to folowe theyr ſtatutes, yee, theyr luſt was in all thynges to be lyke thē, whych afore were theyr enemyes & deſtroyers. Howbeit to do wyckedly agaynſt the lawe of God ſhall not eſcape vnpunyſhed: but of thys we ſhall ſpeake here after.

What tyme as the * Olympiades ſportes were played at Tyrus (the kynge hym ſelfe beinge preſente) this vngracious Iaſon ſent wycked men, bearynge from them of Ieruſalē (whych nowe were called Antiochiās) iij.C. drachmas of ſyluer for an offerynge to Hercules. Theſe had they that caryed them deſyred vnder ſoch a faſhion, as though they ſhulde not haue bene offred but beſtowed to other vſes. Neuertheles, he that ſent them, ſent them to the intēt that they ſhulde be offred vnto Hercules. But becauſe of thoſe ẏ were preſent, they were geuen as to the makynge of ſhyppes. And Appolonius the ſonne of Neſteus was ſent into Egypte, becauſe of the noble men of kynge Ptolomy Philometor. Nowe when Antiochus perceaued, that he was put out frō medlynge in the realme, he ſought hys awne profyte, departed from thence, came to Ioppa, & then to Ieruſalem: where he was honorably receaued of Iaſon, & of the cytie, & was brought in with torche lyght and wyth greate prayſe: and ſo he turned hys hooſt vnto Phenices.

*i.Mac.iij.b

E After.iii. yeare Iaſon ſent Menelaus, the foreſayde Simōs brother, * to beare the money vnto the kyng, & to bringe him anſwere of other neceſſary matters. But he (when he was prayſed of the kinge for magnifying of his power) turned ẏ preſthod vnto him ſelfe, layinge vp.iii.C. talentes of ſyluer for Iaſon. So whē he had gotten cōmaundemētes from the kynge (he came hauynge nothynge ẏ becōmeth a preſte) but bearinge ẏ ſtomack of a cruel tyraūt, & ẏ wrath of a wylde brute beeſt. * Thē Iaſon (whych had diſceaued his awne brother) ſeynge that he hym ſelfe was begyled alſo, was fayne to fle into the lande of the Ammonites, & Menelaus gat the dominion. But as for the money ẏ he had promyſed vnto the kyng, he dyd nothynge therin, whē Soſtratus the ruler of the caſtell requyred it of hym. For Soſtratꝰ was the mā that gathered the cuſtomes: wherfore they were both called before the king. Thus was Menelaus put out of the preſtode, and Lyſimachus his brother came in his ſteade. Soſtratus alſo was made Lord of the Cypriās.

F It happened in the meane ſeaſon, that the Tharſiās & Mallaciās made inſurreccyon, becauſe they were geuen for a preſent vnto kynge Antiochus cōcubyne. Then came the kynge in all the haſte, to ſtyll them agayne, & to pacifie the matter, leauyng Andronicus there to be hys debyte as one mete therfore. Now Menelans ſuppoſing that he had gotten a ryght conuenient tyme, ſtole certayne veſſels of golde out of the temple, and gaue them to Andronicus for a preſent: & ſome he ſolde at Tyrus and in the cyties therby.

Whych when Onias knewe of a ſuertye, he reproued hym: but he kepte him in a Sanctuary beſyde Daphnis, that lyeth by Antioche. Wherfore Menelaus gat him to Andronicus, & prayed hym ẏ he wold ſlaye Onias. So whē he came to Onias, he counceled him craftely to come out of the Sanctuary geuynge hym hys hāde with an othe (howe be it he ſuſpecte him) and then he ſlewe Onias, wythout any regarde of ryghteouſneſſe.

For the whych cauſe not only the Iewes, but other nacyons alſo toke indignaciō, and were diſpleaſed for the vnryghteous death of ſo godly a man.

G And when the kynge was come agayne from Cilicia, the Iewes and certayne of the Grekes wente vnto hym, cōplaynynge for the vnryghteous death of Onias. Yee, Antiochus hym ſelfe was ſory in his mynde for Onias, ſo that it pityed him, & he wepte, remembrynge his ſoberneſſe & manerly behauoure. Wherfore he was ſo kyndled in hys mynde, that he cōmaūded Andronicus to be ſtryped out of his purple clothīge, & ſo to be led thorow out the cyte: yee, & ẏ vngracious man to be ſlayne in the ſame place where he cōmitted his wikednes vpon Onias. Thus the Lorde rewarded him his punyſhmēt, as he had deſerued. Now when Lyſymachus had done many wycked dedes in the temple thorow the councell of Menelaus, and the voyce came abrode: the multitude gathered them together agaynſt Lyſymachus: for he had caryed out now moch golde.

So when the people aroſe, and were full of dyſpleaſure, Lyſymachus armed.iii.M. vnthriftes to defende hym: a certayne tyraunte beyng theyr captayne, which was growen both in age and woodneſſe. But when the people vnderſtode the purpoſe of Lyſymachus, ſome gat ſtones, ſome good ſtrōge clubbes, & ſome caſt aſhes vpō Lyſimachus. Thus there were many of thē wounded, ſome beyng ſlayne, & all ẏ other chaced awaye, But as for the wycked churchrobber hym ſelfe, they kylled him beſyde the treaſury. H Of theſe matters therfore there was kepte a courte agaynſt Menelaus. Nowe when the kynge came to Tyrus, they made a complaynte vnto him of Menelaus, cōcernyng this buſyneſſe, and the ambaſſytours were thre. But Menelaus went & promiſed Ptolomy, to geue hym moche money, yf he wolde perſuade the kynge. So Ptolomy went to the kynge into a courte (where as he was ſet to coole hym) & brought hym out of ẏ mynde. In ſo moch that he diſcharged Menelaus frō the accuſaciōs, that not wythſtādynge was cauſe of all myſchefe: and thoſe poore men, whych yf they had tolde theyr cauſe, yee, before the, Scithiās, they ſhulde haue bene iudged innocent, them he condemned to death.

Thus were they ſoone punyſhed, whych folowed vpon the matter for the citie, for the people, & for the holy veſſel. Wherfore, they of Tyrus toke indignacyon, and buryed the honorably. And ſo thorow the couetouſneſſe of them that were in power: Menelaus remayned ſtyll in auctorite, increaſynge in malyce, to the hurte of the cyteſyns.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ Of the ſygnes and tokens ſene in Jeruſalem. Of the ende and offence of Jaſon. The purſute of Antiochus agaynſt the Jewes. The ſpoylynge of the temple.

A AT the ſame tyme Antiochus made hym ready to go agayne in to Egypte. Then were there ſene at Jeruſalẽ. xl. dayes lõge, horſmen, rũnynge to and fro in the ayre, which had raymẽt of golde, & ſpeares. There were ſene alſo whole hooſtes of men weapened, and horſes runnynge in an ordre, howe they came together, howe they helde forth theyr ſhyldes, how the harneſſed men drewe out theyr ſwerdes, & ſhott theyr dartes.

The ſhyne of the golden weapens was ſene, & of all maner of armure. Wherfore euery man prayed, that thoſe tokẽs myght turne to good. Nowe whẽ there was gone forth a falſe rumoure, as though Antiochus had bene deed: Jaſon toke a. M. mẽ, and came ſodenly vpon the cytie. The cyteſyns ranne vnto the walles, at the laſt was the cytie takẽ, and Menelaus fled into the caſtell.

B As for Jaſon, he ſpared not hys awne cyteſyns in the ſlaughter, nether conſydered he what greate euell it were, to deſtroye the ꝓſperite of hys awne kynſmẽ: but dyd as one that had gotten the victory of hys enemyes, and not of hys frendes. For all thys gatt he not the ſuperiorite, but at the laſt receaued cõfuſyon for hys malyce. * and fled agayne *ij.mac.iiij.c lyke a vagabunde into the lande of the Ammonites.

Finally, for a rewarde of hys wyckedneſſe he was accuſed before Aretha the kynge of the Arabians. In ſo moch that he was fayne to fle from cytie to cytie, beynge depyſed of euery mã as a forſaker of the lawes, and an abhominable perſonne. And at the laſt (as an open enemy of hys awne naturall countre and of the cyteſyns) he was dryuen into Egypte.

Thus he that afore put many out of theyr awne natyue land, peryſhed from home him ſelfe. He went to Lacedemon, thynckynge there to haue gotten ſuccourre by reaſon of kynred. And he that afore had caſten many one out vnburyed, was throwen out hym ſelfe, no man mournynge for hym, ner puttynge hym in his graue: ſo that he nether enioyed the buryall of a ſtraunger, nether was he partaker of hys fathers ſepulcre.

C Nowe when thys was done, the kynge ſuſpecte, that the Jewes wolde haue fallen *i.Mac.i.c. from hym: wherfore he came in a greate dyſpleaſure out of Egipte, * & toke the cytie by violẽce. He commaunded hys men of warre alſo, that they ſhulde kyll and not ſpare, but ſlaye downe ſoch as wythſtode them, or clymed vp vpon the houſes.

Thus was there a greate ſlaughter of yonge men, olde men, wemen, chyldren and vyrgines. In. iij. dayes were there ſlayne: lxxx. M. fourty thouſande put in preſon, and no leſſe ſolde. Yet was he not content wᵗ thys but durſt go into the mooſt holy tẽple (Menelaus that traytoure to the lawes & to hys awne naturall cõutre, beynge hys gyde) and with his wicked hãdes toke the holy veſſel, which other kynges & cyties had geuen thyther for the garnyſhinge and honoure of the place: them toke he in hys hãdes vnworthely, and defyled them.

D So mad was Antiochus, that he conſydered not, howe that God was a lytle wroth for the ſynnes of thẽ that dwelt in the cytie, for the whych ſoch confuſyõ came vpon that *Iudit.v.d. place: * And why? yf it had not happened thẽ to haue bene lapped in many ſynnes, this Antiochus (as ſoone as he had come) had ſodenly bene punyſhed, and ſhutt out for hys *ij.mac.iij.d preſumptiõ, * lyke as Heliodorus was, whõ Seleucus the kynge ſente to robbe the treaſury. Neuertheles, God hath not choſen the people for the places ſake, but the place for the peoples ſake: and therfore is the place become partaker of ẏ peoples trouble, but afterwarde ſhall it enioye the wealth of them. And lyke as it is nowe forſakẽ in the wrath of almyghtye God, ſo when the greate God is reconcyled, it ſhall be ſett vp in hye worſhyp agayne.

E So when Antiochus had taken a. M. and viij. C. talentes out of the tẽple, he gat hym to Antioche in all the haſte, thinckyng in his pride, that he myght make mẽ ſayle vpõ the drye land, and to go vpon the ſee, ſoch an hye mynde had he. He lefte debytes there, to vexe the people: At Jeruſalem left he Philyppe a Phrigiã, in maners more cruell thẽ hym ſelfe ẏ ſet hym there: At Garyſim he left Andronicus & Menelaus, which were more greuous to the cyteſins thẽ other. * Nowe as he *i.Mac.i.a. was thus ſet in malyce agaynſt the Jewes, he ſent Appolonius an hated prynce, wyth xxij. M. cõmaũdyng hym to ſlaye thoſe that were of perfect age, and to ſell the wemen, maydens & chyldrẽ. Whẽ he cam nowe to Jeruſalem, he fayned peace, & kepte hym ſtyll vntyll the Sabboth daye. And then he commaunded hys mẽ to take them to their weapens (for the Jewes kepte holy daye) & ſo he ſlew all them that were gone forth to the opẽ playe, rũnynge here & there thorow the cytie wyth hys men weapened, and murthured a great nõbre. * But Judas Machabeꝰ which *i.Mac.i.c. was the tenth, fled into the wyldernesſe, led hys lyfe there wyth hys companye amonge wylde beaſtes and vpon the mountaynes, dwellynge there & eatynge graſſe, leſt they ſhulde be partakers of the fylthyneſſe.

¶ The .vj. Chapter.

¶ The Jewes are compelled to leaue the lawe of God. The temple is defyled. The readers are monyſhed that they ſhall not abhorre the aduerſyte wherwyth yͤ Lord afflicteth them. The greuous payne of Eleazarus.

A NOt longe after thys, ſent the kynge a meſſauger of Antioche, for to compel the Jewes, to altre the ordinaũces of the fathers and the lawe of God, to defyle the temple that was at Jeruſalẽ, & to call it the temple of Jupiter Olympius: and that they ſhulde be in Gazarim, as thoſe which dwell at the place of Jupiter the herberous. Thys wycked ſedicyon of the vngodly was heuy vpon all the people: for the temple was ful of voluptuouſnes, bybbyng and bollynge of the Heathen, of rybaudes & harlottes together. The wemen went into the holy place, and bare in that was not laufull. The aulter alſo was full of vnlaufull thynges, whych the lawe forbyddeth to laye vpõ it. The Sabbothes were not kepte, the other ſolempne feaſtes of the lande were not regarded. To be playne, there durſt no man be a knowẽ that he was a Jewe. In the day of the kynges byrth they were cõpelled parforce to offre: and when the feaſt of Bachus was kepte, they were conſtrayned to were garlãdes of yuye, and ſo to go aboute to the honoure of Bachus.

B Moreouer, thorowe the coũcell of Ptolomy, there went out a cõmaundement in the nexte cyties of the Heathen, that they ſhulde intreate the Jewes in like maner: namely, to compell them for to do ſacrifyce after the lawes of the Gentiles: & whoſo wolde not, to put thẽ to death. A pyteous thynge was it to ſe. There were .ij. wemen accuſed to haue circumciſed theyr ſonnes, whom when they had led rõude aboute the cytie (the babes hãgyng at theyr breſtes) they caſte thẽ downe headlynges ouer yͤ walles. Some that were crepte in dẽnes and had kepte the Sabboth were accuſed vnto Phylyppe, & brent in the fyre: becauſe that for the feare of God they kepte the commaundemẽt ſo ſtyfly, & wolde not defende them ſelues. Nowe I beſeche all thoſe whych reade thys boke, that they refuſe it not for theſe falles of aduerſyte: & iudge the thynges (yͭ are happened) for no deſtruciõ, but for a chaſtenynge of our people. And why? When God ſuffreth not ſynners longe to folowe theyr awne mynde, but ſhortly punyſheth thẽ, *it is a token of hys greate louynge kyndnes. *Prou.iij.b. C For thys grace haue we of God more then other people, that he ſuffreth not vs longe to ſynne vnpuniſhed lyke as other naciõs, yͭ when the daye of iudgemẽt cõmeth, he maye punyſh them in the fulnes of their ſynnes. If we ſynne, he correckteth vs, but he neuer wythdrawetḣ hys mercy from vs: & though he punyſh wyth aduerſyte, yet doth he neuer forſake hys people. But lett thys that we haue ſpoken nowe wyth fewe wordes, be for a warnynge and exhortacion of the Heathen.

Nowe wyll we come to the declarynge of yͤ matter. Eleazar one of the principall Scrybes, an aged man & of a well fauored cõtenaunce, was conſtrayned to gape wyth opẽ mouth, *& to eate ſwynes fleſhe. *Leui.xi.a But he deſyring rather to dye gloryouſly then to lyue wͭ ſhame, offred hym ſelfe wyllyngly to the martyrdome. Nowe whẽ he ſawe yͭ he muſt nedes go to it, he toke it paciẽtly: for he was at apoynte wyth hym ſelfe, yͭ he wolde conſente to no vnlaufull thynge for eny pleaſure of lyfe. They yͭ ſtode by beynge moued wͭ D pyte (but not aryght,) for the olde frendſhyp of the mã, toke hym aſyde pryuely, & prayed hym, that he wolde let ſoch fleſhe be brought hym as were laufull to eate, & then to make a countenaunce, as though he had eaten of the fleſh of the ſacrifyce lyke as the kyng cõmaunded, for ſo he myght be delyuered from death & ſo for the olde frendſhyp of the man, they ſhewed hym thys kyndnes.

But he beganne to conſydre hys diſcrete & honorable age, hys noble and worſhypfull ſtock, & howe yͭ frõ his youth vp he had bene of an honeſt & good cõuerſacyon: yee, & howe conſtantly he had kepte the ordinaunces and lawes cõmaũded by God, wherfore he gaue them thys anſwere, & sayd: Yet had I rather fyrſt be layed ĩ my graue. *For it becõmeth *i.Thes.v.c not myne age (ſayde he) in eny wyſe to dyſſemble, wherby many yõg perſonnes might thyncke, yͭ Eleazar beynge .lxxx. yeare olde & .x. were nowe gone to a ſtraunge lyfe: & ſo thorowe myne ypocriſy (for a lytle tyme of a trãſytory lyfe) they myght be diſceaued: by thys meanes alſo ſhulde I defyle myne age, & make it abhominable. For though I were nowe delyuered from the tormentes of men, yet ſhulde I not eſcape the hãd of almyghty *Roma.ii.a. E God, nether alyue ner deed wherfore, I will dye manfully & do as it becõmeth myne age. Wherby I maye paraduẽture leaue an exãple of ſtedfaſtnes for ſoch as be yonge, yf I wyth a ready mynde & manfully dye an honeſt death, for yͤ moſt worthy & holy lawes.

When he had ſayde theſe wordes, immediatly he was drawen to the tormẽte. Now they yͭ led hym & were mylde a lytle afore, beganne to take diſpleaſure becauſe of the wordes that he ſayd: for they thought he had ſpoken them of an hye mynde. But when he was in his martyrdome, he mourned & ſayd Thou (O Lord) which haſt the holy knowlege: knoweſt opẽly: that where as I myght be delyuered from death, I ſuffre theſe ſore paynes of my body: but in my mynde I am well content to ſuffre thẽ becauſe I feare the.

Thus thys man dyed, leauynge the memorial
of hys death for an exāple, not only vnto
yonge men, but vnto all the people, to be ſtedfaſt and manly.

¶ The .vii. Chapter.

¶ The punyſhement of the .vii. brethren and of theyr mother.

A IT happened alſo yͤ there were .vii. brethren (wyth theyr mother) taken, & compelled by the kynge * agaynſt the *Leu.xi.a. lawe, to eate ſwynes fleſh: namely wͭ ſcourges and lethren whyppes. And one of them
whych was yͤ chefe, ſayd: What ſekeſt thou,
and what requyreſt thou of vs? As for vs,
we are ready rather to ſuffre death, then to offende the lawes of God and the fathers.
Then was the kynge angrye, and bad heate cauldrons and braſen pottes. Whych when they were made hote, immediatly he commaunded
the tonge of hym that ſpake fyrſt,
to be cut out, to pul the ſkynne ouer hys heade,
to pare of the edges of hys handes & fete:
yee, and that in the ſyghte of his mother & the other of hys brethren. Now when he was cleane marred, he commaunded a fyre to be made, & ſo (whyle there was eny breath in hym) to be fryed in the cauldrō: In the which
whē he had bene longe payned, the other brethrē
with theyr mother exhorted hym to dye
manfully, ſayenge: The Lord God ſhall regarde
the treuth, and conforte vs, lyke as *Deu.xxxii.e Moſes teſtifieth * & declareth in hys ſonge, ſayenge: and he wyll haue compaſſyon on hys ſeruauntes.

So when the fyrſt was deed after thys
B maner, they brought the ſecōde, to haue him
in deryſyō, pulled the ſkynne wyth the heare
ouer hys heade, & aſked hym, yf he wolde eate ſwynes fleſh, or he were payned in the other membres alſo thorowe out hys body.
But he anſwered boldly, and ſayde: I wyll not do it. And ſo was he tormēted lyke as yͤ
fyrſt, and when he was euen at the geuynge
vp the gooſt he ſayde: Thou moſt vngracyous
perſōne putteſt vs nowe to death, but yͤ kyng of the worlde ſhal rayſe vs vp (which dye for his lawes) in the reſurreccion of euerlaſtynge
lyfe.

After hym, was yͤ thyrde had in deryſyon
and when he was requyred, he put out hys
tonge, and that ryght ſoone, holdynge forth
hys hādes manfully, and ſpake wyth a ſtedfaſt
fayth: Theſe haue I of heauē, but nowe for the lawe of God I deſpyſe them: for my truſt is, that I ſhall receaue them: of hym agayne.
In ſo moch that the kynge and they whych were wyth hym, marueled at yͤ yonge mans boldneſſe, that he nothynge regarded the paynes.

Nowe when he was deed alſo, they vexed
C the fourth wyth tormentes in lyke maner.
So whē he was nowe at his death, he ſayed
It is better that we beynge put to death of men, haue our hope and truſt in God, for he ſhall rayſe vs vp agayne. * As for the, thou *Iohn.v.c.
ſhalt haue no reſurreccyon to lyfe.

And when they had ſpoken to the fyfth.
they tormented hym. Thē loked he vnto the kyng, & ſayd: thou haſt power amonge men for thou art a mortall man alſo thy ſelfe, to do what yͤ wylt, but thynke not, that God hath forſaken oure generacyon. Abyde the,
tary ſtyll a whyle, and thou ſhalt ſe the great power of God, howe he will punyſh the and thy ſede. After hym they brought the ſyxt, whych beynge at the poynte of death, ſayd,
Be not diſceaued (O kyng) for this we ſuffre
for our awne ſakes, becauſe we haue offēded
our God, & therfore maruelous thynges are ſhewed vpon vs. But thynke not thou,
whych takeſt ī hande to ſtryue againſt God,
that thou ſhalt eſkape vnpunyſhed.

This excellent mother (worthy to be well D reported of, an had in remembraunce) ſawe
her ſeuen ſonnes dye in one daye, and ſuffred
it paciently, becauſe of the hope that ſhe had in Iod: yee, ſhe exhorted euery one of thē in eſpecyall, and that boldly & ſtedfaſtly with parfyte wyſdome, wakynge vp her wyuyſh
thought with a manly ſtomacke, and ſayde vnto them: I cannot tell how ye came in my wōbe, for I nether gaue you breth ner ſoule, no nor lyfe. It is not I yͤ ioyned the membres of youre bodyes together, but the maker
of the worlde, which faſhyoned yͤ byrth of man, and beganne all thynges. Euen he alſo of hys awne mercy ſhall geue you breath
and lyfe agayne, lyke as ye nowe regarde
not your awne ſelues for his lawes ſake.

Nowe thought Antiochus that ſhe had deſpyſed hym, therfore he let her go wyth her reproues, & beganne to exhorte the yongeſt
ſonne (whych yet was left) not only wͭ wordes
but ſwore vnto hym wyth an ooth that he ſhulde make hym a ryche & welthy mā (yf
he wolde forſake the lawes of hys fathers)
yee, and that he ſhulde geue hym, what ſoeuer were neceſſary for hym. But when the E yonge man wolde not be moued, for all theſe
thynges, he called hys mother, & counceled her to ſaue her ſonnes lyfe. And when he had exhorted her with many wordes, ſhe promyſed
hym yͤ ſhe ſhulde ſpeake vnto her ſonne.
So ſhe turned her vnto him (laughynge the cruell tyraunte to ſcorne) & ſpake wyth a bolde voyce. O my ſonne, haue pytie vpon me,
that bare the .ix. monethes in my wombe,
that gaue the ſucke, noriſhed the & brought
the vp vnto thys age.

I beſeche yͤ (my ſonne) loke vpon heauen & earth and all that is therin, and conſydre,
that God made them and mans generacyon
of naught: ſo ſhalt thou not feare thys
hangman, but ſuffre death ſtedfaſtly, lyke

as thy brethren haue done: that I maye receaue the agayne in the ſame mercy with thy brethren.

Whyle ſhe was yet ſpeakynge theſe wordes, the yonge mã ſayde: whom loke ye for? Wherfore do ye tary? I wyll not obeye the kynges cõmaundement, *but the lawe that *Leui.xi.a. Deut.xliij.a. God gaue vs by Moſes. As for thou that ymagyneſt all myſchefe agaynſt the Jewes, F thou ſhalt not eſcape the hande of God, for we ſuffre theſe thynges, becauſe of oure ſynnes.

And though God be angrye wyth vs a lytle whyle (for oure chaſtenynge and reformacyon) yet ſhall he be at one agayne wyth hys ſeruauntes. But thou. (O ſhamefull & moſt abhominable perſonne.) Pryde not thy ſelfe thorowe vayne hope, in beynge ſo malycyous vpon the ſeruaũtes of God: for thou haſt not yet eſcaped the iudgemẽt of the God whych is almyghtye, and ſeyth all thynges. My brethren that haue ſuffred a lytle payne, are nowe vnder the couenaunt of euerlaſtynge lyfe: but thorowe the iudgement of God, thou ſhalt be punyſhed ryghteouſly for thy pryde.

As for me (lyke as my brethren haue done) I offre my ſoule & my body for the lawes of oure fathers, callynge vpon God, that he wyll ſoone be mercyfull vnto oure people: yee, and wyth payne and punyſhement *to *ij.Mac.ij.c make the graũte, that he only is God. In me nowe and in my brethrẽ the wrath of almyghty God is at an ende, whych ryghteouſly is fallen vpon all oure people.

Then the kynge beynge kyndled in anger, was more cruell vpon hym then vpõ all the other, and toke indignacyon, that he was ſo lyghtly regarded. So thys yonge man dyed vndefyled, & put hys truſt ſtyll in the Lorde Laſt of all after the ſonnes, was the mother put to death alſo. Let thys nowe be ynough ſpoken, concernynge the offerynges, and extreme cruelneſſe.

The .viij. Chapter.

Judas gathereth together hys hooſt. Nicanor is ſent agaynſt Judas. Judas exorteth hys ſouldyars to conſtantnes. Nicanor is ouercome. The Jewes geue thankes after they haue put theyr enemyes to flyght, dyuidynge the ſpoyles vnto the fatherles and vnto the wydowes. Nicanor flyeht vnto Antiochus.

A Then Judas Machabeus, & they that were wyth hym, wente priuely into the townes, called theyr kynſfolkes and frendes together, toke vnto them all ſoch as contiuned yet in the fayth and lawe of the Jewes & broughte forth .vj. M. men.

So they called vpon the Lorde, that he wolde haue an eye vnto hys people, whych was troaden downe of euery mã: to be gracyous vnto the temple that was defyled of the vngodly: to haue cõpaſſyon vpon the deſtruccyon of the citie, whych was ſhortly lyke to be layed waſte, to heare the voyce of yͤ bloude that cryed vnto hym: to remẽbre the moſt vnryghteous deathes of yonge innocent chyldrẽ, the blaſphemyes alſo done vnto hys name, and to punyſh them.

*Now when Machabeus had gathered *i.Mac.ij.a. thys multytude together, he was to myghtye for the Heathen (for the wrath of yͤ Lorde was turned into mercy) he fell vpon the townes and cytyes vnwares, brent them, toke the moſt cõmodyous places, and ſlewe many of the enemyes. But ſpecially he made ſoch chaſes by nyght, in ſo moch that hys manlyneſſe was ſpoken of euery where.

So when Philyppe ſawe that the man B increaſed by lytle and lytle, & that the matter proſpered wyth hym for the moſt parte: he wrote vnto Ptolomy (whych was a captayne in Celoſiria & Phenices) to helpe hym in the kynges buſynes. Then ſent he Nica- *i.Mac.iij.c. nor Patrocly (a ſpeciall frende of hys) in all the haſte, and gaue him of the comen ſorte of the Heathen no leſſe then .xx. M. harneſſed men, to rote out the whole generacion of the Jewes, hauynge to helpe hym one Gorgias a man of warre, whych in matters concernynge batayls, had great experience. Nycanor ordened alſo the trybute (which the Romaynes ſhulde haue had) to be geuen vnto the kynge out of the captyuite of the Jewes, namely .ij. M. talentes. And immediatly he ſent to the cytics of the ſee coaſt, requyrynge them for to bye Jewes to be theyr ſeruauntes and bonde men, promyſynge to ſell them .lxxx. and ten for one talente: but he conſydered not the wrath of almyghtye God, that was to come vpon hym.

When Judas knewe of thys, he tolde the C Jewes that were wyth hym of Nicanors cõmynge. Now were there ſome of them fearfull, not truſtynge vnto the ryghteouſnes of God, and fled theyr waye.

But the other that remayned, came together, and beſought the Lorde, to delyuer thẽ frõ that wycked Nicanor, whych had ſolde them or euer he came nye them: and though he wolde not do it for theyr ſakes, yet for the couenaunt that he made with theyr fathers, and becauſe they called vpon his holy & gloryous name. *And ſo Machabeus called his *i.Mac.v.d. men together, namely aboute .vi. M. exhortyng thẽ not to agree vnto theyr enemyes, * *Deut.xx.a. ij.Para xx.c. nether to be afrayed for yͤ multitude of theyr aduerſaryes commynge agaynſt them vnryghteouſly: but to fyght manly, conſyderynge the reproſe that they had done to the holy place without cauſe, howe they had deſpyſed and oppreſſed the cytye, yee, and de- *Iere.xvij.b Psal.xx.b. ſtroyed the lawes of the fathers. *For they (ſayde he) truſt in theyr weapens and boldneſſe, but oure confydẽce is in the almyghty Lorde, whych in the twyncklynge of an eye maye both deſtroye them that come agaynſt vs, and all the worlde.

D He exhorted them alſo to cal to remembraunce the helpe, ỷ God ſhewed vnto theyr fathers: *as when there peryſhed an.C. and lxxxv.M. of Sennacheribs people: And of the batayl that they had in babylon agaynſt the Gallacyans: howe all the Macedonians that came to helpe them, ſtode in feare: and howe they beynge but only vi.M. ſlewe an.C.&.xx.M. thorowe the helpe that was geuen them from heauen, wherby they alſo had receaued many benefytes.

Thorowe theſe wordes the men toke good hertes vnto them, ready to dye for the lawe and the countre. So he ſet vpon euery company a captayne, one of hys awne brethren: Simon, Ioſeph & Ionathas: geuynge echeone.xv.C.men. He cauſed Eſdras alſo to reade the holy boke vnto them, & to geue them a token of the helpe of God.

*Then he hym ſelfe beynge captayne in the fore front of the battayll, buckled wyth Nicanor. And God was theyr helpe, in ſo moch that they ſlewe aboue ix.M. men & cõpelled the more parte of Nicanors hooſt to E fle, they were ſo wounded and feble. Thus they toke the money from thoſe that come to bye them, and folowed vpon them on euery ſyde. But when the tyme came vpon them, they returned, for it was the Sabboth, and therfore they folowed nomore vpon them. So they toke theyr weapens & ſpoyles and kepte the Sabboth, geuynge thanckes vnto the Lorde, whych had delyuered them that daye, and ſhewed them hys mercy. After the Sabboth * they diſtributed the ſpoyles to the ſycke, to the fatherleſſe & to wyddowes, and the reſydue had they them ſelues wyth theyrs. When thys was done, and they all had made a generall prayer: they beſought the mercyfull Lorde to be at one wyth hys ſeruauntes.

Of thoſe alſo that were wyth Timotheus and Bachides, whych fought agaynſt them they ſlewe.xx.M. wanne hye and ſtrõge holdes, and deuyded moo ſpoyles: euer geuyng an equal porcyon vnto the ſycke, to the fatheles, to wyddowes and to aged perſons.
F And when they had dylygently gathered theyr weapẽs together, they layed them all in conueniente places, & the remmaũt of the ſpoyles brought they to Ieruſalẽ. They ſlewe alſo Phylarches that wycked perſonne, whych was wyth Timotheus, and had vexed many Iewes. And when they helde the thãkeſgeuynge at Ieruſalẽ for the victory, they brent thoſe that had ſet fyre on the portes of the tẽple: namely Calyſthenes, whych was fled into an houſe: & ſo they gat a worthy rewarde for theyr wyckedneſſe. As for that moſt vngracyous Nicanor, whych had brought a thouſande marchauntes, to bye the Iewes, he was thorowe the helpe of the Lorde brought downe euen of them whom he regarded not: in ſo moche that he put of hys gloryous rayment, fled by ſee, and came alone to Antyoche, wyth greate ſhame and dyſhonoure, whych he gat thorowe the deſtruccyon of hys hooſt. Thus he that promyſed the Romaynes to paye thẽ theyr tribute, when he toke Ieruſalem: beganne nowe to ſaye playnely, that God was the defender of the Iewes, & therfore not poſſyble to wounde them, becauſe they folowed the lawes whych God had made.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

¶ Antiochus wyllynge to ſpoyle Perſepolis is dryuẽ to flyght. As he perſecuteth the Iewes, he is ſtryken of the Lorde. The fayned repentaunce of Antiochus. He dyeth.

A AT the ſame tyme came *Antiochus agayne wyth dyſhonoure out of Perſis. For whẽ he came to Perſepolis, and vndertoke to robbe the temple and to ſubdue the cytie, the people ranne together and defended thẽ ſelues, in ſo moch that he and hys were fayne to fle wyth ſhame.

*i.Mac.vi.a

And ſo after that flyght, it happened that Antiochus came agayne wyth dyſhonoure. But when he came to Egbathana, he gat knowledge what was happened vnto Nicanor and Timotheus. Nowe, as he was auaũcinge hym ſelfe in his wrath, he thought he was able to auenge the iniury that was done to them, vpon the Iewes: and therfore commaunded to make ready hys charet, haſtynge on hys iourney, wythout ceaſſynge, the iudgement of God prouokynge hym becauſe he had ſpoken ſo proudly, ỷ he wolde come to Ieruſalem, and make it a graue of the Iewes. But the Lorde God of Iſraell, that ſeyth all thynges, ſmote hym wyth an inuiſyble plage, whych no man coulde heale.

B For as ſoone as he had ſpoken theſe wordes, there came vpõ hym an horrible payne of his bowels, and a ſore grefe of the armes.

And that was but ryght: for he had martyred other mens bowels wyth diuerſe and ſtraunge tormentes, howbeit he wolde in no wyſe ceaſſe from hys malice. Yee, he was yet the prouder & more malycyous agaynſt the Iewes: But whyle he was commaundynge to make haſte in the matter, it happened that he fell downe violently frõ the charet, ſo that it broſed hys body, and dyd hym greate payne.

And ſo he that thought he myght commaunde the floudes of the ſee (ſo proude was he beyonde the condicyon of man) ⁊ to weye the hye mountaynes in a payre of balaunce, was nowe brought downe to the grounde, and caryed vpon an horſlytter, knowledgynge the manifeſte power of God vpon hym: ſo that the wycked body of hys* was full of wormes, which in his payne fell quycke out of hys fleſhe: In ſo moche yͭ hys hooſt was greued wyth the ſmell and ſtyncke of hym. Thus he that a lytle afore thought he myght reache to the ſtarre of heauen, hym myght no man nowe abyde ner beare, for the vehemence of ſtyncke. *Act.xii.d.

C Therfore, he beynge brought from hys great pryde, begãne for to come to yͤ knowledge of him ſelfe: for the punyſhemẽt of God warned hym, and hys payne increaſed euer more and more. And whẽ he him ſelfe myght not abyde hys awne ſtyncke, he ſayde theſe wordes: It is reaſon to be obediẽt vnto God and that a man deſyre not to be lyke vnto hym. Thys wycked perſonne prayed alſo vnto the Lorde, of whom he ſhulde haue optayned no mercy. And as for the cytie that he came vnto ſo haſtely, to brynge it downe to the grounde, and to make it a graue for deed men: nowe he deſyreth to delyuer it fre.

And as touchynge the Iewes, whom he had iudged not worthy to be buryed, but wolde haue caſt them out for to be deuoured of the foules ⁊ wylde beaſtes, ſayinge, that he wolde haue deſtroyed both olde ⁊ yonge: Nowe he promyſed, to make them lyke the cyteſins of Athẽs. And where as he had ſpoyled the holy temple afore, nowe he maketh promyſe to garnyſhe it wyth greate gyftes, to increaſe the holy ornamentes, and of hys awne rentes to beare the coſtes, and charges belongynge to the offerynges: yee, and that he wolde alſo become a Iewe him ſelfe, to go thorowe euery place of the worlde, and to preache the power of God.

D But when hys paynes wolde not ceaſſe, (for the ryghteous iudgement of God was come vpon hym) out of a very deſpayre he wrote vnto the Iewes a lettre of interceſſyon, conteynynge theſe wordes: The kynge and prynce Antiochus wiſheth vnto yͤ vertuous cyteſyns of the Iewes, moche health and good proſperyte.

Yf ye and youre chyldren fare well, and yf all thinges go after youre mynde: we geue greate thankes. In my ſyckneſſe alſo do I remembre you louyngly: for as I came out of Perſia, and was taken with ſore dyſeaſſe: I thought it neceſſary to care for the comen wealth. Nether deſpayre I in my ſelfe, but haue a good hope to eſcape thys ſycknes.

But conſyderynge that my father led an hooſt ſometyme in the hyer places, and ſhewed who ſhulde raygne after hym, that (yf there happened any cõtrouerſy, or eny harde thynge were declared) they in the lãde might knowe their chefe Lorde, that there ſhulde be no inſurreccyon: Agayne, E when I pondre by my ſelfe, howe that all the myghtye men and neyghbours rounde aboute, are layenge wayte, and loke but for oportunyte to do harme: I haue ordenened that my ſonne Antiochus ſhall raygne after me, whom I oft commended to many of you, when I was in the hyer kyngdomes, and haue wrytten vnto hym as it foloweth herafter. Therfore, I praye you ⁊ requyre you, to remẽbre the benefytes that I haue done vnto you generally, and in eſpecyall (and yͭ euery man wylbe faythfull to me ⁊ my ſonne) For I hope that he ſhall be of ſober and louynge behauoure, and yf he folowe my deuyce, he ſhall be indifferent vnto you.

* Thus that murthurer ⁊ blaſphemer of God was ſore ſmytten: ⁊ lyke as he had intreated other men, ſo he dyed a myſerable death in a ſtraunge countre vpon a mountayne. And hys body dyd Philippe (yͭ went with hym) cary awaye: whych fearynge the ſonne of Antiochus, wente into Egypte to Ptolomy Philometor. *Deut.viij.c

¶ The.x. Chapter.

¶ Iudas Machabeus taketh the cytie ⁊ the tẽple. He begynneth to ſhewe the actes of Eupator. The Iewes fyght agaynſt the Idumeans: Timotheus inuadeth Iewry, wyth whõ Iudas ioyneth battell. V. men appere in the ayre to the helpe of the Iewes. Timothy is ſlayne.

A MAchabeus nowe and hys company (thorowe the helpe of the Lorde) wanne the tẽple and the cytie agayne, deſtroyed the aulters and chapels that the heathen had buylded thorowe the ſtretes: clenſed the temple, * made another aulter of brycke ſtone, and after two yeares they offered ſacrifyces, ſet forth the incenſe, the lyghtes and ſhewe bred. When that was done, they fell downe flat vpon the grounde, and beſought the Lorde, that they myght come nomore into ſoche trouble: but yf they ſynned eny more agaynſt hym, he hym ſelfe to chaſten them with mercy, and not to come in the handes of thoſe alcauntes and blaſphemous men. *1. Mac.iiii. c. *Exo.xx.d.

Nowe, vpon the ſame daye that the ſtraungers poluted the temple, it happened that on the very ſame daye it was clẽſed agayne: namely, * the.xxij. daye of the moneth called Caſleu. They kepte. viij. dayes in gladneſſe lyke as in the feaſt of the tabernacles: remẽbrynge that not longe afore, they helde the feaſt of the tabernacles vpon the mountaynes and in dennes lyke beaſtes. And to the ſame token they bare grene bowes, braunches and palmes, before hym that had geuen them good fortune to clenſe hys place. They *1. Mac.iiii.f agreed alſo together, and made a ſtatute, ẏ euery yeare thoſe dayes ſhulde be ſolemply kepte of all the people of the Jewes.

Howe Antiochus then (that was called the noble) dyed, it is ſufficiẽtly tolde. Nowe wyll we ſpeake of Eupator the ſonne of that wycked Antiochus, howe it happened with him: & ſo with fewe wordes to comprehende the aduerſyte that chaunſed in the warres: When he had taken in ẏ kyngdome, he made one Lyſias (which had bene captayne of the hoſt in Phenices and Syria) ruler ouer the matters of the realme. For Ptolomy that was called Macron, beynge a ruler for the Jewes (and ſpecially, to ſyt in iudgemẽt for ſoche wronge as was done vnto thẽ) vndertoke to deale peaceably wyth them. For the whych cauſe he was accuſed of the frendes before Eupator: and when he was ſuſpecte to be a traytour (becauſe he had left Cypres that Philometor had commytted vnto hym: C and becauſe he departed from noble Antiochus, that he was come vnto) he poyſoned hym ſelfe, and dyed.

Nowe when Gorgias was gouernoure of ẏ ſame places, he toke ſtraungers and vndertoke oft tymes, to warre with ẏ Jewes. Moreouer, the Idumeans ẏ helde the ſtrõge holdes, receaued thoſe that were dryuen frõ Jeruſalem, and toke in hande to warre alſo *But they that were wyth Machabeus beſought and prayed, vnto the Lorde, that he wolde be their helper: and ſo they fell vpõ the ſtronge holdes of the Idumeans, and wanne many places by ſtrength: Soche as came agaynſt them they ſlewe, and kylled no leſſe of all together (then twentye thouſande. Neuertheleſſe ſome, no leſſe then nyne thouſande, were fled into two ſtronge towres, hauynge all maner of ordinaunce to withſtande them.

D Then Machabeus leauynge Symõ Joſephus, zacheus, and thoſe that were wyth them (whych were very many) wente to beſege them, & to fyght where moſt nede was, Nowe they that were wyth Symõ, beynge led wyth couetouſneſſe, were intreated for money, thorowe certayne of thoſe that laye in the towres toke .lxx. M. drachmas: & let ſome of them eſcape. But when it was tolde Machabeus what had happened, he called ẏ captaynes of the people together, accuſinge thoſe perſonnes, ẏ they had ſolde the brethrẽ for money, and let their enemyes go. So he ſlewe thoſe traytours and immediatly wẽte in hande wyth the .ii. towers. And whẽ they had ordred thẽ ſelues manly with their weapens and handes, they ſlewe in the two caſtels moo then twentye thouſande.

*Nowe Timotheus ‡ whom the Jewes had ouercome afore, gathered a multytude of ſtraunge people, brought an hoſte alſo of horſmen of the Aſians, to wynne Jewry by E ſtrength. But when he drewe nye, Machabeus and they that were wyth hym, *fell to theyr prayer, ſprynckled aſſhes vpon theyr heades, beynge gyrded wyth hearrie cloth about their loynes, fell downe before ẏ aulter, and beſought the Lorde that he wolde be mercyfull to them, but an enemye vnto their enemyes, and to take parte agaynſt theyr aduerſaryes, * accordynge as it is promyſed in the lawe. So after the prayer, they wente on further frõ the cyte: and when they came nye the enemyes, they prepared them ſelues agaynſt them.

*i.Mac.v.d. & v.Macha. viij.c.

*Deu.xxvij. a.

And by tymes in the mornynge at the breake of the daye, both the hoſtes buckled together. * The one parte had the Lorde for their refuge, which is the geuer of proſperite ſtrength and victory. The other had a mãly ſtomack which is a captayne of warre.

*Iere.xvij.b ij.pa.xxxij.b.

The battayll nowe beynge greate, *there appeared vnto the enemyes from heauen. v. men vpõ horſbacks wyth brydels of golde, ledynge the Jewes, & two of them hauynge Machabeus betwyxte them, that kepte him ſafe on euery ſyde wyth theyr weapens, but ſhot dartes and lyghtenynges vpon the enemyes: where thorowe they were cõfounded wyth blyndneſſe & ſo ſore afrayed, that they fell downe. There were ſlayne of fote men F twentye thouſande and fyue hundreth, and ſyxe hundreth horſmen. As for Timotheus him ſelfe, he fled vnto Gazar a very ſtronge holde, wherin Cereas was captayne. But Machabeus and his company layed ſege to it chearfully .iiij. dayes.

*iiij.re.vi.a. i.Mach.iij.a. and.xi.b.

Nowe they that were wythin truſtynge to the ſtrength of the place, curſed and banned exceadyngly, and made great crakynge wyth wycked wordes. Neuertheleſſe, vpon the fyft daye in the mornynge .xx. yonge mẽ of Machabeus company, beynge ſet on fyre in their myndes (becauſe of the blaſphemy) came manfully vnto the wall, and with holde ſtomackes they and theyr other companyons clymed vp vpon the towres, vndertakynge to ſet fyre vpon the portes, and to burne thoſe blaſphemous perſonnes quycke Two dayes were they deſtroyinge the caſtell, whych when they founde Timotheus (that was crept into a corner) they kylled him, & ſlewe Cereas hys brother in lyke maner wyth Appollophanes. When thys was done, they ſonge Pſalmes, wyth prayſes & thãkeſgeuynge vnto the Lorde, whych had done ſo great thynges for Iſrael, and gyuen them the victory.

The .xi. Chapter.

Lyſias goeth aboute to ouercome ẏ Jewes. Succour is ſent from heauen vnto the Jewes. The letter of Lyſias to the Jewes. The letter of kynge Antiochus vnto Lyſias. A letter of the ſame vnto the Jewes. A letter of the Romaynes to the Jewes.

A Not longe after this, Lysias yͤ kynges stewarde & a kynsman of hys (whych had the gouernaũce of his matters) toke sore displeasure for yͤ thynges that had happened, and when he had gathered.lxxx. M. men of fote w̄ all the hoste of yͤ horsmen, he came agaynst the Iewes, thynckynge to wynne the cytie, to make it an habitacyon for the Heathen, *Iohn.ij.b. *and the tẽple wolde he haue to be an house of lucre, lyke as yͤ other goddes houses of the Heathen are, & to sell the prestes offyce euery yeare: Not cõsyderynge yͤ power of God, but *Esa.xxxvi.b was wylde in his mynde, * trustynge in the multitude of fote mẽ, in thousandes of horsmen, and in his.lxxx. Elephantes.

B So he came into Iewry & then to Bethsura (a castell of defence) lyenge in a narowe place.v. furlonges from Ierusalem, & wanne it. Nowe, when Machabeus and his cõpany knewe that the stronge holdes were taken, *ij.Mac.x.c. * they fell to theyr prayers with wepinge & teares before the Lorde. And all the people in lyke maner besought him, that he wolde send a good angell to delyuer Israel. Machabeus him selfe was the fyrst that made him ready to the battayll, exhortynge yͤ other that were wyth him, to ieoperde them selues, & to helpe their brethren. And when they were goynge forth of Ierusalem together wyth a redy & *ij.Macha.iij.d. wyllinge mynde, *there appeared before thẽ vpon horsbacke a man in whyte clothynge with harnesse of golde, shakynge his speare. Then they praysed the Lorde all together, whych had shewed them mercy, & were comforted in their myndes: in so moch that they were ready, not only to fyght with men, but wyth the most cruell beastes, yee, and ronne thorowe walles of yron.

Thus they wente on willyngly hauynge C an helper frõ heauen, and the Lord mercyfull vnto thẽ. They fell myghtely vpõ their enemyes lyke lyons, brought downe.xj.M. fote men.xvj.C. horsmẽ, put all yͤ other to flyght many of thẽ beynge wounded, and some gat awaye naked. Yee, Lysias hym selfe was fayne to fle shamefully, and so to escape. Neuerthelesse, yͤ man was not without vnderstandinge, but cõsydered by him selfe that his power was mynished, & põdred howe yͤ Iewes beynge defẽded by yͤ helpe of Almighty God, were not able to be ouercome: wherfore he sent them worde, & promysed, yͭ he wolde cõsente to all thinges which were reasonable and to make yͤ kyng their frẽde. To yͤ which prayer of Lysias, Machabeus agreed, sekīge in all thynges the comen wealth & whatsoeuer Machabeus wrote vnto Lysias concernynge the Iewes, the kynge graũted it. For there were letters, wrytten vnto the Iewes from Lysias, conteynynge these wordes.

Lysias sendeth gretynge to the people of the Iewes. Ihon and Absalon whych were D sent from you, delyuered me wrytynges, & requyred me to fulfyll the thynges concernynge theyr earande. Therfore loke what might be graũted, I certifyed yͤ kyng therof: & whatsoeuer was cõuenient, I agreed therto. If ye nowe will be faythfull in yͤ matters I shall endeuer my selfe herafter also to do you good. As concernynge other thynges by euery article therof: I haue cõmytted them to youre messaungers, & to those whom I sent vnto you, to comẽ with you of the same, fare ye well. In the.C.and.xlviij.yeare, yͤ.xxiiij. daye of the moneth Dioscorinthius.

Nowe yͤ kynges lettre cõteyned these wordes. Kyng Antiochus sendeth gretinge vnto his brother Lysias. For so moch as oure father, * is nowe deed, oure wyll is, that they *ij.Ma.ix.d. which are in oure realme, lyue wythout eny insurreccyon, & euery mã to be diligent in his awne matters. We vnderstãde also, yͭ the Iewes wolde not consent to oure father, for to be brought vnto the custome of the Gẽtyles, but styfly to kepe their awne statutes: for yͤ whych cause they requyre of vs also, to lett them remayne styll by their awne lawes.

Wherfore, oure mynde is, yͭ thys people E shalbe in rest: we haue concluded & determyned also, to restore them their tẽple agayne: that they maye lyue accordynge to the vse & custome of their forefathers. Thou shalt do vs a pleasure therfore, yf yͧ sende vnto them and agre with thẽ: that when they are certifyed of oure mynde, they maye be of good chere, and loke to their awne wealth.

And thys was the lettre, that the kynge wrote vnto yͤ Iewes: kynge Antiochus sendeth gretynge vnto the cõucell and the other people of yͤ Iewes: If ye fare well, we haue our desyre: as for vs, we are in good health. Menelaus came and tolde vs, howe yͭ youre desyre was to come downe to youre people, whych are with vs.

Wherfore, those that wyll come, we geue thẽ fre lyberte, vnto the.xxx. daye of the mo- F neth of April, yͭ they maye vse yͤ meates of yͤ Iewes and their awne lawes, like as afore: & none of thẽ by eny maner of wayes to haue harme, for thynges done in ignoraunce. Menelaus whõ we haue sẽt vnto you, shall comẽ w̄ you at large, fare ye wel. In the.C.xlviij. yeare, the.xv. daye of the moneth of April.

The Romaynes also sent a lettre, cõteynynge these wordes: Quintus Mẽnius and Titus Manilius embassitours of the Romaynes, sende gretynge vnto the people of the Iewes. Loke what Lysias the kynges kynsman hath graunted you, we graunte you the same also. But as concernynge the thynges whych he referred vnto the kynge, sende hither some with spede, and pondre the matter diligently amonge your selues, that we maye caſt ẏ beſt to youre profyte, for we muſt departe nowe vnto Antioche. And therfore wryte ſhortly agayne, ẏ we maye know youre mynde: Fare well. In ẏ hūdreth. xl viij yeare, the. xv. daye of the moneth of Aprill.

¶ The. xij. Chapter.

¶ Timotheus troubleth the Jewes. The wycked dede of the zeppytes agaynſt the Jewes. Judas is auenged of them. He ſetteth fyre on the gate of Jamnia. The purſute of the Jewes agaynſt Timothye. Timothye is taken and let go vnhurt. Judas purſueth Gorgias. Judas offrynge ſacrifyce for the deed, ſheweth the hope of the reſurreccyon.

A When these couenauntes were made Lyſias went vnto the kynge, & the Jewes tylled their groūde. But Timotheus, Apollonius the ſonne of Gemei, Jerome & Demophon the proude, Nicanor ẏ captayne of Cypers, & they that laye in thoſe places: wolde not let thē lyue in reſt & peace. They of Joppa alſo dyd euen ſoche a ſhamefull dede. They prayed the Jewes ẏ dwelt amōge them, to go with their wyues & chyldren into the ſhyppes which they had prepared and dyd with them, as though they had ought them no euel wyll. For ſo moche then as there was gone forth a generall proclamacyon thorowe the cytie because of peace, they conſented therto, & ſuſpecte nothynge: but whē they were gone forth into the depe, they drowned no leſſe then. ij. C. of them.

Whē Judas knewe of this cruelte ſhewed vnto his people, he commaunded thoſe that were wᵗ hym to make thē ready, exhortynge them to call vpon God the ryghteous iudge: went forth agaynſt thoſe murthurers of his brethren, ſet fyre in the hauen by nyght, brēt B vp the ſhyppes, and thoſe that eſcaped from the fyre, he ſlewe with ẏ ſwearde. And when he had done thys, he departed as though he wolde come agayne, and rote out all thē of Joppa. But whē he had gotten worde, that ẏ Jamnites were mynded to do in lyke maner vnto ẏ Jewes which dwelt amonge thē, he came vpon the Jamnites by nyght, & ſett fyre on the hauen wyth the ſhyppes: ſo that the lyght of the fyre was ſene at Jeruſalem vpon a. ij. C. and. xl. furlonges.

Nowe when they were gone from thence ix. furlonges, in their iourney towarde Timotheus. v. thouſande men of fote and. v. hundreth horſmen of the Arabians, fought with him. So when the battell was earneſt, & proſpered wyth Judas thorowe the helpe of God: the reſydue of the Arabians beynge ouercōme, beſought Judas to be at one with them, & promyſed to geue hym certayne paſtures, and to do him good in other thynges. Judas thynckynge that they ſhulde in dede be profytable concernynge many thynges, promyſed them peace: wher vpon they ſhoke handes, and ſo they departed to theyr tentes. Judas wente alſo vnto a cytie, whych was very faſte kepte with brydges, fenſed round aboute wyth walles, and diuerſe kyndes of people dwellynge therin, called Caſpin.

They that were within it, put ſoche truſt C in the ſtrength of the walles, & in their ſtoare of vitailles: that they were the ſlacker in their doynges, curſynge and reuylynge Judas wᵗ blaſphemyes, and ſpeakynge ſoche wordes as it becommeth not. But Machabeus callynge vpon the great Prynce of the worlde (which without any battayll rāmes, or ordinaūce of warre, dyd *caſt downe the walles of Jericho, in ẏ tyme of Joſue) fell manfully vpō ẏ walles, toke thē cyte, (& thorow the helpe of the Lorde) made an exceadynge greate ſlaughter: In ſo moch ẏ a lake of two fourlonges brode whych laye therby, ſemed to flowe with the bloude of the ſlayne.

Then departed they from thence. vij. C. & l. furlonges, and came to Taraca vnto the Jewes that are called Tubianei. But as for Timotheus, they coulde not get hym there: for (not one matter diſpatched) he was departed from thence, and had lefte certayne men in a very ſtronge holde. But Doſitheus & Soſipater, whych were Captaynes wyth Machabeus, ſlewe thoſe ẏ Timotheus had lefte in the houſe of defence, euen. x. M. men. And Machabeus prepared him with the. vj. When Timotheus had knowledge of Ju- D das cōmynge, he ſent ẏ women, chyldren and the other baggage vnto a caſtell called Carnion. (For it coulde not be wōne, & was harde to come vnto, the wayes of ẏ ſame places were ſo narowe) & whē Judas cōpany came fyrſt in ſyght, ẏ enemyes were ſmyttē wyth feare, thorowe the preſence of God: whych ſeyth all thynges: I ſo moch ẏ they fleynge one here, another there, were rather diſcōfyted of their awne people, *& wounded wᵗ the ſtrokes of their awne ſweardes. Judas alſo was very earneſt in folowynge vpon them, punyſhinge thoſe vngodly, & ſlewe. xxx. M. men of thē. Timotheus alſo him ſelfe fell into the hādes of Doſitheus and Soſipater, whō he beſought with many prayers, to let hym go with his lyfe: becauſe he had many of the Jewes fathers & brethrē in preſon, which (yf they put him to death) might be diſapoynted. So whē he had promyſed faythfully to deliuer thē agayne accordynge to ẏ cōdiciō made, they let hym go wythout harme, for the health of the brethrē. And when Judas had ſlayne. xxv. But when Judas & his cōpany had called vpon Almyghty God (whych wyth hys power breaketh the ſtrength of the enemyes) they wanne the cytie, and ſlewe. xxv. But whē the Jewes which were in the cytie teſtifyed, that the cyteſyns dealte louyngly with them: yee, and intreated them kyndly in the tyme of their aduerſyte, Judas and his company gaue them thanckes, deſyrynge them to be frēdly ſtyll vnto them: and ſo they came to Jeruſalē, the hye feaſt of the wekes beynge at hande. And after the feaſt of pentecoſt they went forth agaynſt Gorgias the gouernoure of Idumea, with. iij. M. men of fote & . iiij. C. horſmen. Whych when they met together, it chaunſed a fewe of the Jewes to be ſlayne. And Doſitheus one of ẏ F Bachenors a myghty horſman toke holde of Gorgias, & wolde haue taken hym quycke. But an horſman of Thracia fell vpon hym, and ſmote of his arme, ſo ẏ Gorgias eſcaped & fled into Moreſa. When they nowe ẏ were of Gorgias ſyde, had foughten longe & were wery: Judas called vpon the Lorde, that he wolde be their helper, & captayne of the felde: and with ẏ, he beganne with a manly voyce to take vp a ſonge of prayſe, & a crye: In ſo moch that he made the enemyes afrayed, and Gorgias mē of warre toke their flyght. So Judas gathered his hoſte, & came into the cytie of Odolla. And when ẏ ſeuēth daye came vpon them, they clenſed them ſelues (as the cuſtome was) & kepte ẏ Sabboth in ẏ ſame place. And vpō the daye folowynge, Judas & his company cam to take vp the bodyes of them that were ſlayne, and to bury them in the fathers graues. Nowe vnder the cotes of certayne Jewes which were ſlayne, they foūde Jewels that they had taken out of the temple & from the Idols of the * Jamniters: whych thynge is forbyddē the Jewes by the lawe. Then euery man ſawe, that thys was the cauſe, wherfore they were ſlayne.

*Deu. vij. c.
Joſu. vij. a.

G And ſo euery man gaue thāckes vnto the Lorde for hys ryghtuous iudgement, which had opened the thynge that was hyd. They fell downe alſo vnto their prayers, and beſought God, ẏ the fawte whych was made, myght be put out of remembraūce. Beſydes that, Judas exhorted the people earneſtly, to kepe thē ſelues from ſoche ſynne: for ſo moch as they ſawe before theyr eyes: ẏ theſe men were ſlayne for the ſame offence. So he gathered of euery one a certayne, in ſo moche ẏ he brought together two thouſande drachmas of ſyluer, which he ſent vnto Jeruſalem that there myght a ſacrifyce be offred for the myſdede. In the which place he dyd well and ryght: for he had ſome conſideracyon & pondrynge of ẏ lyfe that is after thys tyme. For yf he had not thought that they, which were ſlayne, dyd yet lyue, it had bene ſuperfluous and vayne, to make eny vowe or ſacrifyce, for them that were deed. But for ſo moch as he ſawe, that they whych dye in the fauoure & beleue of God, are in good reſt and ioye, he thought it to be good & honorable for a recōcilynge, to do the ſame for thoſe whych were ſlayne, that the offence myght be forgeuen.

¶ The. xiij. Chapter.

The cōmynge of Eupator into Jewrye. The deeth of Menelaus: Machabeus goynge to fyght agaynſt Eupator, moueth hys ſoudyars vnto prayer. He kylleth xiiij. thouſande men in the tentes of Antiochus. Rhodocus the betrayer of the Jewes is taken. Antiochus retayneth frendſhyp wyth the Jewes.

A IN the. Cxlix. yeare gatt * Judas knowledge, ẏ Antiochus Eupator was commynge wͭ a greate power into Jewry, & Lyſias the ſtewarde and ruler of his matters with hym hauynge an C. and. x. M. men of fote. v. M. horſmen xxij. Elephātes, and. iij. C. charettes. Menelaus alſo ioyned him ſelfe with thē (but with greate diſceate) and ſpake fayre to ẏ kynge, not for eny good of the countre, but becauſe he thought to haue bene made ſome greate man of auctoryte. But the kynge of kynges moued Antiochus mynde agaynſt thys vngodly perſonne, & Lyſias infourmed ẏ kyng, * that thys Menelaus was the cauſe of all myſchefe: ſo that the kynge commaunded to take hym, and (as the maner of them is) to put hym vnto death in the ſame place.

i. Mach. vi. d.

There was alſo in the ſame place a tower of L. cubytes hye, heaped with aſſhes: but aboue it was ſo made, that men myght loke downe on euery ſyde. Where into the kynge cōmaunded that ſhamefull perſon to be caſt amonge the aſſhes, as one that was cauſe of all vngraciouſneſſe. And reaſon it was that the vnthrift ſhulde dye ſoch a death, and not to be buryed: for he had done moche myſchefe vnto the aulter of God (whoſe fyre & aſſhes were holy) therfore was it ryght, ẏ he hym ſelfe alſo ſhulde be deſtroyed with aſſhes.

But the kynge was wood in hys mynde, and came to ſhewe hym ſelfe more cruell vnto the Jewes, then hys father was. Whych when Judas perceaued, * he cōmaunded the B people to call vpō the Lord nyght and daye: that he wolde nowe helpe them alſo, lyke as he had done alwaye: For they were afrayed to be put from their lawe, from their naturall countre and from the holy temple: and not to ſuffre the people (whych a lytle whyle afore beganne to recouer) to be ſubdued agayne of the blaſphemous nacyons.

C So when they had done thys together, and beſought the Lord for mercy, wyth wepinge and faſtynge thre dayes longe, flatt vpon the grounde: Judas exhorted them, to make them ſelues ready. But he and the elders together deuyſed, to go forth fyrſt with their people, afore the kynge brought hys hooſt into Jewry, and afore he beſeged yͤ cytie, ⁊ ſo to commytte the matter vnto God.

Wherfore he aſcrybed the power af all thynges vnto God the maker of the worlde exhortinge his people to fight mãfully (yee, euen vnto death) for the lawes, the temple, the citye, theyr awne natyue countre, and to defende the citeſyns: and ſet his hooſt before Modyn. He gaue them alſo that were wyth him, a token of the victory of God, choſinge out the mãlieſt yonge men, wente by nyght into the kynges pauylyon, ſlewe of the hooſt xiiii. M. men, * ⁊ the greateſt Elephantes. wyth thoſe that ſatt vpon them. *i. Ma.vi.c.

D Thus when they had brought a greate feare and rumour amonge yͤ tentes of theyr enemyes, ⁊ all thynges went proſperouſly wyth thē, they departed in the breake of the daye, God beinge their helper and defender. Now whē the kynge perceaued the manlyneſſe of the Jewes, he wente aboute to take the ſtronge places by craft, and remoued his hooſt * vnto bethſura, which was a well kepte houſe of defence of the Jewes: but they were chaced awaye, hurte and diſcomfited. ‡ 2.Macha. xi.a.

And Judas ſent vnto thē that were in it ſoch thynges as were neceſſary. In yͤ Jewes hooſt alſo there was one Rhodocus, whych tolde the enemyes theyr ſecretes: but they ſought hym out, ⁊ whē they had gottē hym, they put hī in preſon. After this dyd yͤ kynge cōmē with thē that were in Bethſura, toke truce with them, departed, and ſtroke a batayll wyth Judas, whych ouer came hym.

E But when he vnderſtode, that Philippe (whom he had left to be ouerſeer of his buſyneſſes at Antioche) begāne to rebel agaynſt him, he was aſtonnyed in his mynde: ſo yͤ he yelded hym ſelfe to the Jewes, ⁊ made thē an othe, to do what ſoeuer they thought ryght.

Now when he was reconcyled wyth thē, he offred, made moch of the tēple, gaue greate gyftes vnto it, embraced Machabeus, makynge hym captayne and gouernour from Ptolomays vnto the Gerrenes.

Neuertheleſſe, when he came to Ptolomays, yͤ people of the cytie were not content with the bonde of frendſhyp: for they were afrayed, that he wolde breake the conenaūt. Then wente Lyſias vp into the ſeate, and enfourmed the people, ſhewed them the cauſe why, and pacified them. So he came agayne to Antioche. This is nowe the matter cōcernynge the kynges iourney, ⁊ his returne.

¶ The.xiiii. Chapter.

¶ By the mocyon of the Lorde, Demetrius ſendeth Nicanor to kyll the Jewes. Nicanor maketh a cōpact with the Jewes, whych he yet breaketh thorough the mocyon of the kynge. Nicanor commaundeth Razi to be taken. The boldnes of Razia.

After thre yeares was Judas informed how that Demetrius the ſonne of Seleucus was come vp with a greate power and ſhyppes, thorowe the hauen of Tripolis, to take certayne commodyous places and countreys, agaynſte Antiochus ⁊ his captayne Lyſias. A Nowe Alcimus (whych had bene hye preſt, and wylfully defyled hym ſelfe, in the tyme of the myxtynge) ſeynge, that by no meanes he coulde be helped, nor haue anye more entraunce to the aultare: he came to kynge Demetrius in the hundreth and one and fyfty yeare, preſentynge vnto hym a crowne of golde, a palme and an olyue tree: whiche (as men thought) belonged to the temple, ⁊ that daye he helde his tonge. But when he hadde gotten oportunite for his madneſſe, Demetrius called hym to councell, and aſked hym, what thynges or councels the Jewes leaned vnto? He anſwered: The Jewes that be called Aſſidei (whoſe captayne is Judas Machabeus) mayntayne warres, make inſurreccions, ⁊ wyll not let the realme be in peace.

B For I beynge depryued of my fathers honoure (I meane the hye preſthode) am come hyther: partly becauſe I was faythfull vnto the kynge, and partly becauſe I ſought the profyt of the cyteſyns. And why? all oure people, thorowe the wickedneſſe of them, are not a lytle troubled. Wherfore, I beſeche the (O kynge) conſydre all theſe thynges dylygētly, and then make ſome prouiſyon for the lande ⁊ the people, accordynge to the kyndneſſe that thou haſt offred vnto thē. For as longe as Judas hath the vpperhāde, it is not poſſible that men can lyue in peace.

When he had ſpoken theſe wordes, other frendes alſo hauynge euell wyll at Judas, ſett the kynge Demetrius on fyre agaynſt hym. * Which immediatly ſent Nicanor (ruler of yͤ Elephātes) a captayne, into Jewry, cōmaundynge hym, to take Judas hym ſelfe alyue, but to ſlaye thē yͭ were with hym, and to make Alcimus hye preſte of yͤ great tēple: *i.Ma.vii.c.

C Then the Heathen which fled oute of Jewry from Judas, came to Nicanor by flockes, thynckinge the harme and decaye of the Jewes to be their welfare. Nowe when the Jewes herde of Nicanors commynge, and the gatherynge together of the heathen, they ſprenckled thē ſelues with earth, * ⁊ beſought hym, which made them hys people, and euer defended hys awne porcyon with euidēt tokens, that he wolde preſerue them ſtyll. So at the commaundemēt of the captayne, they remoued frō thence, ⁊ came to a towne called Deſſan. And Symon Judas brother fell in hande with Nicanor, but thorowe yͤ ſodayne commynge of the enemyes, he was afrayed. *2.Mac.x.c.

Neuertheles, Nicanor hearynge the mãlynes of them that were wyth Judas, ⁊ the bolde ſtomackes that they had to fyght for theyr naturall countre, durſt not proue the matter wyth bloudſhedynge. Wherfore he ſent Poſſidonius, Theodocius & Mathias before, to geue and to take peace. So when they had taken longe aduiſement there vpon and the captayne ſhewed it vnto the multitude, they were agreed in one minde: to haue peace. And they apoynted a daye to ſyt vpõ theſe matters quyetly amonge them ſelues, the ſtoles alſo were brought and ſet forth. Neuertheleſſe, Judas cõmaunded certayne men of armes to wayte in cõuenient places, leſt there ſhulde ſodenly aryſe any euell thorowe the enemyes. And ſo they cõmoned reaſonably together.

D Nicanor, whyle he abode at Jeruſalem, ordred him ſelfe not vnreaſonably, but ſent awaye the people that were gathered together. He loued Judas euer wyth hys herte, & fauoured him. He prayed hym alſo to take a wyfe, and to brynge forth chyldren. So he maryed, lyued in reſt, and they led a comen lyfe. But Alcimus perceauinge the loue that was betwyxte them, and howe they were agreed together, came to Demetrius, & tolde him that Nicanor had taken ſtraunge matters in hande, and ordened Judas (an enemy of the realme) to be the kynges ſucceſſoure. Then the kynge was ſore diſpleaſed, & thorowe the wycked accuſacyons, whych Alcimus made of Nicanor, he was ſo prouoked, that he wrote vnto Nicanor, ſayinge: that he was very angrye for the frendſhyppe and agremẽt, whych he had made with Machabeus. Neuertheles, he commaunded him in all the haſte, that he ſhulde take Machabeus preſoner, and ſende him to Antioche.

E Whych letters when Nicanor had ſene, he was at hys wyttes ende, & ſore greued, yͭ he ſhulde breake the thynges wherin they had agreed: ſpecially, ſeynge Machabeus was yͤ man, yͭ neuer dyd him harme. But becauſe he myght not wythſtande the kynge, he ſought oportunite to fulfyl his cõmaundemẽt. Notwithſtãdynge when Machabeus ſawe that Nicanor begãne to be churlyſhe vnto him, & yͭ he intreated hĩ more roughly then he was wonte, he perceaued yͭ ſoch vnkyndnes came not of good, and therfore he gathered a fewe of hys men, & withdrewe him ſelfe frõ Nicanor. Which whẽ he knewe that Machabeus had manfully preuẽted him, he came into the great and moſt holy tẽple: and cõmaũded the preſtes (which were doynge their vſuall offrynges) to delyuer him yͤ mã. And whẽ they ſware yͭ they coulde not tell where yͤ mã was whõ he ſought, he ſtretched out his hãde, *& made an othe, ſayinge: If ye wyll not delyuer me Judas captyue, I ſhall remoue thys tẽple of God into yͤ playne felde, I ſhal breake downe yͤ aulter, & cõſecrate this tẽple vnto Bachus. After theſe wordes he departed.

*i. Macha. vij. c.

F Then the preſtes lyft vp their handes towarde heauen, & beſought him yͭ was euer yͤ defender of their people, ſayinge: Thou O Lorde of all, whych haſt nede of nothynge, woldeſt yͭ the tẽple of thy habitacyon ſhulde be amõge vs. Therfore nowe O mooſt holy Lord, kepe this houſe euer vndefyled, which lately was clenſed. Nowe was there accuſed vnto Nicanor, one Razis an Alderman of Jeruſalem, a louer of the whole cyte, and a man of good reporte: whych for the kynde herte that he bare vnto the people, was called a father of the Jewes. Thys man oft tymes, when the Jewes were mynded to kepe them ſelues vndefyled, defended & delyuered them, beynge content ſtedfaſtly to ſpende his body and his lyfe for hys people.

*i. Macha. iiij. c.

G So Nicanor willynge to declare the hate that he bare to the Jewes, ſent fyue hũdreth men of warre to take him: for he thought, yf he gat him, he ſhuld bringe yͤ Jewes in great decaye. Nowe whẽ yͤ people begãne to ruſhe in at his houſe, to breake yͤ dores, & to ſet fyre on it: he beynge nowe taken, wolde haue defended him ſelfe wͭ his ſwearde: choſynge rather to dye manfully, then to yelde hym ſelfe to thoſe wycked doers: & becauſe of his noble ſtocke, he had rather haue bene put to extreme cruelte. Notwithſtãding, what tyme as he miſſed of his ſtroke for haſte, & yͤ multitude fell in violently betwyxte yͤ dores, he rãne boldly to yͤ wall, & caſt him ſelfe downe mãfully amonge the heape of them, whych gaue ſoone place to his fall, ſo yͭ he fell vpõ his bely. Neuertheles, whyle there was yet breath wythin hym, he was kyndled in hys mynde, & whyle his bloude guſhed out exceadyngly (for he was very ſore woũded) he rãne thorowe the myddeſt of the people, and gat him to the toppe of a rocke. So when hys bloude was nowe gone, he toke out hys awne bowels wͭ both his hãdes, & threwe thẽ vpõ yͤ people callynge vpõ the Lord of lyfe & ſprete to rewarde him this agayne, and ſo he dyed.

¶ The. xv. Chapter.

¶ Nicanor goeth aboute to come vpon Judas on the Sabboth daye. The blaſphemye of Nicanor. Machabeus expoundynge vnto the Jewes the viſyon, boldeneth their hertes. The prayer of Machabeus. After the hoſte of Nicanor is ones ouercome, Machabeus commaundeth his heed and hys handes to be cut of and hys tonge to be geuen vnto foules.

A NOwe whẽ * Nicanor knewe yͭ Judas was in the countre of Samaria, he thought with all his power to ſtryke a felde wyth hym vpon a Sabboth daye. Neuertheleſſe, the Jewes yͭ were compelled to go wyth hym, ſayde: O do not ſo cruelly and vnkyndly, but halowe the Sabboth daye, and worſhyppe him that ſeyth all thynges. For all thys, yet ſayde the vngracious perſonne: * Is there a myghtye one in heauẽ, that cõmaunded the Sabboth daye daye to be kepte/ And when they ſayde: yee, the lyuinge God, the myghtye Lorde in heauen * commaunded the ſeuenth daye to be kepte, he ſayde: And I am myghty vpon earth, to commaunde them for to arme them ſelues, and to perfourme the kynges buſyneſſe. Notwithſtandinge, he myght not haue hys purpoſe.

*Exo.xx.b.

B Nicanor had deuyſed wyth great pryde to ouercome Judas, & to brynge awaye the victory: But Machabeus had euer a faſt conſydence and a parfecte hope in God, that he wolde helpe hym, & exhorted hys people, not to be afrayed at the cõmynge of the Heathen: but alwaye to remembre the helpe that had bene ſhewed vnto them from heauẽ: yee, & to be ſure nowe alſo, that almyghtye God wolde geue them the victory. He ſpake vnto thẽ out of the lawe and prophetes, puttynge them in remembraunce of the battayls that they had ſtricken afore, and made them to be of a good corage.

So when their hartes were plucte vp, he ſhewed them alſo the diſceatfulneſſe of the Heathẽ, and howe they wolde kepe no couenaũt nor othe. Thus he weapened: them not wyth the armoure of ſhylde and ſpeare, but with wholſome wordes and exhortacyons. He ſhewed thẽ a dreame alſo, wher thorowe he made them all glad, whych was thys: he thought that he ſawe Onias (which had C bene hye preſte, a vertuous and louynge man, ſad and of honeſt conuerſacyon, well ſpoken, & one that had bene exercyſed in Godlynes from a chylde) holdynge vp hys handes towarde heauen, and prayenge for his people. After thys, there apeared vnto him another man, whych was aged, honorable and gloryous. And Onias ſayde: This is a louer of the brethren, and of the people of Iſraell. Thys is he that prayeth moch for the people and for all the holy cytie: Jeremy ỹ prophete of God. He thought alſo that Jeremy helde out hys ryght hande, and gaue vnto Judas a ſwearde of Golde, ſayinge: Take this holy ſwearde, a gyfte from God, wherwith thou ſhall ſmyte downe the enemyes of the people of Iſraell.

And ſo they were well cõforted thorowe the wordes of Judas, and toke corage vnto them, ſo that the yonge men were determyned in their mindes to fyght, & to byde ſtyfly at it: In ſo moche that in the thynges which they toke in hãde, their boldneſſe ſhewed the ſame, becauſe the holy cytie and the temple were in parell: for the whych they toke more care, then for their wyues, chyldren, brethrẽ, and kynſfolckes. Agayne, they that were in the cytie, were moſt carefull for thoſe whych were to fyght. Nowe, when they were all in a hope that the iudgemẽt of the matter was at hãde, and the enemyes drewe nye, the hoſt beynge ſet in araye, the Elephantes and horſmen euery one ſtandynge in hys place: Machabeus conſydered the cõmynge of the multitude, the ordinaunce of dyuerſe weapens, D the cruelnes of the beaſtes, and helde vp hys handes towarde heauen, callynge vpon the Lorde ỹ doth wonders, * whych geueth not the victory after the multitude of weapens, and power of the hoſt (but to thẽ that pleaſe hym) accordynge to hys awne wyll. Therfore in hys prayer he ſayde theſe wordes.

Judi.vij.b.

O Lorde, * thou ỹ dyddeſt ſende thyne Angell in the tyme of Ezekiah kynge of Juda, and in the hoſte of Sennaherib ſleweſt an hundreth foure ſcore and fyue thouſande: ſende nowe alſo thy good angell before vs (O Lord of heauens) in the fearfulneſſe and drede of thy myghtye arme, that they which come agaynſt thy holy people to blaſpheme them, maye be afrayed. And ſo he made an ende of his wordes. Then Nicanor & they ỹ were wyth him, drewe nye wyth ſhawmes and ſonges: but Judas and hys cõpany with prayer and callynge vpon God.

Wyth their handes they ſmote, but wyth their hertes they prayed vnto the Lorde, and ſlewe no leſſe then .xxxv. M. men: For thorowe ỹ preſent helpe of God they were gloriouſly comforted.

Nowe whẽ they left of, & were turnynge agayne with ioye, they vnderſtode that Nicanor hym ſelfe was ſlayne wyth the other. Then they gaue a greate ſhoute and a crye, prayſynge the Almyghty Lord with a loude voyce. And Judas (whych was euer ready to ſpende hys body & lyfe for hys cyteſyns) E cõmaunded to ſmyte of Nicanors head, with hys arme & hande, & to be brought to Jeruſalem. When he came there, he called all the people, & the preſtes to the aulter wyth thoſe that were in the caſtell, & ſhewed them Nicanors head, and hys wycked hande, whych he had preſumptuouſly holden vp agaynſt the temple of God. He cauſed the tonge alſo of ỹ vngodly Nicanor to be cut in lytle peces, & to be caſt to the foules, & the cruel mans hãde to be hanged vp before the temple.

So euery man gaue thanckes vnto the Lorde, ſayinge: bleſſed be he, that hath kepte hys place vndefyled.

As for Nicanors heade, he hanged it vp vpon the hye caſtell, for an euident & playne token of ỹ helpe of God. And ſo they agreed all together, to kepe that daye holy, namely the .xiij. daye of the moneth Adar, which in ỹ Syrians language is called the nexte daye before Mardocheus daye. Thus was Nicanor ſlayne, and from that tyme forth the Jewes had ỹ cytie in poſſeſſyõ: And there wyll I nowe make an ende.

And all that dwelt at Lidda and Aſſaron John.v.b
ſawe hym, and tourned to the Lorde. Actes.iii.b

There was at Joppa a certen woman, a diſciple named Tabitha (which by interpretacyon is called Dorcas) the ſame was full of good workes and almes dedes, which ſhe dyd. And it chaunced in thoſe dayes that ſhe was ſycke, & dyed. Whō when they had waſſhed, they layed her in a chamber. But for as moch as Lydda was nye to Joppa, and the diſciples had hearde ẏ Peter was there, they ſent vnto him, deſyringe hym, that he wolde not be greued to come vnto them.

G Peter aroſe, & came with them. And whē he was come, they brought him into the chāber. And all the wydowes ſtode roūde about hym, weppynge, and ſhewyng the coates and garmentes, which Dorcas made, whyle ſhe was wyth thē. And Peter put thē all forth, and kneled downe, and prayde: and turned him to the body, and ſayd: Tabitha, *aryſe. *iii.re.xvi.a. iii.Reg.iiij.f Luke.vij.c And ſhe opened her eyes, and when ſhe ſawe Peter, ſhe ſat vp. And he gaue her the hand, and lyft her vp. And whan he had called the ſayncte and wydowes, he ſhewed her alyue. And it was knowen thorowout all Joppa, & many beleued on the Lorde. And it fortuned, that he taryed many dayes in Joppa, wyth one Simon a tanner.

¶ The vyſyon that Peter ſawe. Howe he was ſent to Cornelius. The heathen alſo receaue the ſprete and are baptyſed.

A There was a certen mā in Ceſarea called Cornelius, a captayne of ẏ ſoudyers of Italy, a deuoute mā, & one ẏ feared God wyth all hys houſholde, whych gaue moch almes to the people, and prayde God allwaye. The ſame ſawe by a viſyon euidētly (about the nynth houre of the daye) an aūgel of God commynge into hym, and ſayinge vnto him: Cornelius? When he loked on hym, he was afrayde, & ſayde: what is it Lorde? He ſayde *Ecc.xxxv.a vnto hym: Thy prayers & *thy almeſes are come vp into remēbraunce before God. And nowe ſende men to Joppa, & call for one Simon, whoſe ſyrname is Peter. He lodgeth wᵗ one Simon a tanner, whoſe houſe is by the ſee ſyde. He ſhall tell the, what thou oughteſt to do. And when the aūgell which ſpake vnto hym, was departed, he called two of hys houſholde ſeruaūtes, and a deuoute ſoudyer of thē that wayted on hym, and tolde them all the matter, and ſent them to Joppa.

B On the morowe as they wēt on theyr iorney, and drewe ny vnto the cytie, Peter wēt vp *vpon the toppe of the houſe to praye, *Mat.vi.a iiii.reg.iiii.f. about the ſyxt houre. And whē he wexed an hōgred, he wolde haue eatē. But whyle they made ready, he fell into a traunce, and ſawe heauen opened, and a certen veſſell come downe vnto hym, as it had bene a great ſhete, knyt at the foure corners, & was let downe to the earth, wherin were *al maner of fourfoted beaſtes of the earth, *Leui.xi.b Deu.xiiii.a. & vermen and wormes and foules of the ayer. And ther came a voyce to him, riſe Peter, kyl & eate. But Peter ſayd: not ſo Lorde, for I haue neuer eaten eny thynge that is cōmen or vncleane. And the voyce ſpake vnto him agayne the ſecond tyme: *what God hath clēſed, that call not *Mat.xv.b. Roma.xiiii.c ẏ cōmen. This was done threſe, and the veſſell was receaued vp agayne into heauen.

C Whyle Peter alſo muſed in him ſelfe what thys viſyon (which he had ſene) meant: beholde, the men whych were ſent from Cornelius had made inquirance for Simōs houſe, and ſtode before the dore: and called out one, and aſked whether Simon whych was ſyrnamed Peter were lodged there. Whyle Peter thought on the viſiō, the ſprete ſayd vnto him: behold, men ſeke the: aryſe therfore, and get the downe, & go with them, & dowte not for I haue ſent them. Peter went downe to the men whych were ſent vnto hym frō Cornelius and ſayd: Behold, I am he whō ye ſeke, what is the cauſe wherfore ye are come? They ſayd: Cornelius ẏ captayne a iuſt mā, and one that feareth God, & of good reporte amonge all the people of the Jewes, was warned by an holy aūgell to ſende for the into hys houſe, & to heare wordes of the. Then called he them in, *and lodged them. *Gen.xix.a.

D And on the morowe, Peter went awaye with them, and *certayn brethren frō Joppa *Actes.xi.b. accompanyed hym. And the thyrde daye entred they into Ceſarea. And Cornelius wayted for them, and had called togeather his kynſmen, and ſpeciall frendẽs. And as it chaunced Peter to come in, Cornelius met hym, and fell downe at hys fete, & worſhypped hym. But Peter toke hym vp, ſayinge: ſtande vp, *I my ſelfe alſo am a man. *Act.xiiii.c Apo.xix.b. and.xxii.c. And as he talked wyth him, he came in, & founde many that were come together. And he ſayd vnto thē: Ye knowe howe that *it is an vnlawfull *Deu.viii.a thynge for a man that is a Jewe, to company or come vnto an alyent: but God hath ſhewed me, that I ſhulde not call any man commen or vncleane: therfore came I vnto you wythout delaye, aſſone as I was ſent for. I aſke therfore, for what intēt haue ye ſent for me.

E And Cornelius ſayd: This daye nowe.iiij. dayes about this houre, I ſat faſtynge, & at the nynthe houre I prayde in my houſe: and behold, a man ſtode before me in bryght clothynge, and ſayde: Cornelius, thy prayer is hearde, and thyne almes dedes are had in remembraūce in the ſyght of God. Sēde men therfore to go to Joppa, and call for Simō, whoſe ſyrname is Peter. He is lodged in the houſe of one Symon a tāner by the ſee ſyde: which aſſone as he is come, ſhal ſpeake vnto the. Then ſent I for the immediatly, & thou haſt well downe, that thou art come: Nowe therfore are we all here preſent before God, to heare all thinges that are cōmaunded vnto the of God.

Then Peter opened his mouth, and ſayd: Of a trueth I perceaue that * there is no reſpect of perſones wyth God, ‡ but in all people, he that feareth hym, and worketh ryghtewesnes, is accepted wyth hym.

And they that ſtode by, ſayde *reuyleſt thou Goddes hye preſte? Then ſayd Paul: I wiſt ‡ Exo.xxii.d. not brethren, that he was the hye preſte. For it is wrytten: ‡thou ſhalt not curſe the ruler B of thy people.

When Paul perceaued that the one parte were Saduces, and the other Phariſes, he * Phili.iii.a. *Act.xxiii.e and.xxvi.b. cryed out in the counſell: Men and brethren, * I am a Phariſei, the ſonne of a Phariſei. ‡Of the hope and reſurreccyon from death, I am iudged.

And whan he had ſo ſayde, there aroſe a * Mat.xxii.c. Mar.xii.b. Luke.xx.e debate betwene the Phariſees and the Saduces & the multitude was deuyded. * For the Saduces ſaye, that there is no reſurreccyon, nether angel, nor ſpirete: But the Phariſees graunt both.

And there aroſe a greate crye: and whan the Scrybes whiche were of the Phariſees parte aroſe, they ſtroue ſaying: we fynde none euyll in thys man. Though a ſpirete or an angell hath apeared to hym, let vs not ſtry- C ue agaynſt God.

And when there aroſe a greate debate, the captayne (fearynge, leſte Paul ſhulde haue bene plucked a ſondre of them) cõmaunded the ſoudyers to go downe, and to take hym from amonge them, and to brynge him into * Actes.xvi.d and.xviii.c the caſtell.

* The nyght folowynge, God ſtode by ‡ Act.xxvii.d hym, and ſayde: be of good cheare Paul: for as thou haſt teſtifyed of me in Jeruſalem‡ ſo muſt thou beare wytneſſe alſo at Rome.

And whan it was daye, certayne of the Jewes gathered them ſelues together, and made a vowe, ſayinge: that they wolde nether eate nor dryncke, tyll they had kylled Paul. They were mo then fourtye men, which had made thys conſpyracyon. And they came to the chefe preſtes and elders, and ſayde: we haue boũde oure ſelues wt a vowe, that we wyll eate nothyng, vntyll we haue D ſlayne Paul.

Nowe therfore geue ye knowledge to the vpper captayne and to the counſell, that he brynge hym forth vnto vs to morowe, as though we wold know ſome thyng more perfectly of him. But we (or euer he come neare) are redy to kyll hym.

Whan Pauls ſyſters ſonne hearde of theyr layinge awayte, he wente, and entred into the caſtell, and tolde Paul. And Paul called one of the vnder captaynes vnto hym and ſayde: brynge thys younge man vnto the hye captayne: for he hath a certayne thynge to ſhewe hym. And he toke hym and brought hym to the hye captayne, and ſayd: Paul the preſoner called me vnto hym, and prayed me to brynge thys yonge man vnto the, whiche hath a certayne matter to ſhewe the.

The hye captayne toke hym by the hãde, E and went with him out of the waye, and aſked him: what is it that thou haſt to tell me? And he ſayde: the Jewes are determyned to deſyre the, that thou woldeſt brynge forth Paul to morow into the counſell, as though they wolde enquyre ſomwhat of hym more perfectly. But folowe not thou theyr myndes: for there lye in wayte for hym of them, moo then fourtye men, whiche haue bounde them ſelues with a vowe, that they will nether eate nor drynke, tyll they haue kylled hym. And now are they redy, and loke that thou ſhuldeſt promes.

The vpper captayne then let the yonge F man departe, and charged hym, ſayinge: ſe thou, tell it oute to no man, that thou haſt ſhewed theſe thynges to me. And he called vnto hym two vnder captaynes ſayinge: make ready two hundred ſoudiers to go to Ceſarea, and horſmen thre ſcore, and ten: and ſpeare men two hundred, at the thyrde houre of the nyghte: And delyuer them beaſtes, that they maye ſette Paull on, and brynge hym ſafe vnto Felix the hye debyte ☞ (For he dyd feare leaſt happely the Jewes ſhulde take hym awaye and kyll hym, and he him ſelfe ſhulde be afterwarde blamed, as though he wolde take money,) ☞ and he wrote a letter after thys maner.

from Ceſarea vnto Ieruſalem.
Then enformed hym the hye preſtes
and the chefe of the Iewes, of Paull.
And they beſoughte hym, and deſyred fauour

hym to Ieruſalem: and they layde a wayte

for hym in the waye, to kyl hym. Feſtus anſwered, that Paul ſhulde be kept at Ceſarea but that he hym ſelfe wolde ſhortly departe thyther. Let them therfore (ſayde he) which amonge you are able, come downe with vs, and accuſe hym, yf there be any faute in the man.

B When he had taryed there amonge them more then ten dayes, he wente downe vnto Ceſarea and the nexte daye ſat downe in the iudgement ſeate, and commaunded Paul to be brought. Whiche when he was come, the Jewes whiche were come from Jeruſalem, ſtode aboute hym, and layde many and greuous complayntes agaynſt Paule, whyche they coulde not proue, as lōge as he anſwered for hym ſelf* that he had nether agaynſt the lawe of the Jewes, nether agaynſte the temple, nor yet agaynſt Ceſar offended any thynge at all.

* Act.xxiiii.c and.xxviii.d.

C Feſtus * wyllynge to do the Jewes a pleaſure, anſwered Paul, and ſayde: wylt thou go vp to Jeruſalem, and there be iudged of theſe thynges before me? Then ſayde Paul: I ſtande at Ceſares iudgement ſeate, where I ought to be iudged. To the Jewes haue I no harme done, as thou verywell knoweſt. Yf I haue hurte them, or commytted any thyng worthy of death, I refuſe not to dye. Yf none of theſe thynges are, wherof they accuſe me, no man maye delyuer me to them. I appeale vnto Ceſar. Then ſpake Feſtus with deliberacion, and anſwered: Thou haſt appealed vnto Ceſar: vnto Ceſar ſhalt thou go.

D And after a certayne dayes, king Agrippa and Bernice came vnto Ceſarea to ſalute Feſtus. And whan they had bene there a good ceaſon, Feſtus rehearſed Paules cauſe vnto the kynge, ſayinge: * there is a certayne man lefte in preſon of Felix, aboute whom whan I came to Jeruſalem, ‡ the hye preſtes and elders of the Jewes enfourmed me, and deſyred to haue iudgement agaynſt hym. And becauſe I douted of ſoche maner of queſtions, I aſked hym, whether he wolde go to Jeruſalem, F and there be iudged of theſe matters. But whan Paul had appealed to be kepte vnto the knowledge of Ceſar, I commaunded hym to be kepte, tyll I myght ſende hym to Ceſar. Agrippa ſayde vnto Feſtus: I wolde alſo heare the man my ſelfe: To morowe, (ſayde he) thou ſhalt heare hym. And on the morowe whā Agrippa was come and Bernice, with greate pompe, and were entred into the counſel houſe, with the captaynes and G cheſe men of the cytie, at Feſtus commaundement was Paul brought forth. And Feſtus ſayde: kynge Agripa, & all ye mē which are heare preſent wyth vs, ye ſe thys man, about whom all the multitude of the Jewes haue entreated me, both at Jeruſalem and alſo here cryinge, that he oughte not to lyue any lenger. Yet founde I nothyng worthy of death, that he had committed. Neuertheles, ſeyng that he hath appealed to Ceſar, I haue determined to ſend hym. Of whom I haue no certayn thinge to write vnto my lord. Wherfore, I haue broughte hym vnto you, and ſpecially vnto the: O kynge Agripa, that after examinacyon had, I myght haue ſomwhat to wryte. B For yf when we were enemyes, we were reconcyled to God by the deeth of hys ſonne: much more ſeynge we are reconciled, we ſhal be preſerued by hys lyfe. Not onely this, but we alſo ioye in God by the meanes of oure Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom we haue now optayned the attonement.

C *Gene.ii.c Roma.vi.d Wherfore, as by one man, ſinne entred into the wo[illegible] and *deeth by the meanes of ſynne. Euen [illegible] deeth alſo went ouer al men, in ſo much as all we haue ſynned. For euen vnto the lawe was ſynne in the worlde, but ſynne is not imputed, when ther is no lawe: neuertheleſſe deeth raygned from Adam to Moſes, euen ouer them alſo that had not ſinned wyth lyke tranſgreſſion as dyd Adam: which ☞ beareth the ſimilitude of him that was to come. ☜

But the gyfte is not lyke as ẏ ſinne. For yf thorowe the ſynne of one, many be deed: muche more plenteous vpon many was the grace of God, & gyft by grace: * ☞ whyche was of one man Jeſus Chriſt. ☜ *Joh.i.b

And ẏ gyft is not ouer one ſynne: as deeth came thorow one ſynne of one ẏ ſynned. For damnacion came of one ſynne vnto condemnacion: but ẏ gyfte came to iuſtifye frō many ſynnes. For yf by the ſinne of one, deeth raigned by the meanes of one: muche more they D (whyche receaue aboundaunce of grace and of the gyfte of ryghteouſnes) ſhall raygne in lyfe by the meanes of one (that is to ſaye) Jeſus Chriſt.

✠ Lyke wyſe then as by the ſynne of one there ſprange vp euel on all men to condemnacion: euen ſo by the ryghteouſnes of one, ſpryngeth good vpon all men to the ryghteouſnes of lyfe. For as by one mannes diſobedience many became ſynners: ſo by the obedience of one, ſhal many be made righteous. But *the lawe in the meane tyme entred in, ẏ ſynne ſhuld encreace. *Gala iii.b Neuerthelater where aboundaūce of ſynne was, there was more plenteouſnes of grace. ¶ The. vii. Chapter.

¶ Chriſt hath delyuered vs from the lawe and deeth.
Paule ſheweth what the fleſhe and outwarde man is,
and calleth it the lawe of the members.

A KNowe ye not brethrē (I ſpeake to them that knowe ȳ lawe) how that
the lawe hath power ouer a man:
*i.Cor. vii.g as longe as it endureth? For * the woman whych is in ſubieccyon to a man, is bounde by the lawe to the man, as longe as he lyueth: But yf the man be deed: ſhe is *Mat.v.e. looſed from the lawe of the mā. So then * yf whyle ȳ man lyueth ſhe couple her ſelfe with another man, ſhe ſhalbe counted a wedlocke breaker. But yf the man be deed, ſhe is fre from the lawe of the huſbande, ſo that ſhe is no wedlocke breaker, though ſhe couple her
ſelfe wyth another man:

Euen ſo ye alſo (my brethren) are deed cōcernynge
ȳ lawe by the body of Chriſte, that ye ſhulde be coupled to another (I meane, to hym that is ryſen agayne frō deeth) that we ſhuld brynge forth frute vnto god. For whā
we were in ȳ fleſh, the luſtes of ſynne whych B
were ſtered vp by the lawe, raygned in oure
members, to brynge forth frute vnto deeth.
But nowe are we delyuered from the lawe,
and deed vnto it, where vnto we were in bōdage,
that we ſhul deſerue in a newe conuerſacion
of the ſprete, and not in the olde cōuerſacion
of the letter.

What ſhal we ſaye then? is the lawe ſynne?
God forbyd: neuertheleſſe * I knewe not *Roma.v.c
ſynne, but by ȳ lawe. For I had not knowē Gala.iii.b
what luſt had meante, excepte the lawe had ſayde, ‡ thou ſhalt not luſt. But ſynne toke ‡ Exo. xx.c
an occaſion by the meanes of the commaundement Deute.v.c
and wrought in me al maner of concupiſcence.
For verely wythout the lawe, ſynne was deed. I once lyued wythout law:
But when the commaūdement came, ſynne
reuiued, and I was deed. And the very ſame C commaundement, whych was ordeyned vnto
lyfe, was founde to be vnto me an occaſiō
of deeth. For ſynne toke occaſion by the meanes
of the commaūdement, and ſo diſceaued me, and by ȳ ſame ſlewe me. Wherfore * the *i.Tim.i.b
lawe is holy, and the commaundement holy, Gala.iii.c
and iuſt and good.

Was ȳ thē which was good, made deeth
vnto me? God forbyd. Naye it was ſynne: ȳ ſinne might apeare (by it which was good)
to worke deeth in me: that ſinne by the commaundement
myght be out of meaſure ſynfull.
For we knowe, ȳ the lawe is ſpirituall:
but I am carnall ☞ * ſolde vnder ſynne, becauſe
☞ I alowe not that whych I do. For ☜ *Eſa.lii.a ☜ what I wolde, ȳ do I not: but what I hate, that do I. Yf I do nowe that which I wolde not, I conſent vnto the lawe that it is good.
So then now, it is not I ȳ do it, but ſynne D that dwelleth in me. For I knowe, that in me (that is to ſaye in my * fleſhe) dwelleth *Gen.vi.a no good thinge. For, to wyll is preſent with me: but I fynde no meanes to performe that whych is good. For the good that I wolde,
do I not: but the euyll whych I wolde not,
that do I. Yf I do that I wolde not, then is it not I that do it, but ſynne that dwelleth in me. I fynde then by the lawe, that when I wolde do good, euyll is preſent wyth me.
For I delyte in the lawe of God, after the inwarde man. But I ſe another lawe in my members, rebellynge agaynſte the lawe of my mynde, and ſubduynge me vnto the law of ſynne, whyche is in my members. O
wretched man that I am: who ſhall delyuer me from thys body ſubdued vnto deeth? I thanke God thorow Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.
So then, wyth the mynde I ſerue the lawe of God, but wyth the fleſhe the lawe of ſynne.

The.xiiij. Chapter.

Paul ſheweth that the gyfte of prophecye, interpretynge or preachynge, excelleth the gyfte of tonges and howe they both ought to be vſed.

Labour for loue, and couet A ſpretuall gyftes: but moſt
chefly that ye maye propheſye.
For he yͭ ☞ ſpeaketh ☞
with the tõge, ſpeaketh not vnto men, but vnto God.
For no man heareth hym.
Howbeit in the ſprete he ſpeaketh myſteries.
But he yͭ propheſyeth, ſpeaketh vnto men
for their edifyinge, for their exhortacyõ and for their cõforte. He that ſpeaketh with the tonge,

*Roma.xii.b *Num.xi.b. tonge, profeteth him ſelfe: * he that propheſieth, edifyeth the congregacyon. * I wolde that ye all ſpake with tõges: but rather that ye propheſyed. For greater is he that propheſyeth, then he that ſpeaketh with tonges, except he expounde it: that the cõgregacyon B maye haue edifyinge. Nowe brethren, yf I come vnto you ſpeakynge with tõges: what ſhall I profet you, excepte I ſpeake to you, other by reuelacyon or by knowledge, or by propheſyinge, or by doctryne?

Moreouer, when thynges without lyfe geue ſounde (whether it be a pype or an harpe) except they make a diſtinccyon in the ſoundes, howe ſhall it be knowen what is pyped or harped? For yf the trompe geue an vncertayne voyce, who ſhall prepare hym ſelfe to the warre? Euen ſo lykewyſe when ye ſpeake wᵗ tonges, excepte ye ſpeake wordes that haue ſignificacyon, howe ſhall it be vnderſtãde what is ſpoken? For ye ſhall but ſpeake in the ayer.

C Many kyndes of voyces are in ẏ worlde, and none of them are without ſignificacyõ. If I knowe not what the voyce meaneth, I ſhalbe vnto him that ſpeaketh, an alient: and he that ſpeaketh, ſhalbe an alient vnto me. Euẽ ſo ye (for as moche as ye couet ſpretuall gyftes) ſeke, that ye maye excell, vnto the edifyinge of the congregacyon.

Wherfore, let him ẏ ſpeaketh with tonge, praye, that he maye interpret alſo. For If I praye with tõge, my ſprete prayeth, but my ☞ vnderſtondynge doth no good. What is it then? I will praye with ẏ ſprete, & will praye with ẏ vnderſtondynge. I will ſynge with the ſprete, and will ſynge ☞ with the vnderſtõdynge. For ells, when thou bleſſeſt with the ſprete, howe ſhall he that occupieth the rowme of the vnlearned, ſaye Amen, at thy geuynge of thankes, ſeynge he vnderſtãdeth not what thou ſayeſt? Thou verely geueſt thãkes well, but the other is not edified. I thanke my God ẏ I ſpeake wᵗ tonges more then ye all. Yet had I leuer in the cõgregacyon, to ſpeake fyue wordes with my vn- D derſtondinge to ẏ informaciõ of other, rather then ten thouſande wordes with the tonge.

Brethren, be not ye chyldren in wytte. Howbeit, as concernynge malicyouſnes, be children: but in witte be perfect. In the lawe *Eſa.xxviii.a. it is wrytten * with ſondrie tõges, and with ſondrye lyppes will I ſpeake vnto this people, and yet for all that, wyll they not heare me, ſayth the Lorde. Wherfore ☞ tonges are for a ſygne, not to them that beleue: but to them that beleue not. Cõtrary wyſe, propheſyinge ſerueth not for them that beleue not: but for them which beleue.

If therfore, when all the cõgregacyon is come together, and all ſpeake with tonges, ther come in they that are vnlearned, or they which beleue not: will they not ſaye, that ye are out of youre wittes? But and yf all propheſye, and ther come in one ẏ beleueth not, or one vnlearned, he is rebuked of all men, & E is iudged of euery man, & ſo are the ſecretes of hys hert opened, and ſo falleth he downe on his face, and worſhyppeth God, & ſayth, that God is in you of a trueth.

Howe is it then brethren? As oft as ye come together, euery one of you hath a ſonge hath a doctryne, hath a tonge, hath a reuelacyon, hath an interpretacyõ. Let all thynges be done vnto edifyinge: If eny man ſpeake with tonge, let it be by two or at the moſt by thre, and that by courſe, and let another interprete it. F But yf ther be no interpreter, let him kepe ſylence in the cõgregacyon, and let him ſpeake to him ſelfe and to God.

Let the prophetes ſpeake two, or thre, & * let the other iudge. *1.Ioh.iiii.a If eny reuelacyon be made to another that ſytteth by, let the fyrſt holde his peace. For ☞ ye maye al propheſy one by one, that all maye learne, and that all maye haue comforte. And the ſpretes of the Prophetes are in the power of the Prophetes. For God is not cauſer of ſtryfe: * but of peace, as ☞ (I teache) in all congregacyons of the ſaynctes. *Roma.xv.a

* Let youre wemen kepe ſylence in the cõgregacions. *1.Tim.ii.b. Gene.iii.c. 1.Cor.xi.a. For it is not permitted vnto thẽ to ſpeake: but to be vnder obediẽce, as ſayth the lawe. If they wyll learne eny thynge, let them aſke their huſbandes at home: For it is a ſhame for wemen, to ſpeake in the congregacyon. Sprõge the worde of God frõ you? Ether came it vnto you onely? If eny man thynke him ſelfe to be a prophet, ether ſpirituall: let him knowe, what thynges I wryte vnto you. For they are the commaũdementes of ẏ Lorde. But and yf eny man be ignoraunt, let him be ignoraunt. Wherfore brethren, couet to propheſye, and forbyd not to ſpeake with tonges. Let all thynges be done honeſtly and in order ☞ (amonge you)

It is not my mynde that other be ſet at eaſe, and ye bꝛoughte into combꝛaunce: but that ther be egalnes nowe at this tyme: and that your aboūdance maye ſucker their lacke: and that theyꝛ aboundance maye ſupply youre lacke: that there maye be equalyte, agreynge to that which is wꝛytten: *He that had moche, had not the moꝛe aboundance: ⁊ he that had a litle, had neuer the leſſe. Thankes be vnto God, whiche put the ſame good mynde foꝛ you in the herte of Titus, whiche accepted the requeſte: yee, rather he was ſo well wyllynge, that of his awne accoꝛde, he came vnto you. * Exo.xvi.b.

D We haue ſente with hym the bꝛother, whoſe laude is in the Goſpell thoꝛowout all the congregacyons: and not that onely, but is alſo choſen of the congregacyons to be a felowe wyth vs in oure ioꝛney, concerninge this beniuolence that is miniſtred by vs vnto the pꝛayſe of the ſame Loꝛde, and to ſtere vp youre pꝛompte mynde.

We haue ſent wͭ them a bꝛother of oures, whome we haue ofte tymes pꝛoued diligent in many thynges: but nowe moch moꝛe diligent. The great confidence which J haue in you, hath cauſed me thys to do: partelye foꝛ Titus ſake, which is my felowe and helper as concernyng you: partely becauſe of other which are our bꝛethꝛen, and the meſſengers of the congregacyons, ⁊ the gloꝛy of Chꝛiſt. ¶ The.ij. Chapter.

¶ He exhorteth vs to be obedient vnto the newe lawe whych Chriſt hath geuen vs and not to be offended at the infirmyte & lowe degree of Chriſt because it was neceſſary that for oure ſakes he ſhulde take ſoche an humble ſtate vpō hym, that he myght be lyke vnto hys brethren.

WHerfore, we ought to geue A the more erneſt hede to the thynges that are ſpokē vnto vs, leaſt at any tyme we peryſhe. For yf the worde whych was ſpoken by aungells was ſtedfaſt: And euery tranſgreſſyon and diſobedience receaued a iuſt recompēce of rewarde, howe ſhall we eſcape, yf we deſpyſe ſo great ſaluacyon, whych at the fyrſt began to be preached of the Lorde him ſelfe, and was confyrmed vnto vs warde, by them that hearde it? * God *Mar.xvi.d. bearynge wytnes therto, both with ſygnes and wonders alſo and with dyuers myracles, & gyftes of the holy gooſte, accordynge to hys awne wyll:

¶ He requyreth vs to be obedyent vnto the worde of Chriſt, whych is more worth then ẏ ceremoniall lawe of Moſes. The punyſhement of ſuche as will nedes harden their hartes.

A Wherfore holy brethrē, partakers of the celeſtiall callynge conſyder the ambaſſadour and hye preſte of oure profeſſyon Chriſt Jeſus, howe ẏ he is faythfull vnto hym ẏ put him in the offyce, euen as was Moſes in all hys houſe. For loke howe moche honoure he (ẏ hath buylded a houſe) hath more then the houſe it ſelfe, ſo moche honour is he counted worthy of more then Moſes. For euery houſe is buylded of ſome man. But he ẏ ordeyned all thynges is God. And Moſes verelẏ was faythfull in all hys houſe, as a mynyſter, to beare witnes of thoſe thynges whych were to be ſpoken afterwarde. But Chriſt as a ſonne, hath rule ouer the houſe, whoſe houſe are we, yf we holde faſt the cōfydence and * the reioyſynge of that hope, vnto the ende. *Roma.v.a.

Wherfore (as the holy gooſt ſayth:) to daye yf ye wyll heare hys voyce, harden not ☞ youre hertes, ☞ as in the prouokynge, in B the daye of temptacyon in the wyldernes, where youre fathers tēpted me, proued me, and ſawe my workes.xl.yeare. Wherfore I was greued with ẏ generacyon, and ſayde: They do all waye erre in their hertes: they verely haue not knowen my wayes, ſo ẏ I ſware in my wrath: they ſhall not enter into my reſt: Take hede brethrē, leſt at anye tyme ther be in anye of you a frowarde herte ſubiect vnto vnbelefe, ẏ he ſhulde departe from the lyuynge God: but exhorte ye one another dayly, whyle it is called to daye. leſt eny of you were harde harted thorowe the deceytfulneſſe of ſynne.

C We are made partetakers of Chriſt, yf ☞ we kepe ſure (vnto the ende) the ☞ begynnynge of the ſubſtāce, ſo longe as it is ſayde: to daye yf ye wyll heare hys voyce, harden not youre hertes, as in the prouokynge, for ſome when they hearde, dyd prouoke: howe be it not all ẏ came out of Egypt by Moſes. But wt whō was he deſplayſed.xl.yeares? Was he not deſpleaſed with them that had ſynned, whoſe carkaſes were ouerthrowen in the deſert? ¶ The.iiij.Chapter.

Let vs feare therfore, leſt eny of A you (forſakynge ẏ promes of entringe into hys reſt) ſhulde ſeme at anye tyme to haue bene diſapoynted. For vnto vs is it declared, as well as vnto them. But it proffyted not thē, that they hearde the worde: becauſe they whych hearde it, coupled it not with fayth. For we which haue beleued, do enter into his reſt, as he ſayde. Euē as I haue ſworne ĩ my wrath: they ſhall not enter into my reſt. And that ſpake he verely longe after that the workes were made, and the foundacyō of the worlde layde. For he ſpake in a certayne place of the ſeuenth daye, on thys wyſe. * And God dyd reſt the ſeuenth daye from all hys workes. *Gene.ii.a. And in thys place agayne: They ſhall not enter into my reſt.

Seynge therfore it foloweth, that ſome B muſt enter therinto, and they (to whom it was firſt preached) entred not therin for vnbelefes ſake, he appoynteth a certayne daye after ſo longe a tyme ſayinge in Dauid (as it is rehearſed) this daye yf ye wyll heare hys voyce, harden not your hertes. For yf Joſue had geuē them reſt, then wolde he not afterwarde haue ſpoken of another daye. There remayneth therfore yet a reſt to the people of God. For he that is entred into hys reſt hath ☞ ceaſed alſo from his awne workes, ☞ as God dyd from hys.

Let vs ſtudy therfore to entre into that C reſt, leſt eny man fall after the ſame enſample of vnbelefe. with an othe, by him that ſayde vnto hym.
*Pſal.cx.a. * The Lorde ſware, and wyll not repent:
Thou art a preſt for euer after the order of D Melchyſedech. And for ẏ cauſe was Jeſus
a ſtablyſſher of a better teſtament.

And amonge them many were made preſtes,
becauſe they were not ſuffred to endure
by the reaſon of deeth. But this mã (becauſe he endureth euer) hath an euerlaſtẽge preſthode:
Wherfore, he is able alſo euer to ſaue
them to the vttermoſt, that come vnto God
by him, ſeynge he euer lyueth * to make intercesſyon
for vs. *i.Tim.ii.a. i.Joh.ij.a.

For ſoche an hye Preſte it became vs to
haue, whych is holy, harmleſſe, vndefyled,
ſeparate from ſynners, made hyer then heauen.
Which nedeth not dayly (as yonder hye preſtes) * to offer vp ſacrifyce, fyrſt for hys *Leui.ix.b.
awne ſynnes, and then for ẏ peoples ſynnes.
For ẏ dyd he once, when he offered vp hym
ſelfe. * For the lawe maketh men preſtes, Hebr.v.a.
which haue infirmytie: but the worde of the
oth ẏ came ſence the lawe, maketh the ſonne
preſte, whych is perfecte for euermore.

¶The.viij.Chapter.

¶The offyce of Chriſt is more worthy then the preſtes offyce of the olde lawe, whyche was vnperfecte, and therfore abrogate.

Of the thynges whych we haue ſpoken, A
thys is ẏ pyth that * we haue *Hebr.vi.d. and.x.c.
ſoche an hye preſte as ſytteth on the

in heauẽ, and is a minyſter of holy thynges,
and of ẏ true tabernacle, which God pyght,
and not man. For euery hye preſte is ordeyned
to offer gyftes and ſacrifyces: wherfore
it is of neceſſyte, that thys man haue ſome
what alſo to offer. For he were not a preſte,
yf he were on the erth where are preſtes,
that accordynge to the lawe offer gyftes whych ſerue vnto the enſample, and * ſhadowe *Collo.ii.c. Hebr.x.a.
of heauenly thynges: euen as the anſwere

* Take hede (ſayde he) that thou make all *Exo.xxv.d. Actes.vii.f.
thynges accordynge to the patrone whych
is ſhewed to the in the mount.

But nowe hath he obtayned a preſthode B
ſo moche the more excellent, as he is the mediator
of a better teſtament, whych was cõfyrmed
in better promyſes. For yf that fyrſt teſtament hath bene ſoche, ẏ no faute coulde

hys neyghboure, and euery mã his brother, ſayinge: knowe ẏ Lorde: for they ſhall knowe me, from the leaſt to the moſte of them: For I will be mercyfull ouer their vnryghtewesnes, and their ſynnes & their iniquities will I thinke vpõ nomore. In that he ſayth a newe teſtamẽt, he hath worne out ẏ olde: For that whych is worne out & wexed olde, is redy to vanyſhe awaye.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

¶ The proſpyte & worthyneſſe of the olde teſtament and howe farre the newe excelleth it.

A The olde teſtament then had verely ordinaunces, and ſeruinges of God, and wordly holynes. ✠ *Ex.xxv.c. For * there was a fore tabernacle made, wherin was the lyght, and the table, and the ſhewe breed, which is called holy. But wythin the ſeconde vayle was there a tabernacle, which is called holyeſt of all, which had the goldẽ ſenſer, and the arcke of the teſtamẽt ouerlayde round about B with golde, wherin was ẏ golden pot with *Exo.xvi.g. ‡Leui.xvii.a *Exo.xl.c. * Manna, and ‡ Aarons rodde, that ſprõge and * the tables of the teſtament. Ouer the arcke were the Cherubins of glory, ſhadowynge the ſeate of grace. Of which thynges we cannot nowe ſpeake particularly.

When theſe thynges were thus ordeyned, the preſtes went alwayes into the fyrſt tabernacle, whych executed the ſeruyce of the holy thynges. But into the ſecõde went the *Exo.xxx.b. ‡Leui.xvi.b. hye preſte alone * once euery yeare: not with C out bloud ‡ whych he offered for him ſelfe, & for the ignoraũces of the people. Wherwith the holy gooſt this ſignifyed, that the waye of holy thynges was not yet opened, whyll as yet the fyrſt tabernacle was ſtandynge. which was a ſimilitude for ẏ tyme then preſent, in which were offered gyftes and ſacrifyces, that coulde not make ẏ minyſter parfecte, as pertaynynge to the cõſcyence, with onely meates & drynckes, & diuers waſhinges and iuſtifyinges of ẏ fleſhe. which were ordeyned vntyll the tyme of reformacyon.

*Hebre.vi.d and.vii.a. ✠ Bnt * Chriſt beynge an hye Preſte of good thynges to come, came by a greater and a more perfecte tabernacle, not made D with hãdes: that is to ſaye, not of this buyldynge, nether by the bloude of goates and *i.Pet.i.d. calues: but * by his awne bloude he entred in once into the holy place, and founde eternall redempcyon. ✠

*Leui.xvi.c. For yf the * bloud of oxen and of gotes & the aſſes of a yonge kowe, when it was ſprynckeled, purifyeth the vnclene, as touchynge ẏ purifyinge of ẏ fleſhe: howe moch moare ſhall the bloude of Chriſt (which thorowe ẏ eternall ſprete, offered him ſelfe without ſpot to God) pourge youre conſcience frõ deed workes, for to ſerue the lyuynge God?

*i.Tim.ii.a. And for this cauſe is he the * mediator of the newe teſtament, ẏ thorowe deeth which chaunſed, for the redempcyon of thoſe tráſgreſſions that were vnder ẏ fyrſt teſtament they whych are called, myght receaue ẏ promes of eternall inheritaunce. ✠ For where E as is a teſtamẽt, ther muſt alſo (of neceſſite) be the deeth of hym ẏ maketh the teſtament. For the teſtament taketh auctoryte when mẽ are deed: for it is yet of no value, as lõge as he that maketh the teſtamẽt is a lyue: for whych cauſe alſo nether the fyrſt teſtament was ordeyned without bloude. For when Moſes had declared all the cõmaundement to all the people accordynge to the lawe, he toke the bloud of calues and of goates, with water & purple wolle, and yſope, & ſprynckled both the boke, & all the people, ſayinge: * thys is the bloude of the teſtament, which *Ex.xxiiii.b. God hath appoynted vnto you. Moreouer, he ſprynckled ẏ tabernacle wᵗ bloud alſo, and all the minyſtringe veſſels. And almoſt all thinges are by ẏ lawe purged with bloud, & without ſheadinge of bloud is no remiſſyõ.

It is nede then, ẏ the ſimilitudes of heauenly thynges be purifyed with ſoche thynges: but that the heauẽly thynges them ſelues be purifyed with better ſacrifyces then are thoſe. * For Chriſt is not entred into the *Actes.vii.f. and.xvii.f. holy places that are made wᵗ handes (which are ſymilitudes of true thynges) but is entred into very heauen, for * to appeare nowe *i.John.ii.a in the ſyght of God for vs: not to offer hym ſelfe often * as the hye preſte entreth into the *Leui.xvi.g. holy place euery yeare with ſtraunge bloud, for then muſt he haue often ſuffred ſence the worlde began. But nowe in the ende of the worlde, hath he appeared once, to put ſynne to flyght by the offerynge vp of hym ſelfe. And as it is apoynted vnto all mẽ that they ſhall once dye, and then commeth the iudgement * euen ſo Chriſt was once offered, to *Roma.v.b. i.Pet.iii.d. take awaye the ſynnes of many, & vnto thẽ that loke for hym ſhall he appeare agayne without ſynne vnto ſaluacyon.

¶ The.x. Chapter.

¶ The olde lawe had no power to clenſe awaye ſynne, but Chriſte dyd it with offerynge of hys body once for all. An exhortacyõ to receaue thys goodneſſe of God thanckfully with pacience and ſtedfaſt fayth.

A For the lawe (hauynge the * ſhadowe of good thynges to come, & *Collo.ii.c. Heb.viii.a. not ẏ very faſſhion of the thynges them ſelues) can neuer with thoſe ſacrifyces whych they offer, yeare by yeare continually make the cõmers therunto parfayt. For wolde not then thoſe ſacrifyces haue ceaſed to haue bene offred, becauſe that the offerers once purged ſhulde haue had no more conſcience of ſynnes? Neuertheleſſe, in thoſe ſacrifyces, is there mencyon made of ſynnes euery yeare. * For ẏ bloude of oxen *Leui.xvi.c. and of goates cannot take awaye ſynnes.

B Wherfore, when he cõmeth into ẏ worlde
*Pſal.xl.b. he ſayth: * Sacryfyce and offerynge ẏ woldeſt

me: Burnt offerynges alſo for ſynne haſte ẏ not alowed. Then ſayde I lo, I am here. In the begynnynge of the booke it is written of me, that I ſhuld do thy wyl, o God. Aboue, whẽ he ſayeth: ſacrifice & offerynge, & burnt

of ẏ body of Jeſu Chriſte once for all.
C And euery preſt is ready dayly miniſtring

¶ The.ii.Chapter. ✠

A My lytell chyldren, theſe thynges
wryte I vnto you, that ye ſynne not. And yf any man ſynne, we haue an aduocate with the father, Jeſus Chriſte, the ryghteous: & he it is that obtayneth grace for our ſynnes, not for oure ſynnes only: but alſo for the ſynnes of al the worlde. ✠ And herby we are ſure that we knowe hym, yf we kepe his cōmaundementes.
*John.xiii.d * He that ſayeth I knowe him, & kepeth not hys commaūdementes is a lyar, and the veritie is not in hym. But who ſo kepeth his worde, in hym is the loue of God perfyte in dede: hereby knowe we that we are in hym:
He that ſayeth he bydeth in hym, oughte to walke euen as he walked. ✠

B Brethren, I wryte no newe cōmaundement
vnto you: but that olde commaundement,
which ye haue had frō the begynning.
The olde commaundemente is the worde,
which ye haue herde from the begynnynge.
Agayne, a newe commaundemente I wryte
vnto you, that is true in hym, and the ſame
is true alſo in you: for the darkenes is paſt,
and the true lyght nowe ſhyneth. ✠ He that ſayth howe that he is in the lyghte, & yet hateth
hys brother, is in darkenes euen vntyll thys tyme. He that loueth hys brother, abydeth
in the lyght, and there is none occaſyon
of euyll in hym. He that * hateth hys brother, *Leui.xix.d
is in darkenes, & walketh in darkenes:
& can not tell whether he goeth, becauſe that darkenes hath blynded hys eyes.

Babes I wryte vnto you, howe yͭ youre
ſinnes are forgeuen you for his names ſake: C
I wryte vnto you fathers, howe yͭ ye haue
knowen hym that is from the begynnynge:
I wryte vnto you yonge mē, how yͭ ye haue
ouercome that wicked: I wryte vnto you lytell chyldren, howe that ye haue knowen the father. I haue wrytē vnto you fathers, how that ye haue knowen hym that is frō the begynnynge.
I haue wrytten vnto you yonge
men, how that ye are ſtronge, and the word of God abydeth in you, and ye haue ouercome
that wycked.

Se that ye loue not * the worlde, neyther *Job.xv.b
the thynges that are in the worlde. Yf any man loue the world, the loue of the father is not in hym. For all that is in the worlde (as the luſte of the fleſhe, and the luſte of the eyes, & the pryde of lyfe) is not of the father,
but of the worlde. And the worlde paſſeth awaye
and the luſte therof: but he that fulfylleth
the wyll of God, abydeth for euer.

Lytel chyldren, it is the laſt tyme, and as D ye haue herde howe that Antichriſt ſhall come,
euen nowe are there many begonne to be Antichriſtes alredy, wherby we know, that it is the laſt tyme. * They wente out frō vs, *Actes.xx.e
but they were not of vs. For yf they had ben of vs, they wolde no doute haue continued wyth vs. But that it myght appeare, that they were not of vs.

Neuertheleſſe, ye haue an oyntmēt of him
yͭ is holy, & ye knowe al thynges. ✠ I haue
not wrytten vnto you, as though ye knewe
not the trueth: but as though ye knewe it (& knowe alſo) yͭ no lye cōmeth of trueth. Who is a lyar, but he that denyeth that Jeſus is Chriſt: the ſame is Antichriſte, that denyeth
the father and the ſonne. Whoſoeuer denyeth
the ſonne, the ſame hath not the father.
☞ (He that knowlegeth the ſonne, hath the father alſo.)
Let therfore abyde in you that ſame whych ye herde from the begynnyng. Yf that which ye herde from the begynnynge ſhal remayne
in you, ye alſo ſhall continue in the ſonne,
and in the father. And thys is the promes
that he hath promyſed vs, euen eternall

These thynges haue I wryttē vnto you, cõcernynge them that diſceaue you. And the anoyntynge whych ye haue receaued of him dwelleth in you. And ye nede not, that any man teach you: but *as the anoyntynge teacheth you of all thynges, and is true, and no lye, and as it hath taught you, euen ſo byde therin. And now babes abyde in hym: that when he ſhal appeare, we may be bolde, and not be made aſhamed of him at hys cõmyng yf ye knowe that he is ryghteous, knowe al ſo that euery one whych doth ryghteouſnes, is borne of hym.

I Jhon your brother, and companion in C tribulacion, and in the kyngdome & pacience in Jeſu Chriſte, was in the yle that is called Pathmos, for the worde of God, and for the wytneſſynge of Jeſu Chriſte: I was in the ſprete on a ſondaye, and herde behynde me a great voyce, as it had bene of a trompe, ſayeng: I am Alpha and Omega, the fyrſt and the laſt. That thou ſeyſt, wryte in a boke, & ſende it vnto the ſeuen cõgregacions whyche are in Aſia, vnto Epheſus, and vnto Smyrna and vnto Pergamos, and vnto Thiatira, and vnto Sardis, & vnto Philadelphia, and vnto Laodicia.

And I turned backe to ſe the voyce that D ſpake to me. And whẽ I was turned: I ſaw ſeuen golden candelſtyckes, and in the myddes of the candelſtyckes, one lyke vnto the ſonne of man, clothed wyth a lynnẽ garmẽte downe to the fete, and gyrd aboute the pappes wͭ a golden gyrdle. Hys heed, & hys heares were whyte, as whyte woll, & as ſnowe and hys eyes were as a flame of fyre: and his fete lyke vnto braſſe, as though they brente in a fornace, and hys voyce as the ſounde of many waters. And he had in his ryght hãde vii. ſtarres. And out of hys mouth wente a ſharpe two edged ſwearde. *And hys face ſhone, euen as the ſonne in hys ſtrength.

And when I ſawe hym, I fel at hys fete, euen as deed. And he layde hys ryght hande vpõ me, ſayeng vnto me: feare not. *I am the fyrſt and the laſt, and am aliue, and was deed, And behold ‡I am alyue for euermore and haue the keyes of hell, & of deeth. Wryte therfore the thynges whych thou haſt ſene, and the thynges whych are, and the thinges which muſt be fulfylled here after: the myſtery of the. vii. ſtarres whyche thou ſaweſt in my ryght hande, and the ſeuen golden candelſtyckes. ¶ The.ii.Chapter.

A Unto the meſſenger of the congregacyon of Epheſus wꝛyte: theſe thynges ſayth he, that holdeth the ſeuen ſtarres in hys ryght hande, and that walketh in the myddes of the ſeuen golden cãdelſtickes. I knowe thy woꝛkes, and thy labour, and thy pacience, and howe thou canneſt not foꝛbeare them whych are euell, and haſt examyned them, that ſaye they are Apoſtles, and are not: & haſt foũde them lyars, and haſt ſuffred. And haſt papacience: and foꝛ my names ſake haſt labored, and haſt not faynted. Neuertheleſſe, I haue ſumwhat agaynſt the, becauſe thou
B haſte lefte thy fyꝛſt loue. Remember therfoꝛe from whence thou art fallen, & repent, and do the fyꝛſt woꝛckes. Oꝛ elles I wyll come vnto the ſhoꝛtly, and wyll remoue thy candelſtycke out of his place, except thou repent. But thys thou haſt, becauſe thou hateſt the dedes of the * Nicolaytans, whych dedes I alſo hate. Let hym that hath eares, heare what the ſpꝛete ſayth vnto the cõgregacyons. To hym that ouercõmeth, wyll I geue to eate of the * tree of lyfe, whych is in the myddes of the Paradyſe of God.

C And vnto the aungell of the cõgregacyon of Smyꝛna wꝛyte: Theſe thynges ſayth he that is fyꝛſt, and the laſte, which was deed, and is alyue. I know thy woꝛkes & tribulacyon and pouertye, but thou are ryche. And I knowe the blaſphemy of them, which call them ſelues Iewes & are not: but are the cõgregacyon of Sathan. Feare none of thoſe thynges, which thou ſhalt ſuffre. Beholde, the deuyll ſhall caſte ſome of you into preſon, to tẽpte you, & ye ſhall haue tribulacyon ten dayes. Be faythfull vnto the deeth, and I wyll geue the a croune of lyfe. Let hym ẏ hath eares, heare, what the ſpꝛete ſayth to ẏ congregacyons. He that ouercommeth, ſhall not be hurt of the ſeconde deeth.

And to the meſſenger of the cõgregacyon in Pergamos wꝛyte: This ſayth he, whych hath the ſharpe ſwearde with two edges: I knowe thy woꝛkes, & where thou dwelleſt, euen where Sathans ſeat is, and thou kepeſt my name, & haſt not denyed my fayth. And in my dayes Antipas was a faythfull wytnes of myne, whych was amonge you, where Sathan dwelleth. But I haue a fewe thynges agaynſt ẏ: becauſe thou haſt there, them that mayntayne the doctrine of Balam * which taught in Balake, to put occaſiõ of ſynne befoꝛe ẏ chyldꝛẽ of Iſrael, that they ſhulde eate of meate dedycat vnto ydoles, and commyt foꝛnicacyon. Euen ſo haſt thou them that mayntayne the doctryne of the Nycolaitãs, whych thynge I hate. But be conuerted, oꝛ elles I wyll come vnto the ſhoꝛtly, and wyll fyght agaynſt the wyth
E the ſwearde of my mouth. Let him that hath eares, heare, what the ſpꝛete ſayth vnto the congregacyõs. To hym that ouercommeth, wyll I geue to eate Manna that is hyd, and wyll geue him a whyte ſtone, and in the ſtone a newe name wꝛytten, which no mã knoweth, ſauynge he that receaueth it.

* Nu.xxxi.c.

And vnto the meſſenger of the congregatiõ of Thyatira wꝛyte. Thys ſayth the ſonne of God, which hath eyes lyke vnto a flãme of fyꝛe, & his fete are lyke braſſe: I knowe thy woꝛkes, & thy loue, ſeruyce, and fayth, and thy pacience, & thy dedes, whych are mo

Notwythſtandynge I haue a feawe thynges agaynſt the, becauſe thou ſuffereſt that woman * Ieſabell, whych called her ſelfe a Prophetiſe, to teache & to deceaue my ſeruauntes, to make them commyt foꝛnicacyon, & to eate meates offered vp vnto ydoles. And I gaue her ſpace to repẽt of her foꝛnicacyon, & ſhe repented not. Beholde, I will caſt her into a bedd: and them that cõmyt foꝛnicacyon wyth her, into gret aduerſytie, excepte they turne frõ theyꝛ deades. And I wyll kyll her chyldꝛen wyth deeth. And all the congregacyons ſhall knowe, that * I am he whych ſearcheth the reynes & hertes. And I wyll geue vnto euery one of you accoꝛdynge vnto hys woꝛkes.

G Unto you I ſaye, and vnto other of them of Thyatira, as many as haue not thys lernynge & which haue not knowen the depnes of Sathan (as they ſaye) I wyll put vpon you none other burthen, but ẏ whych ye haue already. Holde faſt tyll I come, and whoſoeuer ouercõmeth & kepeth my woꝛkes vnto the ende, to hym wyll I geue power ouer nacyõs, * and he ſhall rule them wt a rodde of yꝛon: & as ẏ veſſels of a potter, ſhall they be bꝛoken to ſheuers. Euẽ as I receaued of my father, ſo wyll I geue hym the moꝛnynge ſtarre. Let hym that hath eares, heare, what the ſpꝛete ſayth to the congregacyons.

¶ He inſtructeth and enfoꝛmeth the Angels of the congregacyons, declarynge alſo the rewarde of hym that ouercommeth.

A And wꝛyte vnto the meſſenger of the congregacyon that is at Sardis: thys ſayth he that hath the ſeuẽ ſpꝛetes of God and the ſeuen ſtarres. I knowe thy woꝛkes, thou haſt a name that thou lyueſt, and thou art deed. Be awake, and ſtrength the thynges whych remayne, ẏ are redy to dye. For I haue not founde thy woꝛkes perfayte

¶ The.v. Chapter.

¶ He ſeyth the lambe openynge the boke, and therfore
the foure beaſtes, the .xxiiij. elders, & the aungels prayſe
the lambe, and do hym worſhyppe.

And I

A And I ſawe in the ryght hãde of hym that ſat in the trone, a boke wꝛytten wyth in & on the backſyde, ſealed wyth ſeuẽ ſeales. And I ſawe a ſtronge aungell, whych pꝛeached wͭ a lowde voyce: Who is woꝛthy to open the boke, & to loſe the ſeales therof. And no man in heauẽ ner in erth nether vnder yͤ erth, was able to open yͤ boke, nether to loke theron. And I wepte moch becauſe no man was founde woꝛthy to open & to reade the boke, nether to loke theron.

B And one of the elders ſayde vnto me wepe not: Beholde, a lyon of the trybe of Juda, the rote of Dauid, hath obtayned to open the boke, and to loſe the ſeuẽ ſeales therof. And I behelde, and lo, in the myddes of the ſeate, and of the foure beaſtes, & in the myddes of the elders, ſtode a lambe as though he had bene kylled, hauynge ſeuen hoꝛnes, and ſeuẽ eyes, whych are the ſeuẽ ſpꝛetes of God, ſent into all the woꝛlde. And he came, and toke the boke out of the ryght hande of hym that ſate vpon the ſeate.

C And when he had taken yͤ boke, the foure beaſtes and .xxiiii. elders fell downe befoꝛe the lãbe, hauynge (euery one of thẽ) harpes & golden vialles full of odoures, whych are the pꝛayers of ſaynctes, & they ſonge a newe ſonge, ſayinge: thou art woꝛthy to take the boke, & to open the ſeales therof: foꝛ yͧ waſt kylled, & haſt redemed vs by thy bloude out of all kynredes, & tõges, & people, & nacyõs, and haſt made vs vnto oure God, kynges, and pꝛeſtes, & we ſhall raygne on the erth.

D And I behelde, and I hearde the voyce of many aungels about the trone, & about the beaſte & the elders, and I hearde thouſande thouſandes, ſayinge wͭ a lowde voyce: Woꝛthy is the lambe that was kylled to receaue power, & ryches, & wyſdome, and ſtrength, and honour, & gloꝛy, & bleſſynge. And all the creatures whych are in heauẽ, and on yͤ erth & vnder the erth, & in the ſee, and all that are in them, herde I ſayinge, bleſſynge, honour, gloꝛy, and power be vnto hym that ſytteth vpon yͤ ſeate, & vnto the lãbe foꝛ euermoꝛe. And the foure beaſtes ſayde: Amen. And the .xxiiii. elders fell vpon theyꝛ faces, and woꝛſhypped hym that lyueth foꝛ euermoꝛe.

The. vi. Chapter.

A And I ſawe, when the lambe opened one of yͤ ſeales, and I herde one of the foure beaſtes ſaye, as it were the noyſe of thonder: come and ſe: and I ſawe. And beholde ther was a whyte hoꝛſſe: and he that ſat on hym, had a bowe, and a crowne was geuen vnto hym, and he went foꝛth conquerynge & foꝛ to ouer come. And when he had opened the ſeconde ſeale, I herde the ſeconde beaſte, ſaye: come and ſe. And ther went out another hoꝛſſe that was redd, & power was geuen to hym that ſat theron, to take peace from the erth, and that they ſhulde kyll one another. * And ther was geuen vnto hym a great ſwearde. *Eſa.xxvii.a

B And when he had opened the thyꝛde ſeale I herde yͤ thyꝛde beaſte ſaye, come & ſe. And I behelde, & lo, a black hoꝛſſe: & he that ſate on hym, had a payꝛe of balãces in his hande: And I herde a voyce in yͤ myddes of yͤ foure beaſtes, ſaye: a meaſure of whete foꝛ a peny and thꝛe meaſures of barly foꝛ a peny & oyle & wyne ſe thou hurte not. And when he had opened the fourth ſeale, I herde the voyce of the fourth beaſte ſaye, come and ſe: & I loked. And beholde a pale hoꝛſſe: and his name that ſate on hym was deeth, & hell folowed after hym, and power was geuen vnto thẽ ouer the fourth parte of the erth, to kyll wͭ ſwearde, and wyth honger, and wyth deeth that commeth of vermen of the erth.

C And when he had opened the fyft ſeale, I ſawe vnder the aultre * the ſoules of them that were kylled foꝛ the woꝛde of God, & foꝛ the teſtymony whych they had, & they cryed with a lowde voyce, ſayinge: Howe lõge taryeſt thou Loꝛde, holy & true, to iudge & to auẽge oure bloud on them yͭ dwell on yͤ erth? *Job.xxx.b. And longe whyte garmẽtes were geuen vnto euery one of them. And it was ſayde vnto them, that they ſhuld reſte yet foꝛ a lytle ſeaſon vntyll the nomber of theyꝛ felowes, and bꝛethꝛen, & of them that ſhulde be kylled as they were, were fulfylled.

And I behelde, when he had opened the ſyxt ſeale: & lo, ther was a great erthquake and the ſunne was as blacke as ſacke cloth made of heere. And the mone wexed all, euẽ as bloud, and the ſtarres of heauen fell vnto the erth, euẽ as a fygge tree caſteth from her vntymely fygges, when ſhe is ſhaken of a myghty wynde. And heauen vaniſſhed awaye, as a ſcroll when it is rolled to gether. And all mountaynes and yles, were moued out of theyꝛ places. And the kynges of the erth, and the gret men, and the ryche men, & the chefe captaynes, and the myghty men, and euery bondmã, and euery free man, hyd them ſelues in dennes, and in rockes of the hylles: * and ſayde to the hylles and rockes: fall on vs, and hyde vs from the pꝛeſence of hym that ſytteth on the ſeate, and from the wꝛath of the lambe: foꝛ the grete daye of hys wꝛath is come, and who is able to endure? *Oſee.x.b. Luke.xxiii.d.

The. vii. Chapter.

He ſeeth the ſeruauntes of God ſealed in theyꝛ foꝛheades out of all nacyons and people, whych though they ſuffre trouble, yet the lambe fedeth them, ledeth them to the fountaynes of lyuynge water, and God ſhall wype awaye all teares from ther eyes.

A And after that, I ſawe.iiii.aũgels ſtãde on the.iiii.corners of the erth holdynge the foure wyndes of the erth, yͭ yͤ wynde ſhulde not blowe on yͤ erth, nether on yͤ ſee, nether on eny tree. ✠ And I ſawe another aũgell aſcende from the ryſynge of the ſunne, whych had yͤ ſeale of the lyuynge God, & he cryed wyth a loude voyce to the foure Aũgels (to whom power was geuẽ to hurte yͤ erth & the ſee) ſayinge: hurt not the erth nether the ſee, nether the trees, tyll we haue ſealed the ſeruauntes of oure God in theyr forheades.

B And I hearde yͤ nõbre of thẽ whych were ſealed, ãd ther were ſealed an.C.&.xliiii.M. of all the trybes of the chyldren of Iſrael. Of the trybe of Iuda were ſealed.xii.M. Of the trybe of Ruben were ſealed.xii.M. Of the trybe of Gad were ſealed.xii.M. Of the trybe of Aſer were ſealed.xii.M. Of the trybe of Nephtalim were ſealed.xii.M. Of the trybe of Manaſſes were ſealed.xii.M. Of the trybe of Simeon were ſealed.xii.M. Of trybe of Leuy were ſealed.xii.M. Of the trybe of Iſacar were ſealed.xii.M. Of the trybe of zabulon were ſealed.xii.M. Of the trybe of Ioſeph were ſealed.xii.M. Of the trybe of BenIamin were ſealed.xii.M.

C After this I behelde, & lo, a gret multitude (whych nomã coulde nõbre) of all nacyõs & people, & tõges, ſtode before the ſeate, & before the lãbe, clothed with lõge white garmẽtes, & palmes in theyr handes, & cryed wyth a lowde voyce, ſayinge: ſaluacyon be aſcribed to hym that ſytteth vpõ the ſeate of oure God, and vnto the lãbe. And all the aungels ſtode in the cõpaſe of the ſeate, & of the elders & of the foure beaſtes, & fell before the ſeat on their faces, and worſhypped God, ſayinge, Amen: Bleſſynge & glory & wyſdome & thãkes, and honour, & power, & myght, be vnto oure God for euermore. Amen. ✠

D And one of the elders anſwered, ſayinge vnto me: what are theſe which are arayed in longe whyte garmẽtes, & whẽce came they? And I ſayde vnto hym: Lorde thou woteſt. And he ſayde to me: theſe are they, whych came out of great tribulacyon, and made their garmentes large, & made them white by the bloude of the lambe: therfore are they in the preſence of the ſeate of God & ſerue him daye & nyght in hys tẽple, & he that ſytteth in the ſeate wyll dwell amonge them. They ſhall honger no more, nether thyrſt, nether ſhall yͤ ſunne lyght on them, nether eny heate. For the lambe whych is in the myddes of the ſeate, ſhall fede them, & ſhall leade them vnto fountaynes of lyuynge water, & God ſhall wype awaye all teares from theyr eyes.

¶ The.viij.Chapter.

A And when he had opened the ſeuenth ſeale, ther was ſylẽce in heauen aboute the ſpace of halfe an houre. And I ſawe ✠(.vij.) aũgelles ſtãdynge before God, & to them were geuen ſeuẽ trompettes. And another aũgell came & ſtode before yͤ aultre, hauynge a golden ſenſer, & moch of odoures was geuen vnto him, that he ſhulde offre of the prayers of all ſaynctes vpon the golden aulter, whych was before the ſeate. And the ſmoke of the odoures whych cam of yͤ prayers of all ſaynctes aſcended vp before God B out of the Aungelles hande. And the Aungell toke the ſenſer, and fylled it with fyre of the aulter, and caſte it into the erth, and voyces were made, and thõdrynges and lyghtnynges, and erthquake.

And the ſeuen Aũgels whych had the ſeuẽ trompettes, prepared them ſelues to blowe. The fyrſt Aũgell blewe, & there was made hayle & fyre, which were myngled wͭ bloud: & they were caſt into yͤ erth: & yͤ thyrde parte ✠(of the erth was ſet on fyre, and the thyrde parte) of trees was burnt, and all grene graſſe was C brẽt. And yͤ ſecõde aũgell blewe: & as it were a gret mountayne burnynge wyth fyre was caſte into the ſee, and the thyrde parte of the ſee tourned to bloude, and the thyrde parte of the creatures whych had lyfe, dyed, & the thyrde parte of ſhyppes were deſtroyed.

And the thyrde Aungell blewe, & ther fell a gret ſtarre from heauen, burnynge as it were a lampe, & it fell into the thyrde parte of the ryuers, & into fountaynes of waters, & the name of the ſtarre is called wormwod. And the thyrde parte was turned to wormwod. And many mẽ dyed of the waters, becauſe they were made bytter. And the fourth Aungell blewe, and the thyrde parte of the ſunne was ſmytten, and the thyrde parte of the mone, and the thyrde parte of ſtarres: ſo that the thyrde part of them was darckned. And the daye was ſmytten, that the thyrde D parte of it ſhulde not ſhyne, and lykewyſe the nyght. And I behelde and herde an Aũgell flyinge thorowe the myddes of heauen, ſayinge wyth a lowde voyce: Woo, woo, to the inhabiters of the erth, becauſe of the voyces to come of the trompe of the thre Aũgels, whych were yet to blowe.

¶ The fyfth and ſyxt Aungell blowe theyr trompettes: the ſtarre falleth from heauen: the locuſtes come out of the ſmoke. The fyrſt wo is paſte: the foure aũgels that were bounde are loſed, and the thyrde parte of men is kylled.

A And the fyft Aungell blewe, and ſawe a ſtarre falle from heauen vnto the erth. And to hym was geuẽ the keye of the bottomleſſe pytt: And he opened the bottõleſſe pytt, & the ſmoke of the pytt aroſe as the ſmoke of a gret fornace. And the ſunne, and the ayer were darckned by the reaſon of the ſmoke of the pytt. And there came out of the ſmoke locuſtes vpon the erth, ⁊ vnto them was geuen power, as the ſcorpions of the erth haue power. And it was commaunded them, that they ſhulde not hurt the graſſe of the erth: nether eny grene thynge nether eny tree: but onely thoſe men which haue not the ſeale in theyr forheades. And to them was cōmaūded, that they ſhulde not kyll thē, but that they ſhulde be vexed. v. monethes, and theyr payne was as the payne yͤ commeth of a ſcorpiō, when he hath ſtonge a man. * And in thoſe dayes ſhall men ſeke deeth, ⁊ ſhall not fynde it, and ſhall deſyre to dye, ⁊ deeth ſhall fle from them.

* Eſa.ii.d. Oſee x.c. Luke.xxiii.d.

B And the ſymilitude of the lucuſtes was lyke vnto horſſes prepared vnto battayll, ⁊ on theyr heades were as it were crounes, lyke vnto golde, and theyr faces were as it had bene the faces of men. And they had heere as the heere of wemen. And theyr teethe were as yͤ teeth of lyons. And they had habbergions, as it were habbergions of yron. And the ſoūde of theyr wynges, was as the ſoūde of charrettes, when many horſſes rūne to gether to battayle. And they had tayles lyke vnto ſcorpiōs, and there were ſtynges in their tayles. And their power was to hurt mē. v. monethes. And they had a kynge ouer thē, whych is yͤ aungell of the bottōleſſe pytt, whoſe name in the Hebrewe tonge, is Abadon: but in the Greke tonge, Apollion yͤ is to ſaye: a deſtroyer. One wo is paſt, and beholde, two wooes come yet after thys.

C And the ſyxt Aungell blewe, and I herde a voyce from the. iiij. corners of the golden aultre, whych is before God, ſayinge to the ſyxt Aungell, which had the trōpe: Loſe the foure Aūgelles, which are boūde in the grete ryuer Euphrates. And the foure Aungelles were looſed, whych were prepared for an houre, for a daye, for a moneth, ⁊ for a yere, for to ſlee the. iii. part of men. And the nōbre of horſmen of warre were. xx. thouſande tymes. x. M. And I herde the nombre of them: ⁊ thus I ſawe yͤ horſes in a viſyon, ⁊ them yͤ ſate on them, hauynge fyrye habbergions of a Jacincte couloure, ⁊ brymſtone, ⁊ the heades of the horſes were as yͤ heades of lyons. D And out of their mouthes went forth fyre ⁊ ſmoke, ⁊ brymſtone. And of theſe thre was the thyrde part of mē kylled: that is to ſaye, of fyre, ſmoke, and brymſtone: which proceded out of the mouthes of them: For theyr power was in their mouthes ⁊ in theyr tayles, for theyr tayles were lyke vnto ſerpentes, ⁊ had heades, ⁊ with thē they dyd hurt: And the remnaunt of the men whych were not kylled by theſe plages, repēted not of the dedes of theyr handes that they ſhulde not worſhyppe deuyls, ⁊ ymages of golde and ſyluer, and braſſe, and ſtone, and of woode, whych nether can ſe, nether heare, nether go. Alſo they repēted not of theyr murther, and of theyr ſorcery, nether of theyr fornicacion, nether of theyr thefte.

¶ The. x. Chapter.

A AND I ſawe another myghtye aūgell come downe from heauen clothed wͭ a cloude, ⁊ the rayne bowe vpon his heed. And hys face as it were the ſunne, ⁊ his fete as it were pyllars of fyre, and he had in hys hande a lytell boke open, and he put his ryght fote vpon the ſee, ⁊ hys lyft fote on the erth. And cryed wyth a lowde voyce, as when a lyon roreth. And whē he had cryed, ſeuē thonders ſpake theyr voyces. And when the. vii. thōdres had ſpoken theyr voyces, I was about to wryte. And I herde a voyce from heauen, ſayinge vnto me: ſeale vp thoſe thynges whych the. vii. thondres ſpake, and wryte them not.

B And the Aūgell whych I ſawe ſtōde vpō the ſee, ⁊ vpon the erth, lyfte vp his hande to heauen, and ſware by hym that lyueth for euer more, whych created heauē, ⁊ the thynges that therin are * (And the erth and the thynges that therin are) and the ſee, ⁊ the thynges which therin are: yͤ there ſhulde be no lenger tyme but in the dayes of the voyce of the ſeuenth Aūgell, when he ſhall begyn to blowe: euen the myſtery of God ſhalbe fynyſſhed, as he preached by hys ſeruauntes the prophetes.

C And the voyce which I herde from heuē, ſpake vnto me agayne, ⁊ ſayde: * go ⁊ take the lytle boke which is open in the hande of the aungell whych ſtādeth vpon the ſee, and vpon the erth. And I wēt vnto the aungell, ⁊ ſayde to him: geue me the lytle boke, and he ſayde vnto me: take it, ⁊ eate it vp, ⁊ it ſhall D make thy belly bytter, but it ſhalbe in thy mouthe as ſwete as hony. * And I toke the lytle boke out of hys hande, ⁊ eate it vp, and it was in my mouth as ſwete as hony: ⁊ as ſone as I had eaten it, my belly was bytter. And he ſayde vnto me: thou muſt propheſye agayne amonge the people, and nacyōs, and tonges, and to many kynges.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

A AND then was geuē me a rede, lyke vnto a rodd, ⁊ it was ſayd vnto me. Ryſe and meate the temple of God, ⁊ the aulter, and them that worſhyppe therin, and the queer whych is wythin the temple, caſt out and meate it not for it is geuen vnto Gētyles, and the holy cytie ſhall they treade vnder fote. xlii. monethes. And I wyll geue power vnto my two wytneſſes, and they ſhall propheſye a thouſande, two hundred and. lx.

power ouer waters to turne thẽ to bloude,
& to ſmyte the erth wyth all maner plages,
as often as they wyll.

And when they haue fynyſhed theyr teſtimony,
the beaſt that cam out of the bottõleſſe

And they of the people & kynredes, & tõges,
& they of the nacyons, ſhall ſe theyr bodyes

dwell vpon the erth, ſhall reioyce ouer them,
and be glad, & ſhall ſende gyftes one to another,
for theſe two prophetes vexed them yͭ

And after .iii. dayes & an halfe, the ſprete

ſtode vp vpon theyr fete, and greate feare came vpon them whych ſawe them. And they herde a greate voyce from heauen, ſayinge vnto them. Come vp hyther. And they aſcẽded vp into heauẽ in a cloude, and theyr enemyes ſawe them. And the ſame houre was ther a great erthquake, and the tenth parte
of the cytie fell, and in the erthquake were ſlayne names of men ſeuen. M. and the remnaunt were feared, & gaue glory to the God of heauen. The ſeconde woo is paſt, and beholde,
the thyrde woo wyll come anone.

And the ſeuẽth Aũgell blewe, & ther were D made greate voyces in heauen, ſayinge: the kyngdome of thys worlde are oure Lordes,
and his Chryſtes, & he ſhall raygne for euer
☞ more ☞ (Amen.) And the .xxiiii. elders, whych
ſyt before God on theyr ſeates, fell vpon

lyghtenynges, and voyces, and thondrynges
and erthquake, and moche hayle.

❡The .xii. Chapter.

❡The ſeuenth Aungell bloweth hys trompet. There apeareth in heauen a woman clothed wyth the Sonne: Michael fyghteth wyth the dragon, whych perſecuteth the woman.

AND ther appered a gret wonder A in heauẽ: A womã clothed with the ſonne, & the mone vnder her fete, and vpon her heed a croune
of .xii. ſtarres. And ſhe was wͭ chylde, & cryed trauaylynge in byrth, & payned
redy to be delyuered. And ther appered
another wõder in heauẽ, for beholde, a gret
red dragon hauynge .vii. heddes, & ten hornes B & ſeuen crounes vpon hys heades: & hys
tayle drue the thyrde parte of the ſtarres
☞ (of heauen) and caſt them to the earth. ☞

And the dragon ſtode before the woman
whych was redy to be delyuered: for to deuoure
her chylde as ſone as it were borne.
And ſhe brought forth a man chylde, whych
ſhulde rule all nacyõs wyth a rodd of yron.
And her ſonne was takẽ vp vnto God, and to hys ſeate. And the woman fleed into wyldernes, where ſhe had a place, prepared of God, that they ſhulde fede her there a .M. ii.
hundred and .lx. dayes.

And ther was a great battayll in heauẽ, C Michael and hys aungels fought wyth the dragon, & the dragõ fought & his Aũgelles,
and preuayled not, nether was theyr place founde eny more in heauen. And the great dragon, that olde ſerpent, called the deuyll & Sathanas, was caſt out. Whych deceaueth
all the worlde. And he was caſt into the erth
and his aũgelles were caſt out alſo (with him)

And I hearde a lowde voyce ſayinge: in heauen is nowe made ſaluacyon and ſtrẽgth
& the kyngdome of oure God, and the power of hys Chryſt. For ☞ (the accuſer of oure brethren) ☞ is caſt downe, whych accuſed thẽ before (oure)
God daye and nyght. And they ouercame hym by the bloude of the lambe, and by the worde of theyr teſtimony, & they loued not theyr lyues vnto yͤ deeth. Therfore reioyce D heuens, & ye that dwell in them. Woo to the inhabiters of the erth, and of the ſee: for the deuyll is come downe vnto you, which hath great wrath, becauſe he knoweth yͭ he hath
but a ſhort tyme.

And when the dragõ ſawe yͭ he was caſte
vnto the erth, he perſecuted yͤ womã, whych brought forth the mã childe. And to the woman were geuen two wynges of a great Egle, yͭ ſhe myght flye into the wyldernes
into her place, where ſhe is norysſhed for a tyme,
tymes, & halfe a tyme, from the preſence
of the ſerpẽt. And the dragõ caſt oute of hys mouth water after the womã as it had bene
a ryuer, becauſe ſhe ſhulde haue bene caught
of the floude. And the erth holpe the womã,
and yͤ erth opened her mouth & ſwalowed
vp the ryuer, which the dragõ caſt out of hys mouth,

mouth. And the dragon was wroth wyth the woman: and went, & made warre wyth the remnaunt of hyr sede, whych kepe the cōmaundementes of God, and haue the testymony of Jesus Christe. And he stode on the see sande.

¶ The .xiii. Chapter.

¶ A beast ryseth out of the see wyth seuen heades and ten hornes. Another beast commeth out of the earth wyth two hornes.

A AND I sawe a beaste ryse out of the see, hauinge seuē heddes, & ten hornes, and vpon his hornes ten crounes, and vpon his heed, the name of blasphemy. And the beast whych I sawe, was lyke a catte of the mountayns, and hys fete were as the fete of a beare, & hys mouth as the mouth of a lyon. And the dragō gaue hym his power & hys seate, & gret auctorite: & I sawe one of his heedes as it were wounded to deeth, & hys dedly wounde was healed. And all the worlde wōdred at the beast, they worshypped the dragon, whych gaue power vnto the beast, and they worshypped the beast saying: who is lyke vnto the beast? who ys able to warre wyth hym?

B And there was geuen vnto hym a mouth, that spake great thynges & blasphemyes, & power was geuen vnto hym, to do .xlii. monethes. And he opened hys mouth vnto blasphemy agaynst God, to blaspheme hys name and hys tabernacle, & them that dwell in heauen. And it was geuē vnto hym to make warre wyth the Sayncte, and to ouercome

C them. And power was geuen hym ouer all kynred, and people, and tonge, and nacyon, and all y dwell vpon the erth worshypt him: whose names are not wrytten in the boke of lyfe of the lābe, whych was kylled from the begynnynge of the worlde. If eny man haue an eare let hym heare. He that leadeth into captyuite, shall go into captyuyte: * he y kylleth with a swearde, must be kylled with a swearde. Heare is the pacyence, & the fayth of the sayncte.

*Mat. xxvi. e Gene. ix. a.

And I behelde a nother beast cōmynge vp out of the erth, and he had two hornes lyke a lambe, & he spake as dyd the dragon. And he dyd all y the fyrste beast coulde do in hys presence, & he caused the erth, & them whych dwell therin, to worshyppe the fyrst beast, whose dedly woūde was healed. And he dyd gret wonders, so y he made fyre come doune from heauen in the syght of men. And deceaued them that dwelt on the erth, by the meanes of those sygnes whyche he had power to do in the syght of the beast, sayinge to them that dwelt on the erth: that they shulde make an ymage vnto the beast, which had the woūde of a swearde, and dyd lyue.

And he had power to geue a sprete vnto

D the ymage of the beast, & that the ymage of the beast shulde speake, & shulde cause, that as many as wolde not worshyppe y ymage of y beast, shulde be kylled. And he made all, both small & gret, ryche & poore, fre & bonde, to receaue a marke in theyr ryght handes or in theyr forheddes. And that no man myght by or sell, saue he that had the marke or the name of the beast, other the nōbre of hys name. Here is wysdome. Let hym that hath wytt, count the nōbre of the beast. For it is the nombre of a man, and hys nōbre is syxe hondred, threscore and syxe.

¶ The .xiiii. Chapter.

¶ The lambe standeth vpon the mount Syon, and the vndefyled cōgregacyon wyth hym. The aūgell exhorteth to the feare of God, and telleth of the fall of Babylon.

A AND I loked, and lo, a lābe stode on the moūt Syon, & with hym an C. & xliiii. thousande hauing hys (name and his) fathers name wrytte in theyr forheddes. And I herde a voyce frō heauen, as the sounde of many waters, & as the voyce of a gret thondre. And I herde the voyce of harpers harpynge with theyr harpes. And they songe as it were a newe songe, before y seate, & before the foure beastes, & the elders, & no man coulde learne y songe, but the hūdred & xliiii. M. whych were redemed frō the erth. These

B are they, whych were not defyled wt wemē, for they are virgyns. These folowe the lābe whyther soeuer he goeth. These were redemed frō men, beynge the fyrste frutes vnto God and to the lambe, and in their mouthes was foūde no gyle. For they are wyth oute spot before the trone of God.

And I sawe another aūgell flye in y myddes of heauē hauynge the euerlastynge Gospell, to preache vnto them y syt & dwell on the erth, & to all nacyons, kynreds, & tonges & people, sayinge wt a lowde voyce: * Feare God, & geue honour to hym, for the houre of his iudgement is come: and worshyp hym, y made heauen & erth, & the see, & fountaynes of water. And there folowed a nother aungell, sayinge: * Babylon is fallen is fallen that greate cytie, for she made all nacyons drncke of the wyne of her fornicacyon.

*Esa. xxi. c. Iere. li. a.

C And the thyrde aūgell folowed them sayinge wt a loude voyce: If any mā worshyppe the beast and his ymage, & receaue his marke in his forhed, or on hys hāde, y same shall drynke the wyne of y wrath of God, which is powred in the cup of hys wrath. And he shal be punysshed in fyre and brymstone, before the holy aungells, & before the lambe. And the smoke of their torment ascēdeth vp euermore. And they haue no rest daye nor nyght, whych worshyppe the beast and hys ymage, & whosoeuer receaueth the prynt of his name. Here is the pacyence of sayncte.

heare are they that kepe the commaūdemētes and the fayth of Jeſu.

And I hearde a voyce from heauen ſayinge vnto me: wryte. Bleſſed are the deed, which here after dye in the Lorde, euen ſo ſayth the ſprete: that they reſt frō theyr laboures, but theyr workes folowe them.

*And I loked, and beholde a whyte clowde, and vpon the clowde one ſyttynge lyke vnto the ſonne of man, hauynge on hys heed a golden crowne, and in hys hande a ſharpe ſykle. And another aungell came out of the temple, cryinge with a lowde voyce to hym yᵗ ſate on the clowde: *Thruſte in thy ſykle *Joel.iij.c.
D and repe, for thy tyme is come to repe, for the corne of the erth is rype. And he that ſate on the clowde, thruſt in hys ſycle on the earth, & the erth was reped.

And another aungell came out of the temple, which is in heauen, hauyng alſo a ſharpe ſykle. And another aūgell came out from the aultre, whych had power ouer fyre, and cryed with a lowde crye to hym that had the ſharpe ſykle, and ſayde: thruſt in thy ſharpe ſykle, and gaddre the cluſters of the erth, for her grapes are rype. And the aungell thruſt in hys ſharpe ſykle on the erth, & cut downe the grapes of the vyneyarde of the erth: and caſt thē into the great wynefate of the wrath of God, & the wynefate was trode without the cytie, & bloude came out of the fate, euen vnto the horſſe brydles, by yᵉ ſpace of a thouſande, and. vj. C. furlonges.

¶The.xv. Chapter.

A And I ſawe another ſygne in heauē greet & meruellous, ſeuen Aūgels, hauynge the ſeuē laſte plages, for in them is fulfylled the wrath of God. And I ſawe as it were a glaſſye ſee, myngled wᵗ fyre, & them yᵗ had gotten victory of the beaſt, and of hys ymage, and of the nōbre of hys name, ſtande on the glaſſye ſee, hauynge the harpes of God, & they ſange the ſonge of Moſes the ſeruaunt of God, & the ſonge of the lambe, ſayinge: Greet and maruelous are thy workes: *Lorde God almyghtye, iuſte and true are thy wayes, thou kynge of Saynctes. Who ſhall not feare yᵉ Lorde, & glorify thy name? For thou only arte holy, and all gentyls ſhall come & worſhyppe before the, for thy iudgementes are made manyfeſte.
*Eſa.xxi.c. Jere.li.a.

B And after that, I loked, and beholde, the temple of the tabernacle of teſtimony was open in heauen, and the ſeuen Aūgels came out of the temple which had the ſeuen plages, clothed in pure and bryght lynnen, and hauynge theyr breſtes gyrded wyth golden gerdels. And one of the fowre beaſtes gaue vnto the ſeuen Aungels ſeuē goldē vyalles full of the wrath of God, whych lyueth for euermore. And the temple was full of the ſmoke of the glory of God & of hys power, and no man was able to entre into the temple, tyll the ſeuē plages of the ſeuen Aūgels were fulfylled.

¶The.xvi. Chapter.

¶The Aungels powre out theyr vyalles full of wrath.

A And I herde a great voyce out of the temple ſayinge to the ſeuen aūgels: go your wayes, powre out your vyalles of wrath vpō the erth. And the fyrſt Aungell went, and powred out hys vyall vpon the erth, & there fell a noyſome, and a ſore botche vpon the men whych had the marke of the beaſt, & vpon them whych worſhypped hys ymage. And the ſecōd Aungell ſhed out hys vyall vpon the ſee, and it turned as it were into the bloude of a deed man: and euery lyuynge thynge dyed in the ſee. And the thyrde Aūgell ſhed out hys vyall vpon the ryuers and fountaynes of waters, & they turned to bloude. And I herde an Aūgell ſaye: Lorde, B whych arte and waſt, thou arte ryghteous and holy, becauſe thou haſt geuen ſoche iudgementes, for they ſhed out the bloude of ſainctes, and prophetes, & therfore haſt yᵘ geuē them bloude to drynke: for they are worthy. And I herde another ſaye: euen ſo Lord God almyghtye: true and ryghteous are thy iudgementes.

And the fourth Aungell powred out hys vyall on the ſunne, & power was geuē vnto him to vexe men wyth heat of fyre. And the men raged in greet heate: & ſpake euyll of the name of God, which hath power ouer thoſe plages, & they repēted not of theyr euyll dedes, to geue hym glory. And the fyft Aūgell powred out hys vyall vpon the ſeate of the beaſte, & his kyngdome wexed darke, & they gnewe theyr tōges for ſorowe, and blaſphemed the God of heauē for ſorowe & payne of theyr ſores, and repented not of theyr dedes.

And yᵉ ſyxt Aūgell powred out his vyall C
vpon the greet ryuer Euphrates, & the water dryed vp, yᵗ the wayes of the kynges of the eaſt ſhulde be prepared. And I ſawe thre vncleane ſpretes lyke frogges come out of the mouth of yᵉ dragon, & out of the mouth of the beaſt, & out of the mouth of the falſe Prophete. For they are the ſpretes of deuyls, wor[illegible]racles, to go out vnto the kynges of the erth and of the whole world, to gather them to the batayle of the great daye of God almyghtye. *Beholde, I come as a *Mat.xxiiij.d

and men ſe hys fylthyneſſe. And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrue tonge Armagedon.

And the ſeuenth aungell powred out his vyall into the ayre. And ther cam a greate voyce out of heauen frõ the ſeate, ſayinge, it is done. And ther folowed, voyces, thõdrynges, and lyghtenynges, & ther was a greate erthquake, ſuche as was not ſence men were vpon the erth, ſo myghty an erthquake & ſo great. And the great cytie was deuyded in to thre partes, and the cyties of all nacyons fell. And greate Babylon came in remembraunce before God, to geue vnto hyr yͤ cup of the wyne of the fearcenes of hys wrathe. Euery yle alſo fled awaye, and yͤ mountaynes were not founde. And ther fell a greate hayle (as it had bene talentes) out of heauen vpõ the men, and the men blaſphemed God: becauſe of the plage of the hayle, for it was great, and the plage of it ſore.

A And ther came one of the ſeuen aũgels, whiche had the ſeuẽ vyalles: and talked with me, ſayenge vnto me: come, I wyll ſhewe vnto the, the iudgemẽt of the great whore that ſytteth vpon many waters, wyth whome haue commytted fornycacyon the kynges of the erthe, and the inhabyters of the erth are dronken wt the wyne of hyr fornicacyon. And the ſpreete caryed me awaye in to the wyldernes. And I ſawe a woman ſyt vpon a roſe colored beaſt, full of names of blaſphemye, whyche had ſeuẽ heades and ten hornes. B And the woman was arayed in purple & roſe coloure, and decked with golde, precious ſtone, and pearles, and had a cup of golde in her hande, full of abhominacyons and fylthynes of her fornicacyõ. And in her forheade was a name wrytten, a miſtery, greet Babylon the mother of whordom and abhominacyons of the erth. And I ſawe the womã dronken with the bloude of ſayncte s, and wyth the bloude of the wytneſſes of Ieſu. And when I ſawe her: I wõdred with great meruayle.

And the aũgell ſayde vnto me: wherfore marueyleſt thou? I wyll ſhewe the the myſtery of the womã, and of the beaſt that beareth her, whych hath ſeuen heades and ten hornes. The beaſt that thou ſeeſt, was, and is not, and ſhall aſcẽde out of yͤ bottomleſſe pyt, and ſhall go into perdicyon, & they that dwell on yͤ erth ſhall wondre (whoſe names are not wrytten in the boke of lyfe from the begynnynge of the worlde) when they beholde the beaſt yͤ was and is not. And here is a mynde that hath wyſdome.

C The ſeuen heades are ſeuẽ mountaynes, on whych the w[illegible]an ſytteth, they are alſo ſeuẽ kynges. Fyue are fallẽ, and one is, and another is not yet come. And when he commeth, he muſt cõtinewe a ſhorte ſpace. And the beaſt that was, and is not, is euen the eyght, and is one of the ſeuen, and ſhall go into deſtruccyon. And the ten hornes whych thou ſaweſt are ten kynges whych haue receaued no kyngdom as yet, but ſhal receaue power as kynges at one houre wyth the beaſt. Theſe haue one mynde, and ſhall geue theyr power and ſtrength vnto the beaſt. Theſe ſhall fyght wyth the lambe, and the lambe ſhall ouercome thẽ. *For he is Lord of Lordes, and kynge of kynges, and they that are on hys ſyde, are called, and choſen, and faythfull. *i.Tim.vi.c.

D And he ſayde vnto me: the waters whych thou ſaweſt, where yͤ whore ſytteth, are people and folke, & nacyõs, and tonges. And the ten hornes, which thou ſaweſt vpon yͤ beaſt, are they that ſhall hate the whore, and ſhall make her deſolate and naked, & ſhall eate her fleſhe, & burne her with fyre. For God hath put in theyr hertes to fulfyll hys wyll, & to do with one conſent, for to geue their kyngdome vnto the beaſt, vntyll the wordes of God be fulfylled. And the woman whych thou ſaweſt, is that great cytie, whiche raygneth ouer the kynges of the erth.

¶ The louers of the worlde are ſory for the fall of Babylon, but they that be of God haue cauſe to reioyſe for her deſtruccyon.

A And after that, I ſawe another aungell come from heauẽ, hauynge gret power, and the erthe was lyghtened wyth hys bryghtnes. And he cryed myghtely with a ſtronge voyce, ſayinge: *Great Babylon is fallen, is fallen, and is become the inhabitacyon of deuyls, and the holde of all fowle ſpretes, and a cage of all vncleane and hatefull byrdes, for all nacyons haue dronken of the wyne of the wrath of her fornicacyon. And the kynges of the earth haue commytted fornicacyon wyth her, and the merchauntes of the erth are wexed ryche of the aboundaunce of her pleaſures. *Eſa.xxi.c. Iere.l.c.

B And I herde another voyce from heauẽ, ſaye, come awaye from her my people, yͤ ye be not partakers of her ſynnes, and yͤ ye receaue not of her plages. For her ſynnes are gone vp to heauẽ, & God hath remẽbred her wyckednes. Rewarde her euẽ as ſhe rewarded you, & geue her double accordinge to her workes. And powre in double to her in the ſame cuppe which ſhe fylled vnto you. And as moche as ſhe glorifyed her ſelfe and lyued wantõly, ſo moche powre ye in for her of punyſhement and ſorowe, C for ſhe ſayde in her ſelfe: *I ſyt beynge a quene, & am no wydowe, and ſhall ſe no ſorowe. *Eſa.xlvii.b. Therfore ſhall her plages come in one daye, deeth, & ſorowe and honger, & ſhe ſhalbe brent wi[illegible] for ſtrõge is yͤ Lorde God which ſhall [illegible] her.

And the kynges of the erth ſhall be wepe
her and wayle ouer her, which haue cõmytted fornicacyõ with her, ⁊ haue lyued wantonly with her, when they ſhall ſe the ſmoke
of her burnynge, ⁊ ſhall ſtande a farre of, for

And euery ſhyppe gouerner, and all they
that occupied ſhyppes, and ſhypmen whych worke in the ſee, ſtode a farre of, and cryed,
when they ſawe the ſmoke of her burnynge, ſayinge: what cytie is lyke vnto thys greet citie? And they caſt duſt on their heddes, and *Iere.li.b. cryed wepinge, ⁊ waylinge, ⁊ ſayde: *Alas,

ryche all that had ſhyppes in the ſee, by the reaſon of her coſtlynes, for at one houre is ſhe made deſolate.

Reioyce ouer her thou heauẽ, and ye holy Apoſtles and Prophetes: for God hath geuen your iudgement on her. And a myghty aungell toke vp a ſtone lyke a greet mylſtone
and caſt it into the ſee, ſayinge: with ſuche violence ſhall that great cytie Babylon be G caſt, and ſhalbe founde no more. And the

for thy marchauntes were the greet men of the erth. And with thyne inchauntment were deceaued all nacyõs: and in her was founde the bloud of the Prophetes, and of ẏ ſayntes,
and of all that were ſlayne vpon the erth.

¶The.xix.Chapter.

¶Prayſe is geuen vnto God for iudgynge the whore, and for auengynge the bloude of hys ſeruauntes. The Aungell wyll not be worſhypped. The foules and byrdes are called to the ſlaughter.

AND after that, I herde a greate voyce A of moche people in heauẽ ſayinge: Alleluia. Saluacyon ⁊ glory ⁊ honour ⁊ power be aſcribed to the Lorde our God, for true and ryghteous are hys iudgementes,
for he hath iudged the gret whore which dyd corrupt the erth with her fornicacyõ, ⁊ hath auenged the blood of hys ſeruauntes of hys hãde. And agayne they ſayde: Alleluia. And ſmoke roſe vp for euermore. And the .xxiiij.
elders, and the .iiij. beſtes fell downe, ⁊ worſhypped God that ſate on the ſeate, ſayinge:
Amen, Alleluia. And a voyce came out of the ſeat, ſayinge: prayſe our Lorde God all ye that are hys ſeruauntes, and ye that feare
hym both ſmall and great.

And I herde ẏ voyce of moche people euen
as the voyce of many waters, ⁊ as ẏ voyce
of ſtronge thõdrynges ſayinge: Alleluia, for B
the Lord our God omnipotẽt raygneth. Let vs be glad and reioyce, and geue honoure to him, for the mariage of the lambe is come,
and hys wyfe made her ſelfe ready. And to her was graunted, that ſhe ſhulde be arayed
with pure and goodly raynes. For ẏ raynes is ẏ ryghtewesnes of ſayntes. And he ſayde unto me, wryte, * happy are they whyche *Mat.xxii.a. Luke.xiiii.a.
are called vnto the ſupper of the lambes ma-riage. And he ſayde vnto me: theſe are ẏ true ſayinges of God. And I fell at hys fete, to worſhyppe hym. And he ſayde vnto me: ſe ẏ do it not. For I am thy felow ſeruaũt, ⁊ one of thy brethrẽ, euen of them ẏ haue the teſtimony of Jeſus. Worſhyppe God. For the teſtimony of Jeſus is the ſprete of propheſy.

And I ſawe heauẽ opẽ, ⁊ beholde, a whyte C
horſſe: ⁊ he ẏ ſat vpon him was called fayth-
full ⁊ true, ⁊ in ryghtewesnes he doth iudge ⁊ make battayle. His eyes were as a flãme of fyre: ⁊ on his heed were many crownes: ⁊ he had a name wrytten, that no mã knewe but he hym ſelfe. * And he was clothed with a Esa.lxiii.
veſture dipt in bloude, ⁊ his name is called ẏ worde of God. And ẏ warriers which were in heauẽ, folowed him vpon whyte horſſes, clothed wyth whyte ⁊ pure raynes: and out of hys mouthe wente a ſharpe two edged ſwerde, that wyth it he ſhulde ſmyte the hethen. And he ſhall rule them with a rodde of D yron, and he trode ẏ wynefat of fearſnes and wrath of almyghty God. And hath on hys veſture and on hys thygh a name wrytten:
Kyng of Kynges, and Lorde of Lordes.

And I ſawe an aũgell ſtãde in the ſonne,
and he cryed with a loude voyce, ſayinge: to all ẏ fowles that flye by the myddes of heauen: come and gather youre ſelues to gether unto

vnto the ſupper of the great God, ẏ ye maye eate fleſſhe of kynges, and the fleſſhe of hye captaynes, and the fleſſhe of myghty men, & the fleſſhe of horſſes, and of them that ſyt on them, and the fleſſhe of all free mē and bonde men and of ſmall and gret. And I ſawe the beaſt, and the kynges of the earth, and their warriers gathered together to make batayl agaynſt hym that ſat on the horſſe, and agaynſt hys ſoudyers.

And the beaſt was taken, and with hym that falſe prophet that wrought myracles before hym, with whych he deceaued them that receaued the beaſtes marke, and them that worſhypped hys ymage. Theſe both were caſt quycke into a ponde of fyre burnynge with brymſtome: and the remnaunt were ſlayne wyth the ſwearde of hym that ſat vpon the horſſe, whych ſwearde proceaded out of his mouth, and all ẏ foules were fulfylled wyth theyr fleſſhe.

A AND I ſawe an Aungell come downe from heauen, hauynge the kaye of the bottomleſſe pyt, and a greate chayne in his hāde. And he toke the dragon that olde ſerpente, whych is the deuyll & Satanas, & he bounde him a thouſande yeres: and caſt him into the bottomleſſe pyt, and he ſhutte hym vp, and ſet a ſeale on him, that he ſhulde deceaue the people nomore, tyll the thouſande yeres were fulfylled. And after that he muſt be loſed for a lytell ſeaſon.

B And I ſawe ſeates, and they ſat vpō thē, & iudgement was geuen vnto them: and I ſawe the ſoules of them that were beheaded for the wytnes of Jeſu, and for the worde of God: & which had not worſhipped the beaſt, nether his ymage, nether had takē his marke vpon their forheades, or in their handes: and they lyued, and raygned with Chriſt a. M. yere: but the other of the deed men lyued not agayne, vntyll the thouſande yere were fynyſſhed. This is ẏ fyrſt reſurreccyon. Bleſſed and holy is he, that hath parte in the firſt reſurreccyon: For on ſuche ſhall the ſeconde deeth haue no power, but they ſhalbe ẏ Preſtes of God and of Chriſt, and ſhall raygne with him a thouſande yere.

C * And when ẏ thouſande yeres are expyred, Satan ſhalbe lowſed out of hys preſon and ſhall go out to deceaue the people, which are in the foure quarters of the erth, Gog & Magog, to gather thē together to battayle, whoſe nombre is as the ſonde of the ſee: and they went vp in the playne of the erth: & cōpaſſed the tentes of the ſayntes about, & the beloued citie. A[illegible]re came downe frō God out of heauen, and deuoured thē: and the deuyll that deceaued thē, was caſt into a lake of fyre and brymſtome, where the beaſt and the falſe prophetes ſhalbe tormented daye and nyght for euermore.

And I ſawe a great whyte ſeate, a[illegible] him that ſate on it, from whoſe face fleed [illegible]waye both ẏ erth and heauen, and their place was nomore founde. D And I ſawe the deed, both gret and ſmall ſtonde before God: And the bokes were opened, and another boke was opened, whych is the boke of lyfe, & the deed were iudged of thoſe thynges whych were wrytten in the bokes accordynge to their dedes: and the ſee gaue vp her deed which were in her, and deeth and hell delyuered vp the deed, whych were in them: & they were iudged euery mā accordynge to his dedes. And deeth and hell were caſt into the lake of fyre. This is the ſeconde deeth. And whoſoeuer was not founde wrytten in the boke of lyfe, was caſt into the lake of fyre.

A AND I ſawe a newe heauē and a newe earth. For the fyrſt heauen, and the fyrſt earth were vanyſhed awaye, and ther was nomore See. ✠ And I John ſawe that holy cytie, newe Jeruſalem come downe from God out of heauen, prepared as a bryde garnyſſhed for her huſbāde. And I herde a greate voyce out of heauē ſayinge beholde, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he wyll dwell wyth them. And they ſhall be his people, and God him ſelfe ſhalbe wyth them, and be theyr God. B * And God ſhall wype awaye all teares frō theyr eyes. And there ſhalbe nomore deeth, nether ſorowe, nether cryenge, nether ſhall ther be eny more payne, for the olde thynges are gone. And he that ſate vpō the ſeate, ſayde: * Beholde, I make all thynges newe. ✠ And he ſayde vnto me: wryte, for theſe wordes are faythfull and true.

Esa.lxv.d. and.lxvi. 2.Pet.iii.

*Esa.xliii.d. 2.Cor.v.d.

And he ſayde vnto me: it is done, I am Alpha and Omega, the begynnynge & the ende. I wyll geue to him that is a thyrſt, of the well of ẏ water of lyfe, fre. He that ouercommeth ſhall enherete all thynges, and I wyll be hys God, and he ſhalbe my ſonne. C But the fearfull and vnbeleuynge, and the abhominable, & murdrers, & whoremōgers, and ſorcerers, and ydolaters, and all lyars ſhall haue their parte in the lake which burnyth wyth fyre and brymſtome, whych is the ſeconde death.

And there came vnto me one of ẏ ſeuē angels which had the ſeuen vyalles full of the ſeuē laſt plages: & talked wyth me ſayinge: come hyther, I will ſhewe the the b[illegible] the lambes wyfe. And he caryed me a[illegible] ſpirete to a great and an hye mountayne, and he ſhewed me the great cytie holy Jeruſalē, deſcendynge out of heauen from God: D hauynge the bryghtnes of God. And her ſhynynge was lyke vnto a ſtone moſte precious, euen lyke a Jaſper cleare as Criſtall: & had walles great & hye, & had.xii. gates and at the gates.xii. Aungels: and names wrytten, whych are the names of the.xii. trybes of Iſraell: on the Eaſt parte.iii. gates, and on the Northſyde.iii. gates, and towardes the South.iii. gates, and frō the weſt thre gates, and the wall of the cytie had.xii. foundacyons: and in them the twelue names of the lambes.xii. apoſtles.

E And he that talked with me, had a goldē reede to meaſure the cytie wyth all and the gates therof & the wall therof. And the cytie was buylt.iiii. ſquare, and the lēgth was as large as the bredth, and he meaſured the cytie with the (golden) rede.xii. M. furlonges: and the length & the bredth, and the heyth of it, were equall. And he meaſured the wall therof, an.cxliiii. cubytes: the meaſure that the aungell had, was after the meaſure that mā vſeth. And the buyldynge of the wall of it was of Jaſper. And the cytie was pure golde lyke vnto cleare glaſſe, and the foundacyons of the wall of the cytie were gar- F nyſhed with all maner of precious ſtones. The fyrſt foundacyon was Jaſpis, the ſeconde Saphyre, the thyrde a Calcedony, the fourth an Emeralde, the fyft Sardonix, the ſyxte Sardeos, the ſeuenth Chryſolite, the eyght Berall, the.ix. a Topas, the tenth a Cruſopraſos, the eleuenth a Jacynte, ỹ twelueth an Amatiſt.

The twelue gates were twelue pearles, euery gate was of one pearle, and the ſtrete of the cytie was pure golde, as thorowe ſhynynge glaſſe. And I ſawe no temple therin. G For the Lorde God almyghty and ỹ lambe are the temple of it. * And the cytie hath no nede of the ſonne, nether of the mone to lyghten it. For the bryghtnes of God dyd lyght it, and the lambe was ỹ lyght of it. And the people whych are ſaued ſhall walke in the lyght of it. And the kynges of the earth ſhall brynge theyr glory (And honoure) vnto it. * And the gates of it are not ſhut by daye. For there ſhalbe no nyght there. (And into it ſhall they brynge the glory & honoure of the nacions.) And there ſhall enter into it none vncleane thynge, nether whatſoeuer worketh abhominacyon or maketh lyes: but they only whych are wrytten in the lambes boke of lyfe.

¶ The ryuer of the water of lyfe, the [illegible] and lyght of the cytie of God. The Lorde geueth euer hys ſeruauntes warnynge of thynges to come. [illegible] Aungell wyll not be worſhypped. To the [illegible] of God maye nothynge be added nor [illegible].

A And he ſhewed me a pure ryuer of water of lyfe, clere as Cryſtall: procedinge out of the ſeate of God, and of the lambe. In the myddes of the ſtrete of it, and of ether ſyde of the ryuer, was ther woode of lyfe: whych bare twelue maner of frutes: and gaue frute euery moneth: and the leues of the wood ſerued to heale the people wyth all. And ther ſhalbe no more curſſe, but the ſeate of God and the lambe ſhalbe in it: and hys ſeruauntes ſhall ſerue him. B And they ſhall ſe his face, and his name ſhalbe in their forheddes. * And there ſhall be no nyght there, and they nede no candle, nether lyght of the ſunne: for the Lord God geueth them lyght, and they ſhall raygne for euermore.
